Bad Sound—Is synchronized murder

By JACK ALICIA

Of late we have received so many letters from exhibitors in various stages of irritation, heated resentment, ire and constant unrest that we have come at least to the temporary conclusion that they are entitled to speedy relief and consideration, now that the talkers are with us permanently, from the exchange man that sends them prints and records unfit for use. Talking pictures are a little bit of hotsy totsy for the exhibitor when they are clicking mechanically and everything is running O.K. but, when in place of ordinary even projection you have a constant rain storm on the screen and instead of pleasant voices and tuneful melody you get from the loud speaker a symphony of squeaks, scratches and air pockets, the effect upon the customer regarding his future and continued patronage is apt to be most discouraging for the exhibitor.

The indictment before us that confronts the exchange man aforementioned is rather long and consists of several counts. Here are a few: Oily prints—Scratched prints—Prints out of sink—Poor patches—Broken sprocket holes—Old and worn out records, and divers and sundry other abuses too numerous to mention. The above is inserted as hearsay evidence merely as a matter of record. Seriously, here is a situation that no doubt is a grave problem to nine out of ten small town houses. It is a big enough thought to desire the immediate attention and consideration of every sales manager and supervising exchange executive in the business. In former days an old print was bad enough but under the new order of things bad sound from either print or records is nothing short of synchronized murder.

4 Pictures Now in Work at Columbia Studio—Preparing Others

Two roadshow pictures, one from a David Belasco stage play and the other a Jack Holt starring vehicle, "Hell's Island," head the list of 24 features already scheduled for production by Columbia in 1930. Four of the pictures now are in work, while an equal number awaits easting.

In the Interior five have RCA and the rest are either DeForest or Pacent," declared Pezet.

To Keep Unwired Houses Open

WHAT strikes the big men of the industry as a matter of secondary importance, the supply of silent pictures for the houses which are not yet wired, is actually, to the halls concerned, a question of life or death. The big circuit houses and the leading cinemas throughout the country are running talkies; those of the next rank of importance are installing equipment as quickly as ever they can. What remains? A tremendous number of small houses which have not the slightest prospect of being able to afford the expense of a high-class equipment. What we have to recognize is that these halls are really entitled to continue. Their proprietors form the majority of the C.E.A. membership, and they are essentially the people who need its protection most. Until they can be provided with sound installations of good quality and low price they must run on silent films.

Screen Has Gained, Not Lost, By the Addition of Sound

The vast majority of intelligent observers, who go to the movies regularly and appreciate them, will now cheerfully concede that not only has the screen lost nothing by the addition of sound but it has gained a great deal and stands to gain a great deal more. Hollywood has had to work terrifically hard to achieve this recognition, and be it said that Hollywood has worked with thoroughly unexpected and uncharacteristic intelligence.

YOU know, a good number of years ago if some fellow made a name for himself in a big way or other, the community or other generally named a cigar, a street or avenue after the dear fellow—but providing modern times with its infinite Fannie Brice, in the U. A. “Be Yourself,” pitches Otto Kahn the berry in the form of labelling a song after him, titled “Is Something the Matter With Otto Kahn?” .......Monte Blue and Joe E. Brown, two of Hollywood's favorite sons, are still lingering around Jimmy Walker’s city.

Again she is going to blossom forth, but not on the screen this time, Marilyn Miller, that gorgeous morsel, will attend the premiere of F. N.'s “No, No, Nanette” at the Strand, tomorrow .......Vina Delmar has been corralled by Warners to write originals for Vitaphone specials and will shortly shoe off for the Coast.

Two Mack Sennett comedies are playing on Broadway with indefinite run pictures, “Scotch” with Devan and Clyde is at the Geo. M. Cohan with “Blaze O' Glory” and “Uppercut O'Brien” with Andy Clyde and Harry Gribbon is doing its stuff with “Party Girl” at the Gaiety. Harold J. Mirisch, formerly with the Warner home office, has been transferred to the Metropolitan division under Harry L. Charnas, general manager. Mirisch will work on booking for Warner houses.

Eddie Dowling, whose second picture, “Blaze O' Glory” is the attraction at the Geo. M. Cohan, is one of Rhode Island’s favorite sons. Little Rhody, the smallest state in this great big land of ours, hasn’t fallen down on the job of producing acting material, providing Geo. M. Cohan, Ruth Clifford, Jane Winton, Kate Price, Rae Samuels, etc., etc., etc.

One of the snappiest house organizations which Uncle Sam’s mailmen bring into our office with regularity is “Now,” edited by Eddy Eddles, with K W. Calvin as ye associate ed. Frank Whitbeck, director of advertising for West Coast Theaters, whose publication it is, keeps a watchful eye over the works.

George K. Arthur has left St. Louis and now is on the last lap of a vaudeville tour upon completion of which he is scheduled to trek to Europe. The dashy George last appeared in M-G-M’s “Chasing Rainbows.”

Word penetrates Times Square from Paramount’s Long Island studio that in “Was Her Man” is the new title’s name, Gilda Gray’s two-reel talker produced as “Frankie and Johnny.” Dudley Murphy did the megaphoning .......Harry Green, who plays the title role in “The Kibitzer,” will send his voice over the ether via the Columbia system Saturday night during the Paramount-Publix hour.

Six Roadshows Among Tiffany’s Output for 1930

A Cinema Opera
—and other comment
By JACK ALICOATB

M. ASCAGNI, best known as the composer of “Cavalleri Rusticana” has just announced from Rome that his future efforts will be directed toward the writing of an operatic score exclusively for the cinema. It was only recently that the maestro first heard the talkers in Paris and immediately became impressed with the possibilities of this international medium for quickly reaching masses. This is but another straw indicating rather definitely in which direction the amusement wind is blowing. Nothing can now stop the invention of sound from revolutionizing the art, industry or business of amusing the peoples of the world.

Stepping Out

Once more the industry steps right up into the front row to be counted along with the press and radio as an important influence on the minds, habits and sentiments of a collective nation. Several representative picture folk including Gov. Carl Milliken and Abram Myers have been invited by Rollins Institute of Winter Park, Florida to attend its second annual institute of statesmanship and sit round the table for the pow wow on “The Role of the Movie in Public Opinion.” Next to the Williamstown conference each Spring this is probably the most formidable annual forum for the discussion of world’s problems and public opinion in America. A fine and dignified tribute to Six roadshows, “Journey’s End,” “Resurrection,” “Mamba,” “The Lost Zeppelin,” “Party Girl” and a South Sea Technicolor talker, top the production schedule of Tiffany for 1930. It is announced by Executive Vice-President Grant L. Cook. In addition to the Tiffany franchise holders there are 2,000 Tiffany franchise holders in 4 months.

Trend of Amusement Shares Last Year Was Favorable by Comparison

Motion picture stocks gave a relatively good account of themselves in 1929, according to financial statistics of the year as compared to other lines of business. Although film shares, like all others, joined in the collapse during the latter part of the year, they came through the period very creditably considering the additional bearish factors that descended on this group as a result of several unfortunate factors not applying to the industry in general. Despite this fact, the average depreciation in motion picture stocks was less than the decrease in such basic industries as foods, automobiles, motor equipment, rubber.

The injunction is based on an action apparently clears the field for holders of Patent papers.

At the W. E. office it was pointed out

Perfectly clear that Show of Shows is greatest picture in History. Strand Theatre absolutely inadequate to accommodate Public Demand. I have following Theatres—Empire 1800 Seats. Syracuse 2200 Seats. Brighton 1800 Seats. All are DeLuxe Houses on Salina Street. Will play picture simultaneous run as Strand on percentage. Your own terms. Four houses at once will provide record gross and sensational publicity in Picture History.

Delighted know Show of Shows in your opinion most outstanding picture history industry. Demand prints this attraction such that even with two laboratories working twenty-four hours each day it is utterly impossible for us to supply present commitments or national demand. Appreciate your constructive proposal play this production three houses Syracuse together with Strand Theatre Day and Date. But regret our inability to take advantage of it. Regards.

HARRY BUXBAUM, address Fox, believes his lad Jack, age nine, holds the world's record for seeing "The Cock-Eyed World." The youngster has gazed at this Raoul Walsh production seven times and still is looking for more showings. Herbert Rawlinson got a big hand from the critical newspaper boys and gals when he opened in "City Haul" the other night. Herb plays a mayor, no less.

P. A. Parsons, who left his desk at Pathe the other day, was head man at a party given by the home office crew. As a parting shot P. A. was presented with a small wagon load of fishing tackle. Send us some Cod, will ya, P. A.?

Ben Dirsacli is again back in England. At Bradford, a small provincial town, the picture was given a try-out and clicked, thus proving Ben's stuff still goes there. Well, they dropped the 'Mark,' no not in Germany, but the Warners cut off the front label of its two Strand houses in N. Y. and Bklyn.

RKO's scenario editor in the east, Kay Brown, is dashing through final consideration of a number of scripts before making her cross-country trip to Hollywood today. Kay, they say, is the youngest scenario editor in the biz. You know, some pictures are so good that they have em standing five deep outside. Well, Maurice Chevalier in Paramount's "Love Parade" is taking care of standees. They've built an extra row of seats on the mezzanine at the Criterion for the gang.

Yes, we knew he couldn't hold out, but at that, bet it's going to be some act. Abraham (Burney) Bernstein, of Publix, and Lilian Joan Strauss recently got that way sufficiently to let it go down in ink that they're engaged.

Sylvia Kossach is celebrating her first year spent in writing press books for Columbia—if people do celebrate such anniversaries. Roxy undoubtedly is happy over the fact that "Christina" drew a line which extended 'way pass the Cathedral towards Sixth Ave. before noon yesterday.

HOW MANY WIRED HOUSES ARE THERE IN THE COUNTRY?

Complete information on wired theaters throughout the world is but one of the many features of the forthcoming 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK.

EDDIE QUILLAN, one of the few picture stars who does not take himself too seriously, airmails us his impressions of a typical start of a typical day for a busy movie pit? chur actor. Eddie quips as follows:

He wakes up at 8 a.m. and dis locates jaw with a prodigious yawn. Crawls out on the wrong side of the bed.

Nearby freezes to death dressing in the cold, damp morning air. (Query: Is it possible that the air is ever cold and damp in Hollywood?)

Gets shirt outside of suspenders. Loses collar button under dresser. Is forced to shave with a dull blade.

Realizes that he has but 20 minutes to make the studio by 9 o'clock. Gulp down hot coffee, burns mouth, and gets most of the fluid down his wind-pipe. Rushes out to automobile and spends ten minutes trying to start it.

En route to studio, runs out of gas. Tramps one-half mile to filling station.

Finally arrives at studio and spends five minutes looking for a place to park.

Enters studio and learns the call has been changed from 9:00 to 10:30.

Is taken to an asylum in a straight-jacket and labeled 12929 with a long term contract.

Remember When—

Jack Fuld, handling the publicity on the murder thriller, "Jim the Pen- nian," put it over as a fashion show. Jack grabbed an advance story from the press book telling all about the costumes worn in the British story, and opened in Boston by selling Filene & Son, the department store, the idea of a fashion show. They featured a big display window, and said the picture was "the greatest fashion show that ever visited Bos ton." And the picture went over big—just that way.

Small Theaters Best Suited For Presentation of Talkers

HERBERT COREY, daily newspaper columnist, recently made the following prophecy: "The day of the big movie houses is over. The talkies have killed them." And he continued, "Think it over. A talkie in a cathedral is a mess. Such tremendous volume is required that sensitive persons withe and go away to the speak-easies. Whereas in a small house the tone production can be controlled until it becomes a pure delight." There's a hint of encouragement in those words for the small theater owner, who has a natural advantage to begin with when he gets ready to wire for sound.

Canned Music Will Bring About Universal Artistic Education

The traditional concert stage, as we have enjoyed it in the past is doomed. The advent of the sound film is an established fact and film music is going to substitute for individual musical artists in the immediate future. There is no escape from that, regardless of whether the average musician wants it or not. This is an evolutionary move which everyone has to accept, as it is in its essentials a means of universal artistic education. The poorer classes who had no chances to pay high concert admission prices will have by this new turn of things an opportunity to hear an opera or a musical comedy, a symphony concert or a celebrated virtuoso for fifty cents or even less.

The 1929 market crash undoubtedly killed what might have been a bull movement in film stocks as a result of the sensational success of talkers. Earnings of these companies have shown sizable increases over the preceding year, and the prospects for continued increase have been favorable.

Another pertinent highlight is that the stock of Paramount, which leads the film issues in turnover for the year with a total of 7,875,350 shares, came out with a net loss of only 2 points, while National Theater Supply gained nearly 34 points, an appreciation of more than 300 per cent.

Details of the year, reflecting a stability in film stocks that stacks up very favorably alongside other major industries, are contained in the following tables:

A DAILY FEATURE OF UNIVERSAL INTEREST TO EVERYBODY IN AND OUT OF THE BUSINESS
REVIEWS in unprecedented numbers have appeared in trade papers, magazines and newspapers, during the Fall and Winter months, on Mack Sennett Talking Comedies. You could read every line of every one of them and find no dissenting voice raised in criticism. Nothing but praise! A rare vote of confidence—probably without equal in motion picture history!

MACK SENNETT TALKING COMEDIES

"THE GOLFERS"
A "pippin"... Entertainment all the way through.
—Canadian Moving Picture Digest
Will make you giggle whether or not you know anything about the game.
—Life
The large golfing fraternity and any number of others who don't know anything about this popular game will simply "eat" this picture up.
—Motion Picture News.
Supreme entertainment, intensely amusing both to golfers and to those who never stepped on a green.
—Arthur James, Exhibitors Daily Review and Motion Pictures Today.
A delightful outdoor event which scored heavily because it never became technical.
—Harold Hefferman, Detroit News

"THE NEW HALFWAY"
Solidly packed with laughs... A picture you cannot afford to overlook.

—Film Daily.
Mack Sennett almost reaches the pinnacle of his career in this.
—Associated Publications.
An even greater laughgetter than "Clancy At the Bat"...
This comedy, played with even the weakest feature, will make the program a complete success.
—Billboard.

"UPPERCUT O'BRIEN"
It has enough for two or three old-fashioned comedies.
—Zit's.
One of the funniest prize-ring themes ever screened.
—Film Daily.
Gibbon and Clyde are at the moment turning out some of the best comedies on the market. Any exhibitor that plays these and the other Educational shorts at this time is doing his patrons a great favor.
—Billboard.
A wow comedy,... Educational has a knock out of a two-reel comedy here,... Go the limit and promise a lot. It will lift any show right out of the average class.

Motion Picture Shares Established Excellent Reputation in 1929 Market—Average Depreciation Less Than Stock of Basic American Industries

By ARTHUR W. EDDY

MOTION picture issues established an excellent reputation for themselves in the Wall St. sector during 1929. A checkup at the close of the year indicates that film stocks comparatively made an enviable showing, weathering the market collapse of several months ago far better than stock of many important companies engaged in vital American industries. Much to the credit of the industry's stability is the fact that average depreciation of film shares was less than the decrease in the stock of various basic industries. The industry's financial foundation is growing firmer and firmer.

The street of profits and losses (mostly the latter, some people say) should find interesting and illuminating reading in the estimate that Para-

Imperial Changes Policy

Ottawa—Ray Tubman, manager of the Imperial, has instituted a new policy at the house with some extraordinary features taking the place of former split-week change.
Ray Cozine is getting to be known as the "international" director, at the Paramount studio. Having completed "The Rondador," entirely in Spanish, Cozine, with the aid of a translator, made "The Golden Kimono," entirely in Japanese, the following day.

Elizabeth North, who recently joined Paramount's writing staff, is recovering from an attack of appendicitis at the Algonquin Hotel. Ruth Etting appeared at Warner studio last week in a Vitaphone Variety entitled, "Broadway Is Beautiful," of which she is the director. She was accompanied by Arthur Hurley. Humphrey Bogart, Mary Phillips and Joan Blondell appeared in support.

Something of a record has been established by Ernest Fegte, art director of the Radio-Victor studio, who has designed 150 sets during the past nine months of production.

The transition from a soft spoken young woman of culture to a gruff mustached soldier of the trenches is made quite easily by Jane Dillon, who has just completed a Vitaphone Variety under the direction of Edmund Joseph.

Monte Bell, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dwon, was among the celebrities noticed at the recent opening of "Wake Up and Dream," at the Apollo theater.

Walter Brooks, who recently completed "This Is New York," at the Radio-Victor studio, rushed production so that his crew would finish up to allow ample time for their New Year's Eve celebration. Bob Carney and Doris Dawson are featured.

Fred Ryle, make-up artist at the Fox-Case studios here, has just returned from a visit to his family, "way down in Georgia."

The popular Broadway team of Clayton, Jackson and Durante did a turn of cavorting their antics before the cameras at the Paramount, Astoria studios recently when they played with Helen Morgan and Charles Ruggles in "Road House Nights."

The spirit of good fellowship and cheer held forth at the various studios on the afternoon before Christmas. The Eastern Vitaphone studios held two parties, one given by Ed DuPar and Ray Foster, cameramen, and another by Murray Roth, director-in-chief.

Noel Francis in Pathe Comedy
Noel Francis, the latest Ziegfeld beauty to be lured to Hollywood, completed the lead in "Her Hired Husband," for Pathe, before leaving New York. This Harry Delmar comedy, which also includes Harry McNaughton in the cast, will be released next week.

The Western Vitaphone studio held a holiday party for its employees.

Two of the many good notices on my latest release through RKO

Stewart Erwin heads the supporting cast of "Dangerous Nan McGrew," the next feature production to be started at the Paramount Long Island studio, with Helen Kane in the title role.

Tuesday was a busy day for Ben Bernie and his orchestra. After making a Vitaphone Variety at Warner Bros. studio in Flatbush, Ben and his boys had to hurry, Ben away to appear at the opening of the new Warner-owned Beacon theater.

"Roadhouse Nights" Fina
Title of Ben Hecht Story

"Roadhouse Nights" has been selected as the final title for the original Ben Hecht story recently filmed at the Paramount Long Island studio under the working title of "The River Inn."

This talking production directed by Hobart Henley features Helen Morgan, Charles Ruggles, Fred Kohler and the comedy trio, Clayton, Jackson and Durante, who make their screen debut in this picture.

St. Clair Here to Direct

Every Day in the Film Daily
Starting To-Morrow

"See and Hear" by Will Hays is really a splendid little book. It is small enough to read in an evening. Interesting enough to put aside an evening for that purpose and important enough for every man and woman in the business, who takes the industry seriously, to spend a couple of hours between its covers.

A GERMAN beer garden, a la Hoboken, has been installed at the Fifth Ave. Playhouse in connection with the run of "The Royal Box," all-German talkie which came into evidence at the Warner Bros. plant at Brooklyn some months ago.

And from Baltimore issues the allegation that a theater in that town sports a sign like this: "Now Playing—"Hollywood Revue"—with the original Broadway cast intact from the Astor Theater." You can believe that or not.

Eddie Klein, who presides the Ampas as well as exports, is mighty enthusiastic over "The Mask," starring Duncan Renaldo, and is not afraid to say so. Herbert Hoey of the Edward Small Co. is resigning his position to take over the motion picture department of the Max Hart agency, effective Jan. 15.

Thirteen of the Duncan dancers, (we didn't count 'em, personally) were claimed to have attended yesterday's matinee at the Capitol as the guest of Yasha Bunchuk, conductor of the Grand Orchestra. After giving the fans a break the girls are said to sail shortly for Europe. Pauline Frederick in "The Sacred Flame," topped considerable glory in the current issue of The National Board of Review Magazine. Charles G. Garfield, manager of the Warner Beacon, has been granted an indefinite leave of absence due to illness.

Stuart Erwin will shortly hit New York and it will be the first time he ever gazed upon the wonders of Manhattan. Can you imagine what the lad would say if Whalen got his crew out for the usual welcome stuff? Stuart is scheduled to get in line with Helen Kane in her next film, Jack Cohn, Colum-bia's treasurer, is back in the States again, returning from the first vacation in 22 years.

Andy Wright, has signed Samuel John Park under an exclusive management contract to cover all his writings. Park is the author of the satire on crime "Philadelphia" which ran at the Mansfield, N. Y., and now is at the Playhouse, Chicago...."General Crack" is still continuing its great stuff at the Warner and it looks as though John will be on Broad-day for a long time.

Horace Heidt and his Californians have climaxd a long series of engagements with the signing of a 10 weeks' contract at Monte Carlo. Means a big thing to the boys, as only two other orchestras ever played there, they being Ted Lewis and Paul Whitman. George Harvey gave his poisonous view-on advertising in a recent issue of the Warner Club News.

WARREN NOLAN, doing his big blurb act for United Artists, sends his press cutter out on a sheet headed: "Information from Warren Nolan of United Artists." You will note that Warren's name comes first, which shows he is a genuine publicity palpitator. One of his latest manuscripts is titled: "Verily A Handful!"

Glancing casually through this beautifully prepared two-page contribution from this rising young author, we decided not to return it with the usual rejection slip we editors are so fond of using. Here is a manuscript that has real literary merit, not only because of its flowing limpid style, but for its substance and content. Its story is based on fact. And would you believe it. Mr. Nolan takes as his theme an actual picture now in production by United Artsists. And in a casual style that grips you with the power of a Theododre Dreiser novel, he tells us all about "Bride 66." That strikes us as a much better title than "Verily A Handful." The latter is okay on a book cover, but think of all the electric bulbs the exhibitor will save on his marquee with "Bride 66."

We don't want to spoil your enjoyment of the completed work, but will do so harm to mention that it tells of a certain Arthur Hamerstein producing his first film, all-talk-sing-color, with Paul Stein directing, Rudolph Friml music, and Lois Moran actually singing. Indeed, Mr. Hammerstein states that her voice is worthy of grand opera. This kolym should really appear as an advertising page. We suggest to Mr. Nolan that he pass the thought along to Mr. Bemis, his public-inig manager. But we still maintain the manuscript has literary merit.

It is natural color

A year ago it was SOUND that brought big business to the box-office. Today it is COLOR. And Color means Technicolor.

The whole world is unanimous as to Technicolor. The greatest producers are making pictures in Technicolor as fast as Technicolor's cameras and laboratories can turn out the prints.

Technicolor assures the same amazing reproduction of colors, whether the sound is on film or disk. All sound systems look alike to Technicolor.

Technicolor is the only process that gives perfect color values throughout the life of the film. Technicolor film is coated on only one side. It has no back to scratch. The emulsion is harder than that of black and white film and the fourth run theatre gives its patrons the same gorgeous color effects that bring unrestrained praise from the critics at the New York and Hollywood premières.

TECHNICOLOR Is A Box-Office Name. Advertise It!
The most elaborate, the most effective magazine advertisement that the motion picture industry has ever produced opens Technicolor's amazing national advertising campaign.

Three pages in full color—at $11,500 per page—will startle and intrigue SATURDAY EVENING POST readers of the January 11th issue. On the news-stands Thursday, January 9th.

Fifteen million readers will be thinking and talking Technicolor.

Fifteen million persons will be looking for motion pictures in Technicolor.

Two weeks later—$34,500 more for space in the SATURDAY EVENING POST. The issue of January 25th will carry three more pages in full color.
That's just the beginning. Throughout the year SATURDAY EVENING POST will "sell" Technicolor regularly to your patrons, creating a steadily increasing demand—making Technicolor an irresistible box-office name.

Ten million more readers—every month—learning about Technicolor—twenty-five million in all—ready to go to your box-office with the money in their hand when you announce "It's in Technicolor."

ONLY FAIR PROGRAM PICTURE. MOSTLY HORRID TIED UP IN THE WASTE OF A BAD PLOT PERIOD. ACTING A HIGHLIGHT.

Comedy-drama with songs. The story is for the most part dull and lacking in continuity. It rambles about the Broadway picture is the adventure of Henry Walsha, uncle of John Cerullo, the world of its star, Eddie Dowling, and Betty Compson. As far as the music goes, it's moderately good. The picture's biggest draw will be in the neighborhood.

SATISFYING COMEDY FOR THE ENTERTAINMENT-THINKING HOUSES. DENNY, AS NAPOLEON, DISPORTING IN A SANITARIUM FILLED WITH NUN.

Comedy based on an idea somewhat off the beaten path. Denny, in the role of a prospective heir to millions, is railroaded into a bug house by some relatives who want the dough for themselves. Denny is made to believe that he is attending a masquerade party and is cautioned to stick to his role of Napoleon. There being no “Josephine” among the inmates of the boozy bath, it is up to the doctor’s pretty assistant to assume this part. She does think the newcomer really cuckoo, and he in turn, upon realizing that he has been tricked, turns out for a daftmill. Humorous situations are plentiful and the action, despite its absurdity, is held very well in the picture’s comedic vein, which speaks well for the direction.

Cast: Reginald Denny, Nora Lane, E. J. Riddliffe, Henry Otto, Joyville, Fritz Feld, Biles Cussew, Fish Somerville, Rolle Seides, L. R. Edens, Chester Demare, Chester Green, Henry Herbert.

FAIR MOB APPEAL STREET. SMART-BIPED LINES. RARE SEEING OF GALS WHO HIRE OUT AS HOSTESSSES AT BUSINESS MEN’S PARTIES.

A direct descendant of the jazz type. According to the reviewers this opium bigtime salesmanship nowadays is accomplished by throwing snappy, well-aimed lines at the male customers in the right mood to sign heavily on the dotted line. By bringing out the moral ramifications of the system, the picture has openings for some pretty good exploitation. This together with the box-office title should succeed in bailing in evidence that the wife of the year for the flaming youth brand of entertainment. A fairly neat love episode is put up with, a picture, with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Jeannette Loff as the heart team, and the names of these popular players ought to help the draw.

JUST A FILLER. FOR UN-WIRED HOUSES. DIFFERENT FOREIGN PRODUCTIONarlo IN A LITTLE INTEREST OUTSIDE OF THE ATTRACTIVE MISS WONG.

Drama. An English production made in Germany by Richard Eichberg. This is a very flimsy production from all angles, and has nothing to recommend it outside of the appearance of Anna May Wong in the principal role. Miss Wong’s personal charm is always in evidence whenever she appears, and she succeeds in making the weak story seem passably interesting. The plot is slight and the theme hackneyed. The picture, however, becomes more interesting as it moves along very mechanically. Even in the days of the silent film it would have been classed as a weak sister. The story of a down-and-out vaudevillain who befriends the little waif, and she in turn inspires him to get back in his stride and resuming his former vaudevilling art. The usual complications develop in the usual manner. Rates daily through twice, and a filler for un-wired houses.

Comedy of two trap armed trainmen who become smitten by a feminine timekeeper and a waitress in a town where. Most of the footage is devoted to the part. Being trapped between Armstrangemental treatment is. A bit, and Gleason, the ever-ready wisecracker. Western. The veteran combination of Director McGowan, storywriter, screenwriter, and director again, putting this over in a way that will please the western fans. The plot is well handled, and works up to a good climax, Nothing particularly new, but the direction of J. P. MOULIN ROUGE SETTING IS HIGHLIGHT AT ROXY

By HERBERT S. BERGMAN

In keeping with the screen feature, “Hot for Paris,” the current stage bill at the Roxy has a French flavor and is highlighted by a colorful Moul- lin Rouge set, with gala signs, electrically studded windmill paddles in action and appropriate inhabitants. In front of this setting is presented a most diverse series of attractions, Russian, Spanish and whatnot—as well as some pleasant singing.

Cortez and Helene, in a tapersoch- travesty, cop the honors with their ingeniously funny routine. Dorothy and Harry Davie play the Apac- cat with gusto. Then there are two nifty colored stepers, Keene and Rufin. The other artists in this “Boulevard Paris” number include Viola Philo, Angelita Loyo, Youry Yourlo, Mr. Vodnoy, the Roxy chorus and ballet corps and Markert’s Rox- elettes. Adamo’s presence brings luminous effect by A. Strobl climaxes the scene.

The first part of the stage program is a series of divertissements, open- ing with “Frisie Antique,” a white stately scene with the figures doing garland dances and the Patricia Bowman-Leonide Masseau team con- tributing a few pleasing variations. This is followed by “Miserere,” sung before a prison gate, with the voices of Viola Philo, David Drollet and the Roxy Male Chorus doing the operatic bit full justice. Then comes “Le Rev- eille,” the scene being an immense pink bed enfolding the Markert Rox- elettes. Lillian La Tonge, in alarm clock costume, wakes up the gang and they go into a fancy pyjama dance for a fluffy finish. An organ specialty, with Lew White, C. A. J. Parmentier and George Epstein playing the three consoles simultaneously, also is on the program.

RUDY VALLEE IN ORIENTAL SETTING AT PARAMOUNT

Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees are at the Paramount. A new Nuggemeyer’s musical revue at the Paramount. Styled “Streets of Bom- bay,” it is one of the classiest stage shows the Paramount has had in many weeks. The scene is a street in Bombay, with a wide staircase in the foreground. Dancing girls in Oriental costumes do a number, fol- lowed by a fine atmospheric bit with a snake dancer. She emerges from a basket, and twines and waves her way across the floor to the accom- paniment of weird music till finally she overcomes the charmer. A class act that rates a headline.

Rudy Vallee sang three numbers, the best of these being “Sweetest Than Sweet.” He was on only a small part of the time, but the fans seemed satisfied. He was fol- lowed by a dance with mixed ensemble. A beautiful dance num- ber was done to “On the Road to Mandalay.” Comedy was supplied in large gobs by fat John-v’’ Perkins as the visiting American out for a good time with the girls. He had some good chaff that went over strong. Pasquali Brothers were three fast acrobats with some difficult turns and falls. Dave Gould’s Girls and Boys had some good routines with colorful costume changes. Looked as if some real dough was spent on this unit.

Projectors for Sound Pictures

In addition to other product, Douser Manufacturing Corp. of New York is offering a device known as an "Automatic Shutter Control" and a "3 wire circuit" foot switch. The foot switch, it is claimed, enables the projectionist to make the simplest in- stallation required by only three wires, for any number of changers installed on the projector.

The entire switch mechanism is mounted on a panel with contacts sufficient to carry more current than will be necessary. The panel has binding posts to which wires may be fastened, thereby eliminating soldering and splices boxes.

The automatic shutter controls projectionist easy control of both machines and at the same time assures a continuous show with invisible changeover, thus reducing fire hazards, in the event of a break in film. Another feature of the product is the fact that the company furnish shelves for the different types of current used, namely 110 volts AC and DC and 220 Volt AC and DC.

Monday: Probing into the future The twice daily film commentaries by important executives in every phase of the business to get their opinions as to what's on the cards for 1930. Generally speaking, the outlook is optimistic in tone. Highlights of the year will be further development of sound and color in the continuous process. With producers primarily interested, at the moment, in sound and color, wide film is temporarily placed on the shelf as far as commercial use goes. The industry at present has enough problems to battle with without this one. In the meanwhile, however, the major companies are quietly experimenting Tuesday: Sound installations abroad are gradually gaining momentum. Plenty of good news supplied by C. J. North, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Dept. of Commerce. Despite the obstacle presented by the multiplicity of languages spoken, countries on the other side of the oceans now have 1,800 houses wired. Naturally, in English-speaking lead the hint. Wiring of theaters is bound to go forward with increased rapidity in 1930 with the Pulitzer article sharpened for dialogue pictures and production plans made for multi-lingual pictures to satisfy it. In these days, try and write a column without constantly referring to sound—or color. From William F. Canavan, head of the stagehands and operators' union and an official of whom organized labor may well be proud, says that sound pictures have provided about 4,000 new jobs for projectionists. Great for the operators but a headache for the men trying to keep the overhead near the ground.

Thursday: Ivo Abramson, who has been mixed up in the picture industry for some years back, focuses a $1,500,000 action against 47 corporations and individuals alleging monopoly, etc. The Hays office come back strong with a statement that Sound continues to be a factor in the industry. Warner estimates which promise earnings of approximately $17,000,000 for 1929. come. Paramount figures compiled by the "Wall St. News," to the effect that its intake may exceed $15,000,000.

Friday: Western Electric receives a setback abroad through a permanent injunction granted by the Canadian government to the Tolihis. The American reproducing device outfit, however, is not inclined to take the count lying down. An appeal will be taken to a higher German court in an attempt to have the order vacated. W. E. has been successful winning an injunction in a similar case in several other European countries... Inauguration of the Canadian battle of theater giants has been postponed. Work of establishing the chain sponsored by N. L. Nathanson will mark time until the theater site dispute in Montreal is settled between his organization and Capouet and associates. Warner Bros. further build the musical end of their business by engaging Erno Rapee as general musical director. The man who composed the music for "My Diane" and "Charmaine" is an asset for any organization.

Today: More exhibition grief loads on the Mississippi with state's tax is in prospect. But the Lightman-Williams combination, not to mention other agencies, are at work on the problem... Philadelphia exhibitors are confronted by a fire department edict compelling them to install fireproof screens within two weeks. If they fail or are unable to comply with this order, their houses may be closed.

Grand, Pullman, Closes Pullman, Wash.—Because it would not pay to convert the house into a "talker" and due to uneconomic operation as a silent house, the Grand, one of the oldest theaters in this town has been compelled to close its doors.

Short Thoughts
-on long subjects

HOSE WHO are devoting time and attention to the matter say that the medium sized and semi-intimate house is so far superior to the larger super-theater in the matter of sound reproduction that the present era may see the end of the six thousand eat house.

HOW THAT the year end festivities have been wrapped up and put on the shelf for future reference it's about time for the Kent conference of 5-5-5 dimension to take into action. Both Allied and U.P.T.O.A. seem optimistic, so where you are but where are you?

Arl Laemmle has just been made a fellow of the Royal Society of Arts in London. This is a distinction that has been conferred upon but few Americans. Carl Laemmle has been an outstanding example of "What's right with the Industry" ever since his first store show. Honor can be too great for his past achievements.

ONSENSUS OF opinion of many sections of the country is that features could well be trimmed a bit so as to live more time for balancing programs with short subjects. The history of every branch of the show business is that varied programs are safer. Pictures are no exception to the rule.

ROFESSOR POWELL of Smith college makes it known in plain and unmistakable language that the talkers are no aid whatsoever to the universal use of good speech. Of course this, as in all other matters, the good professor is entitled to his opinion. Perhaps the next assistant to take his place alongside of the director will be the professor of spoken English.

A Brief History of Motion Pictures

The Genesis of the Motion Picture

Once stands on a high mountain and sees long lines of men, women, and children moving slowly forward. They come from everywhere. They are ragged children from the farms, and their pale-faced sisters from the cities whose feet ache from long hours of standing behind barrier counters. There are poor boys, and sons of millionaires, and boys with the sallow cheeks of the tenements. There are old women with hands reddened and coarseened by work, and with eyes grown listless from long waiting. There are old men who hobble on crooked sticks, and children with the flash of the sun's gold in their hair and the happy laughter of innocence in their voices. There are the schoolboy, and the savant, and the man of no learning at all. There are men and women of every race and of every tongue, moving slowly forward, seeking something, seeking, yearning—asking for a place to dream. All about them is the roar of the cities, the confused, jangling noises of life that is hurried, rushed, propelled forward at a breathless speed. Every minute of every hour of every day they come—millions of them. And over and above them, and in front of them, attracting them on, offering that which they desire, are billions of flickering shadows—the motion picture. Who shall estimate its importance? Who shall attempt to say what it means to the world?

The motion picture is the epitome of civilization and the quintessence of what we mean by "America."

Those are bold, maybe challenging words; but I believe that what the casually picture's own story, its history and its proper achievements and anticipations are warrant enough.

Civilization may be said to be made up of four vital components: industry, science, art and religion. The motion picture will, upon examination, be found significantly to derive from and partake of the functions of all these.

Let us set it down immediately: the motion picture is a great social necessity, an integral part of human life in the whole civilized world. The thoughtful man can have no patience with those who would casually pigeonhole "the movies" with the ephemeral and passing whims that flutter through the current of amusements. We have had the motion picture now these three decades, developing and exploring its destiny, through the ordeals of experience and demonstrating increasingly its fundamental values of service.

It is painfully true that not many centers, although people know the motion picture, and good many persons know the fame of screen personalities, a great many have marveled at the swift prosperity of the industry as evidenced in some spectacular careers, a vast public patronizes the screen for its products, but exceedingly few indeed, and some of them decidedly prejudiced have given thought and research and study to the motion picture for itself in its broader aspects. That is natural enough. In parallel, most of us want to experience and enjoy health and we are not on the whole vastly interested in physiology. But if we were to realize what the motion picture is and endeavor to think about it intelligently, we must give some heed to its inner facts. No superficial judgment of the motion picture ever proved correct. Excellent reasons can be found for even its most serious faults, manifestly, if one can see the screen from a broad angle, broad enough to take in all the facts.

Civilization follows the tools. The motion picture is the newest, and maybe the best, tool or instrument of the art of expression—and expression is the all of art. By art, man lives the fullness of life. Art is both triumph and release from all limitations of time and place and every manner of awkward fact. Art gives him many lives by evocations living.

No one can fairly draw the line that bound art, science, industry and religion from each other. Our civilization is a blending of them all.

The motion picture is at once their product and servant.

You can turn to the writings of the scholars and the exhibits of the museums and trace there the entire history of the art and industry of the motion picture as a tool. You will find interesting evidence that the roots of the motion picture run back manner of awken to beginnings of human consciousness.

It is a fascinating progression that has brought us the motion picture as the newest and best way of telling things, the most direct route alike to the emotions and the intelligence. It

A Century of Industrial Progress

By The American Institute.

Acknowledgment is made to Doubleday-Doran for permission to reprint portions of a chapter on motion pictures which you see in "A Century of Industrial Progress" issued by The American Institute.

We have arrived at the motion picture just about as early as it was possible to evolve it as a new tool from the wonderful tools developed ahead of it. It had to wait on mechanics, optics and chemistry. It came, as so many others of the great new necessities of the new era came, on the wave of American invention, and like all other great inventions it has its debts to the centuries of European endeavor that have gone before.

And let me pause a moment to say here that there are special reasons perhaps why America should have given birth and prosperous nurture to the motion picture as a world art. America is in a very literal sense the world-state. All races, all creeds, all the manners of men that exist on the globe, are to be found here—working, shaping, structuring, side by side in a reasonable degree of understanding and friendship, more friendship among greater diversities of races and men than all the previous history of the world discloses. America's people do not speak of themselves primarily as Germans, Englishmen, Greeks or Frenchmen; as Catholics, Hebrews, Protestants, but as Americans. Ours is probably the least uniform of all nations with the sense that France is French and Russia, Russian. But it is, at the same time, the greatest single unity among all nations, because America represents a harmony of diversified interests, all of which blend as do the pieces in an orchestra into one depicted symphony. Is it not possible that this very quality of harmonized diversities enabled America to express herself to an entire world by the creation and the development of the world's most universal method of expression—the motion picture? The nation required a new universal expression. The motion picture is that method.

A Digest of Current Opinion

Modern Director Must Have An Eye for Color Effects

A KNOWLEDGE of color and an eye for it is as vital to a director of motion pictures in black-and-white photography as it is to one directing an all-color picture. Color harmonies and color clashes play a vital part in the psychology of a picture. They can be used to soften moods or make them severe. They can be used to arouse an emotional clash in the spectator or key him up to nervous excitement.

Extra Precautions Are Urged For the Prevention of Fires

HERE is an old saying about locking the door after someone had stolen the horse. Let's not wait until we have had bad fires to check up our fire prevention apparatus. Extinguishers should be inspected and tested regularly. Exits should be kept clear at all times. On various occasions we have seen exits jammed with scenery and other back stage paraphernalia. Every precaution possible should be made, the cost is not great as against the loss occasioned by fire. The recent fire in Los Angeles and New York should stand as vivid reminders that fires will happen. Check over your entire theater today and see where a costly fire is just waiting a chance to put you out of business. Heavily draped and padded sound houses add extra fire hazards, see that these drapes are protected or are of flame proof material. Above all, protect your customers and yourself. Insurance is all right; but is a poor excuse for carelessness.

ALONG THE RIALTO with Phil M. Daly, Jr.

ALEXANDER GRAY made another bow on Broadway the other night at the premiere of "No, No, Nanette," the play previously having shown himself before the gate at the opening of "Sally," this his first chance. Alice Terry and Rex Ingram have returned to Nice from Cannes and the Riviera and will start production on "Rio Grande" Ingram's first all talker.

Michael Mindlin, director of the Fifth Ave. Playhouse, was honored by a letter from Mayor Walker commending him for the introduction of his new policy of showing talkers in languages other than English. "The Royal Box" with Alexander Moissi and Camilla Horn, produced entirely in German, is current at the theater.

In the current issue of The Nation, the Newsreel Theater was given mention on the honor roll for 1929 under the heading of drama. "The Newsreel Theater, for the establishment of a unification in which one may enjoy the look and newspaper without waiting for the end of somebody's super-feature," continued the mag.

David Drollet, tenor, contributes some good work to the Roxy presentation with the rendering of "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore," which he sings with Viola Philo. David began his musical career at the musical centers of Europe. During the war he served with the French army. It seems Johnny Hines landed a healthy bank roll in the market recently and is just rolling along.

Up at the Colony they thought so well of "Hell's Heroes," the Peter B. Kyne story, that the film is being held over for a second week. Underwood, Moran & Mack, George Bancroft, Gary Cooper, Mary Brian, Jack Oakie, Streets Gallagher, James Hall and a gang of others gave the boys from U. of Pittsburgh football team the glad bit before the big game with the Coast team. What good did it do them?

Gus Shy, comedian of "Good News" and "The New Moon," has been signed by M-G-M, giving the company full option on his service for an extended period. Wonder how long that is? Well, in addition to appearing in "Good News" for M-G-M, Gus, it is whispered may take a crack at directing, staging dances or writing dialogue and adaptations.

The first Spanish version of an American two reel comedy, "Ladrones," will be shown tomorrow at Loew's 116th St., N. Y. This is the first of a series of Spanish and French comedies now being prepared at the Hal Roach studios for M-G-M. The English version of the same film, "Ladrones," now is being shown at the Astor, N. Y. Muchos Gracias.

What do you know about the technical detail of the various color processes now being used in production? The forthcoming 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK contains a comprehensive outline of the major processes now being used.

AND THAT'S THAT

By PHIL M. DALY

A NOther squawk from a disillusioned reader of this kolumn. Seems that a lot of guys read the western side of this page every morn, and take it seriously. On that spelling contest we stated that you could make bets and pick up some easy dough from folks who thought they were experts on the dictionary. And doggone if this cuckoo Justin Her- man, news editor of the Emanuel Goodwin sheets, doesn't bet his stenog five bucks. Well, any bird who makes bets with his secretary deserves to lose. Besides, gambling around a business office undermines the morale and creates a counteracting ($7 word for Tough Spot) that no guy should get into with his stenog.

Dear Phil: What a fine pussy you are! You publish a list of ten words in your punk column—tip your readers off that "if you want to make some easy money just bet one of these 'expert' spellers that he won't get more than 50% correct. It's a cinch bet."

Oh yeah? Thinkink I'll make some easy coin. I take the matter up with our Miss Georgia Yeager (you gotta give this little girl a hand) who pounds the typewriter in our office, and het five bucks she can't spell half of your list correctly. She not only spelled six out of ten correctly, but she questions the spelling of "sacrilegious," claiming that it should be "sacriligious." I don't know if I'll never laid claim to be a speller. All I know is that I'm out five bucks.

Dear Georgia: Now that we've trimmed that boss of yours, don't I get part of the loot? Will drop in soon. Phil.

THE FILM DAILY

Monday, January 6, 1930
there must be something to the age old thought that reader interest in a publication brings results to the advertiser for the film daily has at any time in its history.
Europe is Going Slow on Talkers, Joe Brandt Says

Talkers face a much different situation in Europe than they do in America, with the foreign countries proceeding more slowly and conservatively in an effort to try to adapt themselves to the new conditions, according to Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, who recently returned from abroad.

"Lack of population and limited distribution are impediments to the general adoption of audible films," Brandt says. "As far as Great Britain is concerned, although the British trade was at the outset skeptical of the permanency of the talking innovation, the British exhibitors and producers lost no time to take advantage of the new development and place their orders for both recording and reproducing equipment for immediate installation."

"As to the public approval of the talking picture, the British public has taken it as keenly as the American public, and exhibitors appreciate that never in the history of the business have they taken such phenomena as they have on the talking pictures."

"While at the moment England is not equipped as fast as the United States, nevertheless the orders are in and I look for a material increase in the number of theaters within the next few months."

"With regard to the producing activities in England, the British International, Maxwell's organization, has equipped its studios with RCA equipment and has done some very good recording. British Dominions, Herbert Valois company, has been the only studio equipped with Western Electric equipment, as far as I know, although several Gourmets have been successfully recording on British Acoustics."

"The Gaumonts organization, of which Michael Balcon is the managing director, has set out to make a number of pictures this year which will be known as the 'Gaumonts of Great Britain will have no trouble in securing the number of necessary talking pictures to meet the quota."

"The situation in France is a bit more complicated than that of Great Britain. The most progressive organization in France for the development of reproduction and recording of sound is the L'Association de l'Art du Film."

"Pathé Nathan was equipping their studio. The producers of France contemplate that in about six months, as soon as they can get proper studio installations, produce as many French talking pictures within a period of eighteen months as they did during a year's period last year."

"The installation of machines in France has been held back considerably because of the indecision on the proper system to install."

"The situation in Germany is rather chaotic due to the suits that are pending, the upjections that have been granted against American pictures."

"Austria is in a very peculiar position, because geographically Austria cannot afford to make talking pictures. Its market is very restricted and even during the silent days Austria was so restricted that it could not produce on any pictures that were made at home. Installations have been very slow and many lawsuits have been started to restrain exhibitors who wanted to install American machines."

"In Italy there has been a more progressive stage of mind among exhibitors as far as installation of machines is concerned. In the principal cities there has been a great many installations and showing of pictures."

"The other countries such as Hungary and the Balkans are apparently going very slow on the matter of installations, as they realize that they cannot produce in their own country pictures in which their native tongue is used."

"Russia seems to be going ahead on the basis of a definite program to manufacture talking pictures within the next few years."

"From my talk with several representatives of circuits in the Far East, it seems as if the Far Eastern countries, particularly India, Australia and Africa are going ahead in a big way. They are getting the business and are installing machines with the necessary talking pictures having been shown in those cities."

BILL PROPOSES GOV. CONTROL OF FILMS

20 Already Lined Up for 1930 Production by RKO

The "Wide-ies" present a problem

By JACK ALICOATE

Although many of the "Wide-ies," which have been the rage of the past few months, have tended to fade out of popularity, the wide screen pictures are still a popular feature. The wide screen pictures were introduced to help the film industry compete with the increasing popularity of television. However, the wide screen pictures have not been without controversy, with some producers and directors feeling that they are not an effective way to reach audiences.

SOUND came, was heard and conquered and is now just as important a part of this great art, business or industry as Hollywood, the Roxy Theater or Tammam Young. Along came color, was pleasing to the eye, helped generally to make a bright sequence brighter and has moved in bag and baggage to be with us, like our poor relations, until death us do part. And now we have another strapping big youngster knocking at the gates, affectionately christened the "Wide-ies." They have already presented their calling card, shown their wares, and been more or less enthusiastically received. And therein, aforementioned and to wit, lies the trouble. There is not only one wide film but several of each of different genealogy and all of decidedly different proportions.

Trouble Ahead

Before it reaches the stage of actual warfare someone should place the wide film problem before the Supreme Court of the United States, the League of Nations or Nathan Burk. To the best of our knowledge and belief this obviously simple problem is now further from settlement and standardization than when it started. Here we have Paramount with Magnascope, Fox with Grandeur, RCA with the Spoor-Bergeren method and Warner Brothers with still another and yet unnamed process, all of different size and all using different equipment.

A Tower of Babel

The difficulty presents to most film folk a sort of Tower of Babel problem with most everyone interested asking why some sort of

Censorship of Industry, however, Not Asked by Lankford

Washington Bureau of THE FILM DAILY

Washington Creation of a Dept. of Public Welfare to control motion pictures and radio is proposed in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Congressman Lankford of Georgia.

The proposed department would prepare such films as might be required by the Government and would furnish suitable pictures to schools, churches and lodges. No censorship over the industry, however, is contemplated in the bill.

Market Condition is Factor in Delaying Equity Efforts

Less than 10 per cent of the theater patrons in foreign countries understand English well enough to understand the plot of American talkers.

Greater activity on the part of picture companies in backing stage plays is expected to exercise an important influence in the situation when the Actors’ Equity resumes its efforts for a uniform contract in the film industry. It is learned by THE FILM DAILY. Unfavorable condition of the stock market in the last few months is said to have been one of the chief factors in delaying fur-

THOMAS A. EDISON's desire to give eyes to his photograph is primarily responsible for the motion picture camera as we know it today, according to Terry Ramsaye, historian of the motion picture.1 Edison was at work, toward the close of the last century, on numerous inventions, but most of his interest was centered on the talking machine with which he had started the entire world a short time before. William Kennedy Laurie Dickson, a young Englishman, who had traveled thousands of miles in order to associate himself with the Wizard of Menlo Park, was working for Edison and mysterious "goings on" were to be noticed in Room Five of the plant at West Orange.

Conscious scientific endeavor, first as a study of the nature of appearances of motion, and later of the synthesis of appearances of motion began with the studies of Peter Mark Roget, the same whose name appears in the classic and authoritative Roget's "Thesaurus," first aid to word mongers, who was in 1824 secretary of the Royal Society in Great Britain. After him came many experimenters, notably Joseph Antoine Ferdinand Plateau of Ghent, and Simon Ritter von Stampfer of Vienna, and later Lieutenant Baron František Uchaliov of Vienna and Emil Reynaud of France. While they studied motion, others, notably Louis Jacques Mandé Daguerre and Sir John Herschel and others, pursued the chemistry which gave us photography.

Out of labs started by Roget's studies came a machine which finally became the familiar toy called Zoetrope, using hand-drawn pictures. Then, seemingly unrelated, came a method of recording motion photographically, evolved for Leland Stanford's race horse studies in California, by John D. Isaacs and operated by Edweard Muybridge about 1880. Jean Louis Meissonier, famous French artist, applied the Isaacs-Muybridge pictures to the Uchitani projecting Zoetrope and attained a crude limited sort of motion picture dependent on glass plates. It was only a tantalizing beginning.

Edison abandoned all precedent when he set to work in 1887, and, early in 1888 we find the first effort toward the modern motion picture being made in the Edison studios recording the antics of Fred Ott, a mechanic, as the first actor, on a cylinder like that of an old Edison phonograph.

Years later, Ott told of that first performance before a motion picture camera. Repeated by Terry Ramsaye, it is: "I had a white cloth wound around me and then a little belt to tie it in around the waist so as not to make it too baggy. I looked like a baboon. After I was ready, I made a monkey of myself and the camera was a monkey of me."

Mr. Ramsaye speaks of the first picture as "The Follies of 1888." "It was a slapstick comedy staged in a solemn laboratory," he adds with a chuckle.

But the Edison cylinder picture machine, built in simulation of the phonograph, was no adequate solution. Edison decided he wanted to feed the photo-material into the camera, and the subsequent pictures into a viewing machine to the moving picture, being a machine gun. He was looking for a flexible material to carry the pictures.

Now up in Rochester, George Eastman, who had invented the kodak, had a similar problem for what he called "roller photography." Edison was trying strips of collodion varnish when he heard that Eastman had arrived at a perfected material—film. Edison sent Dickson to Rochester for a sample.

That first order for film for the motion picture is still in Eastman's files at Rochester. With it went a postal money order for $2.50 for payment for a strip one inch wide and about fifty feet long. That test strip worked.

Imagine the thrill of that occasion. George Eastman's product had met and fitted Thomas Edison's product. The motion picture had come into being. And one of their union was to come the new and great motion picture, which has since flourished in the world's great single source of amusement.

Edison moved on rapidly in his studio, which because of its resemblance in color to a police nine-horse wagon, was known as The Black Maria. He was still thinking in terms of eyes for the phonograph and the moving picture was developing of its own accord. Annie Oakley; Sandow, the strong man; Buffalo Bill, the dancers. Edison's "Milk White Flag," which was a Broadway success in those days; Ruth St. Denis were being induced to lend their talents to the moving picture, being recorded in single rolls of film fifty feet long for use in peep show machines which were now to appear as a forerunner of the moving picture. The first of the peep shows was opened at 1155 Broadway, New York City, on April 14, 1894. At the motion picture began to develop into something like regular form and use, the makers of pictures began to consider ways and means of producing a popular picture that would find a market on which they are still constantly engaged. They recognized very early that plenty of action was needed and as prize fighting offered action and at the same time had a popular appeal, they turned to the prize fights of the day for filming purposes. James J. Corbett, heavyweight champion of the world, appeared before the camera. He became the first motion picture actor under contract. Later "Gentleman Jim" came back to the moving pictures but many gallons of water had flowed under the bridge between his first and second entrances into motion pictures.

Carmencita, a dancer of current popularity, and Annabelle Moore, who was a reigning favorite in the music halls of New York in the last years of the nineteenth century, also found their way into the new world of make-believe that was to be found in the peep shows of the country. An industry began to show signs of existence.

The public, expressing itself as usual through business, demanded a screen machine, a device which would liberate the motion picture from the peep show. Mr. Edison was not enthusiastic about this, although he had done some research and might readily have solved the problems of projection at once. He had been experimentally projecting since 1889.

Say Talkers Will Bring Back Legitimate Theater Patrons

THERE are numberless thousands of the youth of the land who have never witnessed a legitimate production—who have grown up with the idea that the motion picture was the ultimate and only expression for the drama.

Then came the talkies. And the talkies will bring them back to us. Already those youngsters are being shown a bit of Shakespeare by Doug and Mary—they're getting another glimpse of John Barrymore as "Hamlet" and from such a star, the talkies will show their audiences that there is something better and that while the first medium of the silent picture and the second medium of the talking pictures were good enough in their way, there is a third and greater and finer medium waiting for them.

Speech on the Screen Is Gradually Finding Its Place

OBVIOUSLY, there is a sharp difference between dialogue on the stage and dialogue on the screen, and the principles of the latter have not yet been successfully evolved. In one respect progress is being made; the screen dialogue writers are learning condensation and terseness. They are finding that words are better not spoken on the screen merely because they are pretty or colorful. Speech on the screen is taking its proper second place to action and we have fewer movies that are dreary and verbose transcripts of stage plays.

The Ten Best

Pictures of 1929

By JACK ALC IOATE

EVERYBODY’s doing it. Over three hundred of the foremost critics, editors and reviewers representing the most powerful newspapers, magazines and fan and trade publications have already cast their vote and sent in their selections of the TEN BEST PICTURES of 1929 to the Film Daily. Here is an annual ballot that is truly representative of critical America. In the past few years this “Ten Best” idea has grown into a national institution.

Started in 1922

It was back in 1922 that this annual event was started by this publication. The idea caught on quickly and soon many motion picture editors of daily newspapers were annually conducting a ballot for their readers with immediate and enthusiastic response. Now there is hardly a critic of note in the country that does not send in his or her vote to this publication for final tabulation. These individual selections appear in the publications of each respective critic. When the result of the poll is announced by the Film Daily simultaneously all over the country, many give considerable space to this feature of universal interest. Usually again naming their own selections alongside of the consensus of opinion of all.

Votes Now Being Counted

The final check-up will be ready in about three weeks. In all, about four hundred writers, the cream of critical America, will take part in the voting. They will represent over twenty-five millions of readers. Film Daily’s Ten Best Poll is an annual nationwide news event given due recognition by most publications and receives immediate attention by, in point of interest, in the industry.

The recommendation was made to the Austrian government in order to ensure the continuation of the existing arrangement.

AND THAT'S THAT

By Phil M. Daly

Just to see if all the scholars have been following the class lessons in motion pictures, teacher will now ask a few simple questions:

What is a cineograph?

A cineograph is a kinograph.

What is a kinograph?

A kinograph is a motion picture such as shown by the kinetoscope.

What is a kinetoscope?

A kinetoscope is a device by means of which the pictures taken by the kinetoscope are produced in such a way as to duplicate the movements of the original.

What is a kinograph? Some bright pupil asks.

Oh, that's just another name for a motion picture camera. These are the older ones which used to be used when Dad was a boy. In those days he said to Ma: "Let's go see a kinograph at the Nickelodeon."

And Ma replied: "No Pa. The kinetoscopist at the Nickelodeon is an old sweetheart of mine, and if he sees me setting there with you he'll make the kinetograph jump and flicker."

Well, at that, kinetoscopist is as high-falutin' a title as the present-day "projectionist."

Parts That Stand Out

We nominate Fi? Dorsey for her work in Foz's "Hot for Paris."

Those eyes! Can she use 'em? Oh, boy. And those beautiful centrifugal movements of the waist line. She dances. She sings. She makes o-o-la-la. She's a wow. A pitter. Go see her and write your own adjectives. We've exhausted ours.

PUBLIC adds six more THEATERS TO CIRCUIT

Kansas City, Kan.—Public has activated the Great American Mussection of the Kinetoscope, which enced the audience. The film was children flocked to see the pictures moved. It was thrilling, exciting, something new under the sun. Far-

their chores, to see Edison's new wonder. An interest was aroused that was to spread to the smallest hamlet, en-circle the globe, enlist more people than any other instrument of entertainment the world ever

And with the increased interest came a demand for more films. From far and wide came the call. People who had never even seen a moving pictures, but they soon tired of seeing the same pictures over and over again. Novelty in pictures was needed. Thus from the first began the ceaseless struggle for variety of pictures—a struggle which explains why today there are 800 feature pictures annually.

The first picture makers had been able to induce some of the Broadway stars and some of the athletic heroes of the country, notably the prize fighters, to appear before the camera. In exchange for their services the stars got splendid advertisement. Today it is with some jus-ification that the stars demand and receive salaries commensurate with their services to the amusement-loving world.

About this time in the film's history, New York was being treated with what the citizens of that day regarded as a racy comedy called

"The Widow Jones," in which Miss

May Irwin and John C. Rice exhibited in an almost modern prolongation. The moving picture producers of the day saw the advantages of the kiss on the screen and Miss Irwin and Mr. Rice agreed to reproduce it for the camera. It became an instant success under the rather obvious title of "The May Irwin, John C. Rice Kiss." It was forty feet long and it brought down on the heads of the infant industry several resounding raps. In spite of its popular appeal, a great many people disapproved of osculation to the extent of forty feet and to this day

no one has ever definitely determined how many feet long a kiss may be and still remain a proper salutation.

Soon the vaudeville turned eager eyes upon the Vitascope and R. F.

Keith houses began to announce it as an added attraction. Newspapers differed in their estimates of its positional but shortly after the Vitascope's first appearance in Boston,

The Boston Herald took occasion to predict a future. "May not small towns see city shows by Vitascope?"

The Herald asked. "May not accompanying scenes of the rising youth be preserved in their prime? Indeed to what uses may not the Vitascope be put?" To which The Boston Traveler added, "Who knows how the new intention and those that are to follow

may revolutionize the amusement world. . . . Who knows that each country will not have its stage 'foundries,' so to speak, for each of the grand forms of dramatic and musical art? Here finely drilled companies could give performances to be perpetuated by the Vitascope and the phonograph, or by their successors. Duplicates of the records could be sent by flying machines broadcast over the world and London's new play or latest sensational dance could be enjoyed in every quarter of the globe within a few days of the initial presentation."

Did they speak with prophetic tongues?

Busy days followed the introduction of the Vitascope. Bitter days, too. Patent wars were pending and all along the line new activities were to be noticed. The Vitascope had begun to have importance. Men were beginning to see money shad.

It was an open game, as Terry

Ramsey says, and anybody might become important over night. Every man who came in contact with the trade, they call it his own, was heartbroken, perhaps many injustices, were to be endured before the industry became conscious of itself, and in its infancy, the actors, actresses, and the audiences were in confusion.

But these internal wrangles need not all be told here. They proved a dragging cloud for the industry, but after all, all industries pass through such periods of unrest and instability. In a great war men die, they are maimed, blinded, diseased. Mothers are bereft of sons, wives of husbands, children of fathers. And yet in the golden sun of victory, these things as lamentable as they are, must be judged in accordance with the

"An Industry's Early Days"

We pass on to—the beginning of the motion picture's consciousness of itself as an art. The filming of "The Passion Play" is the first notable move. Now follow such meager attempts as "The Story of the Fireman," by Edwin Porter, then an Edison cameraman—a subject, by the way, which was utilized for the screen again in the year 1927, under the more fitting title of "The Fire Brigade." But seven and a half years were to pass from the night the first Vitoscope was displayed at Koster & Bial's before a real motion picture with a real plot was to be produced.

"The Great Train Robbery," in which Mr. Porter built upon his technique, as "The Story of the Fireman," is generally regarded as the screen's first effort to tell a story in pictures. It was made by the Edison studios in 1903. Edison was fathering the evolution of the art from the seed of his peep show pictures. "The Great Train Robbery" was a world-wide sensation. It gave rise to a great development in making pictures with stories. Showmen took to the road with it in black tents and made converts to the motion picture entertainment all over the world. It was followed by "The Great Bank Robbery," by "Raffles—The Amateur Cracksman," and by "Trapped by Bloodhounds," or a Lynching at Cripple Creek.

"The Great Train Robbery" also, by chance, gave the screen world its first star—Max Aronson, known later as Broncho Billy. From his day on, the star has been in the ascendant. The motion picture public demands its favorites and whatever can be said for or against the system, the public, as final arbiter, decides the issue.

On April 2, 1902, the first motion picture theater announced its entrance into the world. The Electric Theater, 262 South Main Street, Los Angeles, told the citizens of that city, which later was to become the motion picture capital of the world, that for the price of ten cents one would be glad to provide an hour's amusement in "a vaudeville of moving pictures" including "Capture of the Idle Brothers" and "New York in a Blizzard." Business was so good on the opening night that matinees started the next day. In less than twenty-five years, there were to be more than 20,000 motion picture theaters in this country.

The Electric was the project of Thomas H. Ince, the showman who many and many a year later was to figure again in screen history as one of the founders of First National Exhibitor's Circle, now the world famous First National Pictures, Inc.

There were other tentative beginnings of a screen theater. So far, the career of the motion picture had been as a companion of the variety shows of the day. One of the earlier theaters was opened in 1903 in Newcastle, Pa., by the Warner Brothers, due subsequently to figure conspicuously in the motion picture story.

Meanwhile the peep show motion picture continued to flourish in the penny arcades, of the sort that lingered in the congested regions of the greater cities. These arcades, trivial as they seemed, were to prove mighty agencies of the future, drawing to the picture a personnel that was one day to dominate the industry. Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, and William Fox are among those who made such inconspicuous entries into the world of the films. Mr. Zukor, now president of Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, carries on to-day. Mr. Loew, whose untimely death in the summer of 1927 deprived the industry of one of its most cherished leaders, was the head of Loew's Incorporated, which included Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, makers of "The Big Parade," "Ben Hur," and other notable pictures. William Fox is president of Fox Film Corporation, producer of many screen masterpieces.

While these men were serving their novitiate as purveyors of entertainment to the public in the moving machine of shows, a mighty transition was impending. Thanksgiving week in 1905, Harry Davis, then a real estate operator in New York, and Albert Biddle, a movie projector, a piano and some film in a vacant storeroom, along with ninety-nine seats, and saw what he could do as a showman, with a five-cent admission. The show was "The Great Train Robbery." The experiment was a world-shaking success. The admissions poured through as fast as the one-reel show could be grounded. The East caught fire and in a thousand of the new movie theaters that swept the country. Every week saw hundreds of new nickelodeons opened. By 1907 there were one thousand of them, with new customers for motion pictures, and making for the pictures a new public. Among the newcomers in this wave was Carl Laemmle, now president of Universal Pictures Corporation and a leader in the industry. He opened the White Front Theater, 2622 Milwaukee Avenue in Chicago's West Side and there employed a bright messenger boy by the name of Sam Katz to play the piano. Mr. Katz is now the head of the far-flung Public Theaters.

The coming of this new market put an extra strain on the capabilities of the producing machine of the motion picture industry of the day. The industry had been torn with intense rivalries and patent fights in the courts since 1896, the year the screen was born on Broadway.

But now studios had to be built and a stable organization set up. Hit-and-run methods would not serve.

In 1906 both the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company and the Edison interests, major opponents in the patent struggles, set up large studios to supplant their rooftop plants and backyard production methods.

In 1907, D. W. Griffith, a Kentuckian, a bit of an author and a good deal of an actor, ventured about seeking to sell some "suggestions" for motion pictures. They were real scenarios, but the world had not been interested, at least not for motion pictures. Presently he was employed by the Biograph Company and walked through that old brown and gray block at 11 East Fourteenth Street in New York which was to be the golden gate to fame also for Mack Sennett, whose genius was to evolve a whole把aram of production of motion picture comedy, just as Griffith slightly before him set about the development of the real dramatic art of screen narration. That was in 1908.

The motion picture, warring, needing assistance of its sponsors. A kindly ascendency due to Griffith, was about to go to the wall in the commercial and patent war. Then a practical peace for business' sake came in the truce that took form as the Motion Picture Patents Company, formed by the union of the patents and licensed every picture maker in America. In the analysis of this complex and trying period, and its effects on the industry largely to George Kleine, then the largest distributor of motion pictures in the world, and to Jeremiah J. Kennedy, a consulting engineer and business expert from downtown New York, who became the chieftain of the organization. Discipline came into the industry for a time and it prospered as never before.

Only a few months later, in 1909, a certain little girl, whose name was Josephine Smith, an actress in stock and with one Belasco engagement to her credit, went looking for summer work on the Biograph studio lot. She told the clerk at the inquiry desk that she was "Mary Pickford," her newly-acquired stage name.

Not long ago, a theater in New York put on a special revival of one of Mary Pickford's first pictures—a picture called "The New York Hat." It was crude and quite funny to the sophisticated audience. How they laughed! Back in 1909, it was a startling success. A little, unknown actress played in a film, and her name was Anita Loos. The story was that of a poor girl who wanted an Easter bonnet, a desire shared by her baby brother. A kind preacher, knowing of her longing and of the hard life she led, sent the hat to her. The gossips in the village—Mae Marsh was one of them—complained. They did not understand and Mary's father said he would force the minister to help his daughter. That was what the minister wished to do all along as it turned out. The fashionable 1927 audience clucked, and by their clucking and clapping praised the progress that has been made.

It was the kind of picture Mary Pickford was to make famous—the Cinderella story. "Little Mary," as she was known, became a national sensation. To-day Miss Pickford, one of the survivors of that pristine period of the screen, continues a vital and important personality of the screen, and to a degree that few in any industry know of, is one of its highly capable executives.

A NOTHER BIG scandal is developing in this fillum biz. All on account of that spelling bee contest we started the other day. First Justin Hermann of the Emanuel-Goodwin regional sheets squawks that we framed him to go out and bet his stepson, who trimmed him for five bucks by spelling 6 out of 10 correctly. Now the secretary in question, Miss Georgia Yeager, writes us from Philly. Listen to her plaint:

Dear Phil: What a laugh I got this morning when I picked up THE FILM DAILY and turned to your column, in which you announce to all and sundry that I had won the sum of five bucks from our News Editor. I haven't seen the five yet, but outside of that the story is substantially correct.

What happened is this: The gentleman (?) in question came in broke Friday morning and tried as usual to touch me for a couple of bucks and some cigarettes. Having been stung on numerous other occasions I curtly refused. This aroused his ire and he made certain remarks about my education, offering to bet me that I couldn't spell your list correctly. Being a sporting gal, I accepted the wager and won, but he, the wiper, refused to come across. He intimated that I knew you, and that it was a frame-up to take him for the works.

Think you should call the attention of your readers to this fact and point out the kind of a guy Mr. Hermann is. As to that threat of yours to drop in and see me soon, why not call me on the phone any night at six o'clock. The number is Spruce 9...

That's my home phone. Georgia Yeager.

Dear Georgia: If I can sell my spots for 50 cents I will be able to phone you at Philly tomorrow evening. Otherwise I'll write—if I can borrow a stamp from the mail order dept. Phil.

Motion Pictures Will Go Marching On Forever.

The dear old movies are dead, but the new films will go marching on. The talkies are good for another 15 years, using the 12,000 different stories which the silent films have already run through. After that, science will step in again. The same 12,000 scenarios will be done once more by a perfected color process. After that, the radio movies, projecting pictures at a great distance, will flourish for another 15 years on the same old plots. By that time scientists and industrialists will have worked up some new device, and the old familiar stories will be reshaped, once more. And so on, movies without end.

New York "Times"... Colored Motion Pictures Affecting Changes in Styles...THE great improvement in colored motion pictures and their widespread dissemination, the increasing frequency of style shows, the universal reporting of their striking features over the radio, and the recent beautifully improved color technique of women's magazines with greatly increased circulation, have all made style changes penetrate almost instantaneous throughout the civilized world. Therefore, when her ladyship from the "provinces" visits the great metropolis she is by no means conspicuous on account of the antiquity of her gown, as was the case a couple of decades ago. Indeed, the reverse is quite apt to occur; the small-town damsel with relatively fewer diversions than her city sister is likely to be more keenly alert upon this major problem of womankind and to follow it more assiduously through radios, movies, club discussions, and style magazines.

EDUCATIONAL RELEASING 31 IN FIRST HALF OF 1930

The Mirror
—a column of comment

THE SILENT NEWSREEL does not face any immediate threat of examination, a canvass made by THE FILM DAILY indicates. Many an exhibitor undoubtedly will be loath to get rid of it during the second half of 1930. Although it has become more or less obsolete in many places, there are many who feel that it is a necessity in their towns.

M. P. O. MEMBERS of Michigan have formed a co-operative theatre service company to engage in collective buying, booking and all other phases of theater operation. It will be interesting to see how this plan works out. It is hoped that it will be successful.

STEP INTO the role of a patron of a deluxe house, for a moment, and pay about 75 cents for a ticket. Then develop a thirst for water (as people frequently do) and find that you must pay a penny to buy a fly cup. And you haven’t a penny in change. Wouldn’t you blanket-blank the usher for poor showmanship? It does happen, you know.

Freund stated that this system was being generally used in Germany and that the first recording on the magnetized wire and then transferred in the lab to film or disc. He said that Ufa was using black-and-white film with a color filter for their color effects, and gave it as his opinion that both of these systems would eventually be used in American productions. Freund is scheduled for Hollywood under a contract with Dudley Murphy, director at Paramount Long Island studio, spoke on the technical developments in recent productions with all-color casts.

From Modest and Timid Beginnings
To World Importance

FOLLOWING Mary Pickford’s appearance, a long list of notables came—John Bunny, one of the first of the comedians; lobby Harron; Mabel Normand; Harry Walthall; James Kirkwood. At first the actors from the spoken stage did not like the lea of appearing in moving pictures. They considered pictures egrading and vulgar. But the movies were attracting many actors from the stage and they were developing stars of their own. Mae Marsh, Norma Talmade were being heard from. The late J. Warren Kerrigan and of Maurice Costello became well-known.

Mack Sennett was getting ready to introduce his comedies, the first of which appeared in 1912. While ennet continues to produce comedies, other great names are associated with comedies too, in a list of which are those of Al and Charles H. Hystie, who have achieved distinction in this interesting field. About the time, Adolph Zukor got the idea of “famous players in famous plays.” He secured the American rights of Sarah Bernhardt, whom Sarah Bernhardt played, and from then on the influx of stars was qual to the demand.

Sketching rapidly these eventful days—the names of Lillian and Dorothy Gish begin to appear. Wallace Reid, Clara Kimball Young, Francis Ford, Blanche Sweet, are rising stars of the day. Their motion pictures had now advanced far enough that showing at Koster & Bial’s. It was time for a new section and the new sensation came in 1913 when George Kleine imported “Quo Vadis,” which ran for eighteen to two weeks on Broadway. The motion picture had arrived definitely a major entertainment. The whole world was interested. And only two cars were to elapse until D. W. Griffith’s “Birth of a Nation” opened for a run which was unparalleled until recently. That was March 16, 1915. The picture was shown at the Liberty Theater at $2.00 per ticket and, with its appearance, it may be said that the screen had caught up with its older brother, the stage. Before long, Broadway was to be filled with motion picture theaters.

Meanwhile Jesse Lasky, who had already won fame in the world of vaudeville as a producer and executive, and D. W. De Mille, author of many plays and ibrettos for the stage, had rented a barn in Hollywood, California, and started with an idea for motion pictures. The day of making pictures in New York was nearing its sun-town. The great West with its salu-virous climate, its sunshine, water, mountains, deserts and plains, was beckoning to the movie. To-day we find production centered in California. The explanation is a simple one. California had everything the motion picture director needed. It was made, apparently, for his uses. And so we have the unusual example of an industry, the production of which is centered in California and the distribution and financing of which are centered in New York, three thousand miles away. This has both advantages and disadvantages. Not only are the natural advantages of each place utilized but the viewpoint of East and West can be better ana-lyzed and turned to use.

“Came the day” soon of the serial in 1913-1914, “What Happened to Mary?” was revealed in countless reels. “The Ventures of Kathlyn” were duly recorded. “Dolly of the Dailies” became a national fa-vorite. We suffered with “The Perils of Pauline” and we puzzled our brow to fathom the “Million Dollar Mystery.” “Pearl White, Marguerite Snow, Kathleen Williams, James Cruse” were followed every week by an interested public. And so it has been through all the industry’s his-tory.

The news reels, too, had come as a definite contribution to the screen, for a long time far back as the inauguration of President William McKinley in 1897, in fact, events of historical importance were recorded on motion picture film, but it was not until the inauguration of President Woodrow Wilson that the news reel became a daily feature of the newspaper. To-day we find a dozen great news reel agencies at work with cameramen in every part of the earth constantly focusing their cameras in every land. They witness the pageantry and the tragedies of nations, show the customs and pursuits of all races, showing up a mirror, as it were, to every phase of human ac-tivity with vividness and accuracy.

But, stepping back to catch the thread and flow of development of the motion picture, with its world-wide distribution and its eighteen or nineteen thousand nickelodeons in the United States and Canada, had not yet reached its full status. It was still a “nickelodeon” business.

Adolph Zukor with his long feature pictures of “famous players in famous plays” was still fighting an uphill battle to find a home for the bigger product with the bigger idea. The old, established interests were holding to the nickelodeon idea and inertia was against the militant opponent of the new conception of the films and their function.

But on April 14, 1914, the Strand Theater opened on Broadway in New York, a theater on a par with the pre-tentiousness of speaking stage houses, devoted exclusively to the motion picture. The opening picture was a nine-reel version of “The Spoilers” from Rex Beach’s novel, produced by William Selig, a member of the Patents Company group who was leaning to the new bigger picture idea. The Strand was under the di-rection of Samuel Leland Rothafel, the man whom the world was in years to come to know as “Roxy,” one of the great showmen of the era. The Strand was the manifestation of a new idea which was to triumph. The Nickelodeon type theater fingers were here and there as a fossil sur-vival like the occasional arcades, and the United States has approximately 20,250 screen theaters, and the world total of them is approximately 50,000.

It would be interesting to relate many movements of the busy, crowded years of this period. There is a fascinating flow of events in the manner in which W. W. Hodkinson and Herman Wober brought over to the new order the best that the older generation could do. They had experience as pioneers, especially as that service was applied to the distribution of the big new feature dramas for Paramount distribution; how J. D. Vidor, maker of potential "theatrical robbery," went over to the feature idea with Famous Players, bearing with him the connecting link with the vast technical lore of the original Edison organization. I would like to tell you the amazing stories of the late William Rock of Vitagraph and his associates, all famous pioneers, and of Sigmund Lubin and of the rise of Stanley Mastbaum, and the ex- colling careers of Richard Rowland, Robert H. Cochrane, Nicholas and Joseph Schenck, Hal Roach and others. They have labored well and achieved much. And I would like, to tell you of Pathé Exchange’s pioneering in the news reel and of First National Pictures, Inc., being formed by exhibitors and the Hammons and the Educational Pic-tures, Inc., but these must be left until another day. The story of the pictures, as must be the entrance of Joseph P. Kennedy into the industry.

I would like to speak of William Hays, the great Western star and hero of boys of all lands, and of Tom Mix, of like fame; of the first efforts of Douglas Fairbanks, that artist, ideal of an age who has brought romance and the light of happiness within the reach of countless listless folk until they, too, share in the glories of a new existence; of Hugo Riesenfeld and the development of music in the motion picture thea-ter; of Jackie Coogan and the child actors of the "fourth war," and, the part the motion picture industry played in it. I would like to talk about Cecil B. De Mille’s “The King of Kings”—the potentiality of which cannot be estimated—about De Mille himself, master craftsman, who has dared to go ahead, blazing his own trail with screen productions of far-reaching consequence. But I must move on with the sweeping tide that brings the motion picture indus-try to an appreciation of its impor-tance and of its opportunities.
Powerful drama!

A MIGHTY, SPECTACULAR EPIC OF MINSTREL LIFE

Get set for The Grand
Marvelous acting!

SAYS PETE HARRISON

"One of the most powerful dramas produced for a long time. There are times when it is hard for the spectator to suppress his emotions. The scenes where the heroine upbraids her husband and tells him that she would rather kill her child than allow it to come into this world is one of the most powerful seen in pictures since moving pictures have come into being. There are other powerfully dramatic situations all the way through. Helen Twelvetrees, as the heroine, does marvelous acting. I doubt if there is another screen actress that would have made the part more realistic. Fred Scott, too, does good work; he has a good voice and in his part as a minstrel he does good singing. Everyone in the cast, in fact, does good work. The story is by Edmund Goulding; it was directed skillfully by Fred Newmeyer. The tone quality is excellent, the lines all being clear.”

HARRISON'S REPORTS

"The Grand Parade in this case is going to be a parade of customers to the box offices for this picture is a natural, made-to-order-hit.”

Better Results Expected From Playing Percentage

PARAMOUNT has announced its decision to eliminate certain pictures and sell another group. The eliminations, it is felt, would prove poor box-office, so they will not be made. On the other hand, the producing unit feels the new additions will bring them in.

This seems to be a potent argument in favor of playing percentage. Paramount has rearranged its schedule because most of its contracts are now made on percentage scale and it is now directly interested in the success of the picture in the individual theater. Percentage makes it a partner in the profits and it is more eager to give the exhibitor profitable pictures instead of figuring the flat rental basis. Of course, Paramount and all other companies always have sought to make a good product to influence bookings for the following season, but now it has a more direct interest in the fortunes of each individual picture and not merely the group.

Sound and Talking Pictures
No Longer An Experiment

TO-DAY it is no longer a question of experimentation. The success of the sound and talking film is a demonstrated fact. So much so that the footlight theater of Broadway has suffered a stroke of fear and bewilderment from which it is not likely to recover for years. There is a reason for this. The reason is, now that the films speak they provide a more satisfactory entertainment (because of the breadth of their view and the comprehensiveness of their approach) than does the stage, and they don’t cost so much.

PAULA GOULD, returned from Hollywood press-agency experiences, has sold “Smart Set Magazine” a yarn entitled “Easy” and intends to go into this fiction-writing business with serious intent. ……….. Joseph Santley, recently of Broadway but now of Hollywood, will direct Helen Twelvetrees and Fred Scott in a circus talker which Pathe will make. All the w. k. circus noises will be included and only the aroma of sawdust, peanuts and pink lemonade (if these things have aromas) will be missing.

Chester Conklin will give the girls of the 86th St. neighbor-hood a treat for three days beginning tomorrow, when he appears as the vaudeville headliner at Proctor’s 86th St. ……….. J. P. Goring, the Criterion manager with a penchant for statistics, has figured out that “The Love Parade” is 21,300 tickets ahead of “Wings” in a similar period at the same house.

Ned E. Depinet plans a society premiere for the world debut of “Son of the Gods,” First National color special starring Richard Barthelmess. J. F. Clemenger, who used to be an asset in trade paper work in these parts, is back in New York, now working on the recording of radio broadcasts. He recently was production director for Columbia Broadcasting System.

Do you know the important milestones of the industry over the last dozen years? The FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK for 1930 will give them to you in chronological order.

HANG UP another record for speed in the way of a Broadway opening. The occasion was the gala opening of Tiffany’s “Party Girl” at the Gaiety on Broadway. “Sky Hawk” was playing at this house and scheduled to close at 10:45 P. M. on Dec. 31. Just exactly one hour and a quarter later—the stroke of the New Year—“Party Girl” was opened and greeted the throngs of merry-makers along the Mazda Boulevard. Al Selig, director of advertising and publicity, can take a brace of bows for this publicity stunt. He had his staff on their toes, and the electric signs, lobby displays and all else that goes with a Broadway opening were in evidence as the crowds rolled in.

Martin Starr, as secretary of the AMPAS, speaks for that organization and tenders the members the fol-lowing for the coming year: “That the coming New Year bring unto you the complete realization of all your day-dreams, hopes and ambitions, and that every day of the forthcoming 365 be replete with a new, sublime and beautiful adventure.”

  Well, that’s how a guy is affected who works for a concern publishing “True Romances.” And not to overlook Macfadden’s other publication, “Physical Culture,” next year Martin is going to say: “That the coming year bring you an abundance of win, vigor and vitality, and that every day shall be replete with a new, sublime and beautiful muscular development on your vegetarian diet.”

Western Electric Sound System is manufactured — not merely assembled

Loud speakers, transformers, tubes — all the parts through which the speech current flows — are designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories and manufactured by Western Electric.

Every part is perfectly balanced electrically to work in harmony and at highest efficiency with every other part. Each is designed and manufactured to fit mechanically and electrically into its place in the complete system. The result is electrical teamwork — and quality reproduction — such as no assembled system can hope to equal.

Many of the parts which go into the Western Electric Sound System are similar to those used in the nation’s telephone system. They are the results of more than fifty years of research and experience in the manufacture of voice transmission apparatus.

The Western Electric Sound System is built to produce the highest standard of quality reproduction demanded by a quality conscious public — and to render that service dependably over a long period. It does not sacrifice quality for price.

Western Electric’s undivided responsibility — covering the manufacture, installation and servicing of its Sound System — is your assurance of high quality, trouble-free performance.

Construction has started at the RKO Coast studio on a theater specially designed to accommodate the Spoor-Bergen wide screen film.

When it is now possible to secure a Raytone Flameproof Screen which is not only non-inflammable but also possesses the most beautiful projection surface yet achieved in the motion picture industry.

Raytone Flameproof Sound Screens have been adopted by the Electrical Research Products Company for use with Western Electric Sound System, installed in over three thousand theatres in the United States and over one thousand theatres in other parts of the world. No higher tribute to the efficiency of Raytone Flameproof Sound Screens is possible.

EXTRACTS FROM LABORATORY TESTS

Columbia University, New York City.
“In all of the above tests the material charred without supporting any flame either during the application of fire or after removal from the fire.”

“From the above tests it is evident that Raytone Flameproof Sound Screen Material will not support combustion and is non-inflammable.”

Electrical Testing Laboratories, New York City.
“In view of the above we conclude that the material will not of itself support combustion and in that sense can be said to be ‘non-inflammable.’”

The only flameproof sound screen approved by both Fire Department and Motion Picture Theatres Association of the Government of the District of Columbia.

PARAMOUNT TO MAKE TALKER OF HEADS UP

Another New York musical comedy will be transferred to sound pictures. Paramount will make a dialogue version of "Heads Up," Aarons and Freedley show, at its Long Island studio, Jesse L. Lasky announces. Although final production plans have not yet been made it is expected that a number of principals from the Broadway cast will play their parts in the film version and the original chorus may be used.

THREE STUDIOS NOW ACTIVE IN THE EAST

With the RCA Graemeyer studio shut down for extensive alterations in the East is now centered in the Paramount studios in Astoria, the Warner studios in Flatbush and the Metropolitan studios in Fort Lee, N. J.

The latter studio, long idle, has taken a new lease on life with Pathe and others among the list of producers now making pictures there. The Graemeyer studio expects to resume operations in about four months. When remodeled, it will be twice the present size with thoroughly modern equipment that will place it among the front ranks of motion picture studios both here and on the Coast.

Short Shots from New York Studios

By HARRY N. BLAIR

MURRAY ROTH, dean of short subject directors, is going the pace at the Eastern Vitaphone studio, having just spent three days with a color reel made with Eddie Buzzell. He is a model for detail. His hobby is getting unusual "shots" from camera angles.

June Collyer was so enthused about the way Tom Molloy photographed her in "Pleasant Sins" that she wanted to take him back to the Coast with her. But Tom, who is one of the few people really born in New York, wouldn't leave this old town for anything.

Murray Roth, director-in-chief of the Warner Vitaphone studio, directed Lorraine Howard and Florence Newcomb in the Vitaphone Variety, "Life's Like That." started out to be a designer. While studying art in Chicago, her funds gave out, so she landed a job in a night club ensemble on the strength of her ability to design costumes for the show. Not long after she was crooning songs for Columbia records which led to her present success.

Eddie Buzzell, who has appeared in "Good Boy" and other musical comedies, has been taken on by the Vitaphone Corp. to make a new Vitaphone Variety, following the success of his former effort, 'Hello There.'

Making motion pictures may be a trying business but it's much to be preferred to working in a chewing gum factory, according to the "Big Pond" company who recently made some scenes at the American Chicle Co. factory. Both Hobart Henley, director, and Maurice Chevalier, star, returned to the Paramount studio saturated with powdered sugar which had to be removed with an air hose.

"Wedding Belles" is the title of a Vitaphone Variety just completed at Warner Bros. Eastern studios under the direction of Arthur Hurley. Lorraine Howard and Florence Newcomb, of vaudeville, are featured.

Agnes DeMille, daughter of William DeMille, recently made a short at the Paramount Long Island studio. It is called "The Ballet Class," and includes the best features of her original dance recitals given at the Roxy and other theaters. Miss DeMille was assisted by Luigi Alberti, ballet master at the Metropolitan Opera House for fifteen years, as well as twelve "Gamby" girls.

The American Sound Recording studio has just undergone a complete reorganization. Charles Steele Peterson is now general manager, with L. Thompson assisting, as business manager.

The management has complete banking arrangements, it is stated, which will enable them to carry on an ambitious production program which includes 12 feature pictures, 18 two-reel "Jimmie Follies" and one reel subjects.

Production has started on "Surprise to All," a short subject by Ben Caron, female impersonator, who will be directed by John Noble.

Fingerlin Cuba Bound

During Mr. Fingerlin's absence, his office activities will be carried on by Arthur Cozine, assistant to the executive manager.

Helen ("Sugar") Kane. Paramount star, joined the great army of commuters last week by appearing at Proctor's theater in Newark as part of her present campaign to make the sandville public "boop boop-dee-dee" conscious.

"Money, Money, Money" is the box-office title of a Vitaphone Variety which Edmund Joseph is preparing to direct at the local Warner Workshop, with Homer Mason and Marguerite Keeler featured.

The weather man must be having lots of fun these days, Irvin Willalt left Hollywood in the midst of a cool spell which necessitated heavy pelts. Upon arriving in New York, he found this buoy enjoying spring-like weather which meant changing back into lighter clothing.

When "The Bubble Party," by John Hobbie, is started tomorrow at the Warner Vitaphone studios, most of the men who played this skit in a recent Lamb's Gamble, will appear in their original roles. Arthur Hurley will put the following in their places: George Sweet, Frank Aitworth, Don Dillaway, Arthur Hartley and Griffin Crafts.
“SEE AND HEAR” By W. R. HAYES

From Chaotic Experimentation to Organized Co-operation

Chapter III

“Organization of an Industry”

SLOWLY, very slowly, the industry was growing into the consciousness of its own responsibility. The first years of the industry’s development were necessity chaotic. When keen men saw the commercial possibilities in it, they set out feverish, hasty on the world-old quest for gold just as the Forty-niners did when word of the discovery came from Sutter’s Hill in California. There was competition of the most erest sort and for that matter there still is. There can be no monopoly of brains, the keystone of picture production. Competition is essential to progress. But the ethics of the competition have evolved. They have mounted constantly. The old careless, helter-skelter days are over. The chaitmen of the motion picture now realize their responsibilities as custodians of not only one of the greatest industries in the world but of possibly the most potent instrument in the world for moral, religious, and educational influence and education, and certainly one of the most universal mediums of artistic expression. They realize that never before has there existed any means by which the genius of a people could be so wittily and dramatically presented to all other people and they govern themselves accordingly.

From a business standpoint, the motion picture industry has settled down and is operating along the old, common sense lines which were followed by the American industries in the latter months of 1921, a period of consciousness of responsibility. Recognition of the motion picture as something greater than a usual entertainment for the masses—began to reveal itself. The industry committed itself to an active policy of betterment. Leaders in the industry met and considered what steps to take. The result was an association of producers and distributors known as The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

The purposes of that association were chiefly to foster the common interests of those engaged in the motion picture industry by establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards of motion picture production, by developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and the general usefulness of the motion picture, and by reforming abuses relative to the industry.

Associated with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America is the Association of Motion Picture Producers of California, an organization designed to set into practice the ideals of responsibility and discharge of duty which actuate every branch of the organized and alert motion picture industry of today.

The industry had by now passed beyond the state of an entertainment force only. The screen was being used in many directions. It had become an aid to the educator, an ally of the scientist, the servant of clergymen, the friend of industries. How then those other agencies experimenting with the motion picture to get the best results from the screen? We found isolated instances of schools using pictures to help the teacher. We found a few scientific films in use. Churches were ready to show religious pictures if they could get the ones they wanted. In industries were beginning to understand that in addition to showing our clothes, office equipment, machinery, automobiles, furniture, architecture to all parts of the world, films could perform certain useful things for industry at home. Motion pictures could teach employees better methods of operation, more skilful use of tools, better ways of living, safety methods. To all these legitimate demands the association turned its attention.

To recite the activities undertaken by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America would almost require the time of their accomplishment. Obviously the first needs were to insure proper entertainment, to insure proper support for the worthwhile pictures, and to lend assistance wherever it was needed in making the motion picture a greater servant of the world.

The first move was to make sure of the improvement in the wholesomeness of the entertainment. The motion picture theater is a community meeting house. There gather the families—fathers, mothers, and children. Motion picture success is based largely upon its ability to please the entire family and the success that has come to the industry, the real affection with which it is regarded by the millions, is genuine proof that the industry is succeeding in that effort.

Many persons have asked, “Why haven’t we seen in the movie many of those recent books and plays that deal in themes and situations and topics which in previous years were discussed only in whispers”? The industry was determined that this type of book and play should not become the prevalent type of motion picture and to prevent this, set up The Formula, which operates as follows:

When any member company of the Motion Picture Producers and Dist-
Academy Surveys Achievements of 1929

REVIEW ACTIVITIES OF COAST PRODUCTION BODY

Conciliation

The Conciliation Committee with the conciliatory power, as the cornerstone of the institution is based on the principle of mutual understanding and is not compulsory in its operation. Complaints may be filed by any person or company in the production industry against any other person or company in the industry who may be carrying on the production industry against any other person or company in the industry who may be carrying on.

Each complaint is first considered by the Secretary who may endorse it or return it to the complainant at his discretion. For example, matters involving actors go to the Actors' Executive Committee, whereas matters involving writers go to the Writers' Executive Committee, and so on. The Executive Committee is thus referred to in examining the complaint together with the response, if any has been received, and endeavors if possible to bring about an adjustment. Failing in that, the Conciliation Committee reports the complaint to the Conciliation Committee of the Academy, composed of one representative from each Branch. The Conciliation Committee may then act upon the efforts at conciliation in the event of a hearing being held. The matter is then referred back to the Conciliation Committee in the event of a hearing not being held. The Conciliation Committee, of the 21 cases during the year which could not be disposed of without further hearing of the complaint, is a member of the Conciliation Committee, "be either complainant or respondent, or in no case in partnership with any person, firm or corporation appearing either as complainant or respondent, who shall have been appointed to sit on the Conciliation Committee. His place shall be filled by the President, from the Branch to which the disqualifying member belongs, as provided by the Conciliation Committee of branch.

Of the 30 cases during the past year which could not be disposed of without further hearing of the complaint, 19 were favorably disposed of to the following at a dinner on May 16, 1929.

Academy Sound School

With the completion of the tenth lecture demonstration before the fourth section of the Academy Sound School in Fundamentals of Sound Recording and Reproduction for Motion Pictures, the Academy Sound School is now ready to commence the regular courses for the next year beginning December 16. In the fourth section of the school, 365 studio employees had been given two weeks and a half of technical and professional instruction by the leading sound experts in the industry. Attendance in the last four sections, to which enrollment had been limited, continued at an average of approximately 100 students throughout the course and the interest and expressions of satisfaction from the students and practical value of the instruction, the results of the examinations, and favorable testimony from the students.

The first of its kind in the motion picture industry, and a pioneering step in industrial self-education, the Academy Sound School had its origin in a meeting of the technical committee of the Sound Film Section of the Academy, and was recommended by the Academy Board in the words that were made available to studio employees.

Extension of this educational work within the industry is projected for the coming year.

Preview Service

Committees representing national organizations of students and clubs meet daily in the Academy's projection theater by arrangement between the Motion Picture Producers' Association of America, Women's University Club, and the various organizations. These new members of the Projection Service, Women's University Club, D. A. R., Woman's Club, and the American Library Association are invited to the International Federation of Catholic Alumni, and Y. M. C. A.
John Eberson, one of America's leading theatre architects, will edit a special construction, reconstruction and re-equipment section in THE 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK.

Mr. Eberson's extensive experience as a theatre architect plus the fact that he is the originator of the atmospheric theatre idea makes his statements of such tremendous importance that everyone engaged in the building or operating of theatres will be especially interested in this section of the 1930 Year Book.

Dewey Bloom, representative for Gertrude Lawrence, who recently left the Mt. Sinai minus a 'tissue' and now is up in Montreal trying to recuperate. Before leaving Dewey planned a special showing of "Candelight" for the press, scheduled this Wednesday at the Empire. Of course he would pick a matinee.....here's one for the exploiters, M. Witmark & Sons, effected a tie-up with Wrigley & Sons with "Singing in the Bathtub." The Gas Co, in its monthly publication, spread itself with a two color column and suggested an automatic water heater.

Joe Burke, Philadelphia lad, teamed with Al Dubin, is credited with the biggest array of song hits during 1929, so says Witmark. He will admit the kid put over some nifties for the Warner Vitaphone productions. Eddie Dowling had another luncheon cast his way. On Monday Ed will be guest of honor at the Advertising Men's Post No. 2 American Legion, at the Army-Navy Club, N. Y.

Over at the Fox office a national campaign is on for selection of titles suitable for production. Everyone connected with the organization has the opportunity to submit titles and the winner to share in on the dough. Not a bad idea, but we sure hate to wade through some of them ...... Bernard Pollack, sales manager for Witmark, is scheduled to leave on a tour to the Coast soon.

Patie stepped out and signed Maurice Coons, short story writer, who now is en route to Culver City, Pathe producing grounds. Coons, under the pen name of Armitage Trail, rings stuff into many periodicals. He also has a few novels on his list of works......Eleanor Baldwin Cass, fencer, who made a picture for Pathe some months ago, leaves for the Coast Saturday......Dimitri Tiomkin, Russian composer and concert pianist, leaves for the Emanuel Coast studios Saturday where he will begin work on the first of a series of numbers he has composed......Clarence MacKain, formerly connected with the Columbia home office, has resigned.

Don Hancock was operated on for appendicitis Friday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital and was reported doing very nicely.

Who's Who in the various companies in the industry is comprehensively covered in the forthcoming 1930 Film Daily Year Book.

--AND THAT'S THAT--

By PHIL M. DALY

Since we published that article about Warren Nolan's flair for literary style in his publicity for United Artists, we have been swamped with manuscripts from aspiring authors all over the United States. This kolyum certainly goes east, north, south and west, and it is all we can do to keep it from going to the devil. This morn we are in receipt of the following:

3 Rivers Ranch, with Pepples Gayle, Mont.

Dear Editor: I am enclosing several poems of my best work which I thought you as much as that manuscript from Mr. Nolan. I don't think it was so hot, but then you're the editor, and probably know more about it than I do. I will accept your usual rates, but of course will expect more after it is printed. I am known as the Poet Laureate of Butte and the West is proud of me. Yours truly, Hubert Englebert Block (Poet Laureate).

Mr. Block sends us four poems hitherto unpublished. They are "The Birthplace of a Soul," "Murder," "October Evening on the Butte," and the one appearing below. After you read "Regret," you will probably want to read "Murder," or feel like it. Then if "Murder" goes good, we will try "The Birthplace of a Soul" on you. This poet Block certainly has something. What it is we're not quite sure. So we're into...

Regret

Why should I live?
The world is cold;
Why should I live
Till I am old?
'Tis best to die
In bleak despair
As well in Butte
As anywhere.

A Digest of Current Opinion

The most unfair attack upon the critics is upon the score of trying to be entertaining and personal. Just why dulness should be regarded as one of the requisites of dramatic reviewing it is difficult to understand, since it is the gravest sin in the theater, one might expect it to be thought equally heinous in play reporting. Unless the reviewer is reasonably lively, unless he provides something of a side show, no one is going to pay any attention to him, and he may be gentle and constructive all over the place and you won't be able to perceive it. As for being personal, it must be obvious that a piece of criticism can be nothing else, and that the franker it is in that respect the fairer it will be in the opportunities provided for checking upon it.

Remarkable Progress Made

By Talkers in One Year

There was no stage comedy in 1929 so uproariously funny as was the film "The Cock-Eyed World." "Bulldog Drummond" and "Madame X," with voice and sound, were brilliant dramatic productions. And "Married in Hollywood," "The Broadway Melody," "Rio Rita" and "Hallelujah" represented an astonishing variety of musical productions of the first order. Nothing on Broadway surpassed them. This is worth notice, since it must be remembered that little more than a year has been devoted seriously to the application of the sound device. If the best of the spoken drama and musical comedy can be equaled in the audible pictures after one bare year of progress, what may five years bring?

Musical.

A scene from the stage page, given modern trimmings and produced with pep and general high quality. Bernice Claire, the “Nanette” of the story, looks like star material. She has got a big time stuff. The plot deals with a Bible manufacturer who gets in all sorts of jams, innocently enough, while his wife, an ex-singer, has become an attractive femm that can’t miss, especially when given

BRITISH LIGHT COMEDY
THERE LIFE HAS CHARM AND FINENEERACTERIZATION.
WILL PLEASE INTELLIGENT AUDIENCES.

Light comedy, produced by British International. Adapted from the novel by Eden Phillpotts. Here is a delightful character study of Eng lish rural life of the present day. It moves with a grace and quaint charm that is refreshing.
But it does seem as if the director had missed some of the finer shadings of humor and droll touches that the famous novel ist’s work contains. As the conceited elderly farmer, in search of a wife, James Thomas appears far too refined and intelligent for the role.
It is surprising that he was able to make this characterization very telling in spite of the photoplay miscasting.
Cutting from 11 reels to a short seven has spoiled some sequences.
But allowing for all this, the quaint English scenes and customs, and the typical Devonshire characters are delightful. A fresh, charming offering that should please those who favor light comedies.

Because the plot is the same short story of a dancing team and the cus tomary professional and love affair difficulties they encounter on their next stage tour. But, while its variant is safely out of Hollywood to Broadway, this picture inevitably will be compared with other productions about backstage life. And it will suf f by comparison. Besides its familiar story, which is badly broken up to permit inserts of singing, dancing, posing etc., the film has the added trouble of cut reels that are only-so-so, while the comedy end has been neglected and the heart interest is mild. But there is a fairly long Edward G. Robinson-type of role so that is a comedianscary, and several big girls tableaux in Technicolor that rank high as pictorial art. Ruby Valentine and Helen Morgan do a brief number apiece. Though the picture as a whole may disappoint, the Curtain and Alice Faye do a good ets his wife, she hikes up to a Calif ornia college and marries the and the proprietor has sworn this to keep the innocent girl from getting weak climax since it is only reported

Drama of the underworld. This is a relash of several racketeers, very much in demand. It’s nothing noteworthy to pull it out of the rut. The action is rather thin, and it is overloaded with dialogue.
Robert Armstrong is good as the racketeer who befriends the girl and helps her dope addict sweetheart to stage a comeback, for which the girl promises to marry him. She sticks to her promise, but the cops get the racketeers with their bullets, leaving the girl free to marry her loved one. Carol Lombard proves a real surprise, and does her best work to date. In fact this is the first opportunity she has had to prove

With a good and long running song,

Another Hollywood Visit

With Eddie Lambert as guide, this is an issue of the snapshot series consisting of informal shots of Joan Crawford and hubby, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paul Whitman, Carl Lamelle, Miss Martha Ternahan, Minna Gombell, Candida, John Wayne, Marjorie Rambeau, and some other glamorous stars. It is a smooth-cut, well-timed comic musical with all the right touches of pathos. Miss Crawford, with her usual good humor, makes an interesting appearance as a comic "starlet," and both Wayne and Gombell give their best performances. A very interesting and amusing comedy.

The Hal Roach gang of gunfighters is imbued with the spirit of being kind to animals. So they go around and open up chicken coops, mice traps, dogcatcher wagons and other prisons for members of the dumb kingdom. One of the boys, having been unkind to the pets, has a dream that he is on trial, with an owl as judge, a monkey as prosecuting attorney and a flock of egg layers as jury. Clever and humorous.

Greater Film Miracles Ahead

Harry M. Warner Declares

described the new story technique made necessary by the talkers.

"The perfection of synchronization is here," Warner declared. "While we are bringing the present inventions to a constantly higher plane of performance, the mechanical brains of the production companies are concentrating on such problems as full natural color and the three dimensional tone. The latter will make the screen seem, not a flat surface, but a complete room or country side with perspective in all its true values. A sculptured quality will be added to movement, sound and color. The stereopticon of childhood days is under going a magical transformation. "I do not believe there is a responsible ex- perience in the production picture industry who has not ceased to concern himself primarily with the making of movies and who does not put a great personal investment in the develop- ment of a high service to mankind on the part of the medium with whose custody our work and lives are in the hands of the people we have trusted us.

"The story who stands outside the great motion picture industry and cavalts at it must be very inisiore or very ignorant. The day is wide open for him to come inside and help. What he may tell us of merit and practicality in the improvement of pictures is entertained in "The open door," that expressive phrase which Will H. Hays contends not mere gesture but as motion pictures are con- cerned. We invite the leadership of such people as are interested in helping us to make motion pictures increasingly better."

CHESTER FREDERICKS IS HIGHLIGHT AT PARAMOUNT

Chester Fredericks, a youthful step- per with a lot of nifty tricks in his feet, is one of the chief shining lights on the current Paramount stage pro- gram, a Boris Petroff musical show labeled "Modes and Models," headed by Andy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees. With his individual routine and agile movements, Fredericks brings a heavy round of applause. Another strong number is offered by Montrose and Reynolds, who do a neat line of comedy patter that keeps the audience laughing from start to finish. Brenk's Golden Harp, a per- fectly timed act, with the animal and its train- er all painted up in gold effect, also score big in an artistic presentation of statutory subjects. For vocal enter- tainment, in addition to the crooning of Vallee, who draws his usual hom- age, there is some delightful stuff from Angela, with Cleo Dunn and Draper also sing and dance in a pleasing ani- mated rag doll number, while the Fred Evans Lightening Steppers provide strong reinforcement in the way of an ensemble background. The Jesse Crawford's pipe some selections from "The Love Parade" and throw it in if I Had A Talking Picture of You" for good measure.

Windsor Picture Plays, Inc., has moved from 318 E. 46th St. to larger quarters in the Godfrey Bldg., 729 7th Ave.

MORLEY.”
Proper Functioning of Horns is Outlined by A. I. Abrams

There are two types of speakers which are commercially available: the electrodynamic cone type and the other is the electro-dynamic unit with exponential horn. Aside from the fact that the electrodynamic cone is about 25 per cent as efficient electrically as the electro-dynamic unit with the exponential horn, and aside from the fact that the cone horn carries a good deal of booming, sieving and cracking which is due to the diaphragm resonating, we do not think the cone horn is a proper speaker to use in a theater, inasmuch as the high frequencies are reflected in a very narrow band from the center of the cone. Therefore, the high frequencies come from the edge of the baffle, which is quite a distance from the speaker. Besides the response being slightly out of phase, if we step off this narrow band, we lose all of the highs entirely while maintaining sound. An electrodynamic horn unit with an exponential horn is extremely directional, forcing all the sound directly in front of the speaker. The air front of the speaker becomes a perfectly smooth, full mass, which fills the theater completely with sound. Where speech is being reproduced, it is evident that the horn is completely out of phase, that the speaker and the horn are distinct and individual instead of being joined.

With reference to the exponential type of horn, this particular type is used in preference to the conehorn. It has been shown experimentally that all horns have a given size, a given length and a given area terminal, the exponential horn projects sound uniformly over the complete frequency range. Just what is an exponential horn? It is a horn which extends exponentially, or to put it more simply, it is a horn whose areas are double at equal intervals along its length. These intervals determine the low cut-off of the horn. If these intervals are short the low cut-off is high, if the intervals are long the cut-off is low. It is unnecessary in this article to go into the conditions which are necessary in the expansion required for a given cut-off, but we will mention that if every 12 inches of cycles is desired, it is customary to double the horn diameter every 12 inches. With a horn of 128 cycles is desired, the areas double every 6 inches, and etc. In addition to the horn's area, if a very low cut-off frequency is desired, in order to prevent resonance of the horn, the horn must be made of a different material and in a thickness to conform to the cut-off for which the horn is designed. A horn with a cut-off of 64 cycles must have a bell opening approximating 2100 square inches. If this bell opening is made considerably smaller, there will be a good deal of resonance at the bell which will be very unpleasant.

Inasmuch as low cut-offs are necessary for horns built for theater use, these horns require extremely long air columns, from about 10 to 20 feet. It is necessary, therefore, to coll these horns up in some way in order to save space. The bells that are made should be made at points where the sound is very narrow, so that the inside travel and the outside travel of the wave front are equal. Inasmuch as a horn is a carrier and projecting sound which is a complete whole in itself, having all the harmonics and qualities of the individual instruments being reproduced through it, it is essential that it have no resonance of its own. For this reason, very many horns on the market are failures owing to the fact that the walls of the horn are extremely resonant. Paper, plaster, thin metal, thin wood, combinations of any of these will all make for extremely resonant horns. Of course, if these particular types of material could be prevented, but this would result in horns that are commercially impractical on account of extreme weight and cost. Wood should be a minimum of 1" thick, paper about 2", plaster about 4" and metal at least 1¾". From this can be seen that horns manufactured from any of these types of materials become extremely too bulky and too expensive to produce.

The Raco, for theater use, employs a material of cloth which is impregnated with a gelatine substance, and it can be cut to any temperatures of over 350 degrees, where the moisture is driven off and the horn is baked hard. Owing to the fact that this horn is made over a metal horn, which horn is taken out after the horn is completed, the interior of the horn is an unbroken surface from its initial opening to its bell. This method of manufacture is patented by this company and gives an extremely light and extremely rigid horn, and one that is adapted for all types of hard usage without fear of damage. It has practically no resonance owing to the fact that it is made out of cloth, and it is therefore an ideal sound projector.

Since horns are only projectors of sound, it is necessary to have some device on the small end of the horn to create a sound and wave motion. This, for theater use should be an electrodynamic type of unit, and must be of very high quality, as the horn like the unit, which is a speaker complete, must give projection of sound in a moving picture theater that is as nearly perfect as it is possible to obtain, as otherwise it would be evident in the proceeds of the box office.

A electro-dynamic horn unit manufactured by Raco for use with the horn has a marvelous frequency response, can withstand the complete undistorted output from the commercial amplifiers, can pass thru the conditioned potatyped diaphragm that it utilizes, and can give good reproduction, will stand under continuous use for an unlimited time without damage.

Claims New Film Coating Process Stops Breakage

Triple life can be given to prints at no more expense than ordinary processing by a new indestructible coating is claimed in a patent by Dr. Albert Fiedler of Weehawken, N. J., and used by Empire Laboratories of New York. The coating is incorporated in the gelatine over projectors only and is a hard permanent lubricant that rides smoothly and silently through the projector and does not wear off as in the case of waxing. Use of this coating is especially designed for the sound track to prevent breaking and smearing of pictures, thus reducing troubles to a minimum.

New Contner-Ross Lens Installed

Uniontown, Pa.—The State here has added the new Contner-Ross projection lens apparatus to their Western Electric equipment. This is a new invention designed to improve the viewing cinema, it is claimed, and does away with the necessity of "masking" one side of the screen giving the audience a full sized picture throughout the performance.

No unsightly Perforations

Clear, realistic pictures, freedom from eye-strain, and natural tone quality is necessary to win and hold your patronage.

To insure projection as good as you had before Sound, to get the best reproduction from your sound equipment, you must have the right kind of a screen.

Vocalite Sound Screen is proven best by scientific test. Many successful installations have proved it to be superior in light, definition, and tone quality. It is the only screen optically and chemically correct for the projection of Colored Pictures.

Full information will be sent on request, cost no higher than any good screen.

Organization of an Industry

To insure support for the better type of pictures, the industry invited great national citizen organizations with millions of members interested in social service, education, religion, cívics, to associate themselves with the organized industry in bringing about the results desired. The result was an organization which was unique—a Public Relations Committee.

The committee had its own officers, a paid secretary, and a smaller executive committee. For nearly three years the Committee was a functioning body. Under its inspiration great interest was aroused throughout the country in supporting the best pictures. Children’s performances, known as The Saturday Morning Movies, developed and prospered. In its own office, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in co-operation with the Public Relations Group, selected fifty-two complete programs of pictures of special interest to children. They were shown in many theaters throughout the country on Saturday mornings with a standard admission price of ten cents. When the programs became outmoded, they were withdrawn but the movement continued. Now in many cities and towns special Saturday morning performances are given under the auspices of interested public groups who co-operate with the exhibitors, the pictures being selected from the current output of the studios.

In the spring of 1925, the Public Relations Committee, finding the work it had sponsored had become a permanent and actual part of the organized industry, asked that the committee be dissolved and a Department of Public Relations be established within the association. This was done. A small active committee remained and the advice and assistance of the larger group are still gladly received. The policy of the new department became immediately that of “The Open Door.” This meant that every individual and every organization wherever located was cordially invited to bring constructive advice and suggestions to the industry. The response has been most gratifying and out of the cooperation have come splendid advancements in many lines.

In 1926, a Department of Industrial and Public Relations was opened in an effort to make sure that the working conditions of motion picture employees were kept the best in the world and to develop suitable material for use in the pictures and its treatment. A Studio Committee was organized, with a representative from every studio responsible for what goes into pictures. In advance of production expert advice is asked, from our State Department, from ambassadors from foreign countries. Harry, church groups, education officials, civic leaders, and others whose opinions can be accepted.

One very concrete example of how the Open Door has helped is to be found in the establishment in Hollywood of an institution that is unique in business—a free casting bureau for extra people. The free casting bureau is operated, without cost to the employees, by the producing company and there are registered eighteen thousand persons who are qualified to work as extras. Some are qualified because they are known, others because they possess a fine growth of whiskers, some because they look like Italians or German or French, some because they own dress suits and can wear them in a distinguished manner, some because they own horses and can ride them.

These extra work from day to day. Each day's work is a job: 330-397 jobs were given in one year—average daily placement of 905 at an average wage of $8.59—all with a net profit to the employee. Their total wages for the year was $2,838,192.

Of the average daily placement last year of 905, the number of men per day was 603, of women per day 292, and of children per day 33.

These figures are a blow to the beautiful girls who believe that Hollywood is longing for their art, and for mothers who think their children would add distinction to the movies. An average of only twelve children a day is employed through the casting bureau. These children when at work are under the care of teachers assigned by the Los Angeles Board of Education and paid by the producers. No children may act in the movies unless they are well ushered in their school work. School hours are maintained in the studio.

In its desire to increase the general usefulness of motion pictures, the industry is cooperating with a church committee in the use of pictures for religious education. After several years of intensive cooperation, great educators, several companies are preparing teaching films for use in schools. This method of education will have an enormous effect for good upon the teaching methods of schools and colleges.

Pictures are being shown to immi-grants. The films give the newcomers a concrete idea of the country to which they are coming and outline ways and means by which they can become good citizens. Films have been sent to leper colonies in the Canal Zone and to the Philippines and to Eskimos in Alaska. Entertainment is furnished gratis to thousands of “shut-ins” in prisons, hospitals, orphanages and homes.

One of our companies in cooperation with the American College of Surgeons has just completed the first two of a series of pictures for use in clinics and hospitals. Pictures will be made of surgical operations, performed by the masters, in color, in slow motion or magnified so that the details of the most intricate operations can be studied by surgeons in all parts of the world and over again until they are able to duplicate the work of the masters.

In the matter of commercial arbitration, the industry has shown its progressive spirit. Disputes arising over contractual relations are necessarily inevitable in an industry of this sort where millions of contractual relations obtain for the showing of hundreds of thousands of pictures. Delays, one thing or another, may bring disappointment. The natural inclination is to rush to court. Pictures can’t be tied up by courts. Time is too precious. And so the industry has adopted the arbitration system. In the key cities, there are arbitration boards, each composed of three exhibitors and three distributors.

In the last five years, the arbitration boards have disposed of 73,652 cases involving $17,724,380.82. Only negligible few cases were litigated. After submission to arbitration.

Artistic Standards Today Finer Than Before the War

The pictures, as pictures, are finer, artistically speaking, than those made before the war. And it is a little early for pessimism about the lost silent cinema. After all, an art fifteen years old is still very young, and lusty plunges and starts in various directions, trying out its strength, ought to be signs of health rather than decay. Perhaps a real cinema art may come out of it all.

Talking Newsreel Credited With Most Marked Progress

Up to the present, the most marked progress brought to the screen by the advent of the talkies is to be found, not as one might expect, in the realm of feature production, or even in musicals or short subjects, but in the newsreels. For this progress, I am told, the industry is indebted largely to one man, Percy Howard, editor of Fox Movietone News and Hearst Metrotone News. Mr. Howard’s choicest subjects may be seen daily at the Newsreel theater and in the various houses showing one or both of these pictorial reels. They are the best explanation of his success.

Major Edward Bowes, who finds time to labor both as vice president of M-G-M and managing director of the Capitol, has accepted the chairmanship of the entertainment committee for the 30th annual charity ball of the New York Chapter, K. of C., scheduled Feb. 11. The Bremen is going to have a lotta laughs on its current trip across the Big Brink. Will Rogers is on board. Before gangplanking the champ gum-chewer and humor-slinger announced that he is going to the naval conference at London as a "surprise" delegate.

Anita Loos and John Emerson, hubby and wife, have gone to Miami to spend the winter and whatever else they spend at that Florida resort. Playwrights, like the weather, change their minds. Frederick Loewe, the truck writer of dramas, started for the U.S.A. to write for the talkers but decided that, after all, good old England, was good enough for him. So he left the Aquitania at Cherbourg and returned home.

After finished with vacationing at Havana Bryan Foy, director-in-chief of short production for Warners at the Coast, is New Yorking, along with wife and child. He'll stay in the East about two weeks before trekking Coastward. Angelo Soriero, who used to be a page boy at the Capitol, is back at the theater this week, this time as a member of the Six White Lillies Act.

After three weeks at the organ console of Warner Bros. records, Stuart Barrie, guest organist, has returned to Philadelphia to officiate again at the Mastbaum. Louise M. Roesch, the Beckou’s regular organist, becomes soloist at the theater. Jack Benny, who mastered-of-ceremonied for M-G-M’s "Hollywood Revue," is a current offering at the Palace.

Kewpie Love, a stage eyeful years ago when "beef trust" pulchritude flourished, but who has been doing characters in the films these last few years, will again go into her song and dance if the head of a charmer troupe, none of whom weigh less than 175 a.d.d. Doggon if we didn’t have the same experience as Frederick. The first time we heard "Sing in the Bath-Tub" we didn’t fall for it at all. The Birth and Growth of Motion Pictures and Sound

The motion picture, more than any other medium of expression, has hampered and beset by place legal restrictions on its realization that the integrity of motion pictures was as just as the integrity of our churches is protected and that the quality of pictures must be described as "wholly and unqualifiedly defeated by public opinion.

The only time the people of a state have voted 344,921 to 125,000,000 dollars in favor of censorship is when, in the State of Massachusetts where the censorship of motion pictures was enacted directly to the people in 1922. The citizens of that state defeated the proposed censorship 553,173 to 408,252—a majority of 344,921 against censorship.

Motion pictures remain the most typical and American of American productions. So in thirty-three years, all the major industries in this country, the motion picture industry stands first probably in the percentage of the world's supply of a single commodity. These figures issued not long ago by the Department of Commerce at Washington are surprising:

Per cent

Of the world's land, United States possess

Of the world's coal we dig up

40

Of the world's telephone, we use

75

Of the world's automobiles, we make more than 80

Of the world's motion pictures, we produce more than

Two hundred and fifty-five thousand persons are permanently employed in the industry in this country and more than $125,000,000 is spent annually in production. Last year, 823 feature pictures and several times that number of shorter subjects, news reels and travelogues were produced. It is estimated that approximately one hundred million Americans go to the movies weekly. Our pictures are shown in seventy countries with titles translated into thirty-seven tongues. Last year, we distributed 325,585,000 feet of film and every day approximately twenty-five thousand miles of motion pictures are handled, examined, stored, and shipped by employees in the exchanges of members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The future of the industry one hesitates to predict. So great has been the advance in the narrow envelope of art in which it was possible to attempt the future appears futile. One can see only expansion, development, progress. The motion picture will not retain its present popularity but will of course add immeasurably to it. It will add also to the list of benefits which it already is performing. Producers are taking the best men available into the studios and training them in the methods of production which cannot help but result in a steady flow of finer and finer pictures. Universities and colleges are offering courses in motion picture technology and appreciation. All of literature, all of modern writing, provides a market for motion pictures. New mechanical developments are coming every day. Theaters are marvels of comfort and amenities and if the custodians of the motion picture in every branch of the industry are aware of the responsibility upon them.

Thoughtful people are agreeing with our persistent contention that the motion picture is one of the greatest forces yet given to man to bring a happier understanding not only between men but also between nations. And herein lies the greatest possibility, the only one of the greatest future possibilities of the motion picture. The motion picture knows no barriers of distance, no language. All men, wherever they may live, can see, on the screen a story they can understand. If we can only have understanding, we shall not only be peaceful and kindly among ourselves, but we shall remain in symbiosis with all nations. When we understand, we do not hate and when we do not hate, we do not war.

I hope to make this international understanding by sympathetically telling the story of the nationals of every country to the nationals of all others. It is the determined purpose of our Association.

The great need of the future of course, is manpower. The motion picture business is built largely upon personnel. Take away the directors, actors, writers and nothing is left but a lightly organized production, distribution and exhibition force with nothing to keep it running.

The greatest difficulty in progress has been in those phases of art in which it has been necessary to develop the talent completely. And there has been the most significant development. Irania, Ireland, and in thirty years from the time man first began to construct buildings, the Woolworth Building was erected; as if in thirty years after the invention of the violin we had produced Kreisler, Kubelik and Mischa Eisman.

In the late months have come forward these and other great talents, skilled writers and talented actors that the motion picture is producing at least a story that is in favor of the best in art, in the drama and in literature. It is merely a question of finding men and women who have the talent necessary to make always the very best. Motion picture producers are trying to employ only the directors and writers with whom they can work. They are doing their utmost to develop them. Directing and scenario writing are two of the great professions that are a part of this and no other enterprise. Applications by the thousands come from persons who are not qualified to pass even the first test. The result will be a very marked movement upward. Men and women will come to the industry already prepared in the fundamentals of the business to follow and improve on the time and their talents to this great new art.

Recognition of the motion picture as an art by the great universities marks the beginning of a new day in motion picture work. It paves the way for the motion picture's Shakespeares.

I wish it were possible here to draw aside the curtains of the future and to show what is to come for the future, I have no fear, will be great.

William Kennedy and Laurie Dickson, Edison's early laboratory assistant, far back in 1896 forecast the future of the motion picture.

"It is the flower and fruit of the nineteenth century magic," he said, "the crystallization of eons of groping enchantments. In its whole-some, solid success there are possibilities undreamed of by the art lovers of the East; the conservatory, the Academy, the jealous conservatories of the mysteries of Delphic and Eleusinian shrines. It is the earnest of the coming age, when the great potentialities of life shall no longer be in the keeping of the cloister and college, of money bag, but shall overflow to the nethermost portions of the earth, at the command of the humblest heir of the divine intelligence." I agree with Terry Ramsaye when he says, "Will Hays himself could say more, to-day.

Party Girl' Is Daringly Different Motion Picture

By REGINA CREEK

Tiffany has taken the jazz atmosphere of movie college stories and transferred it, theme songs and all, to a tale of modern business. "Party Girl," now at the Gaiety, preaches a little sermon on the business methods of this country. If, as it would seem, the wheels of industry are turned only by gin, the Wall Street crash came none too soon.

Excitement Aplenty

Against this background is discovered a triangle consisting of young Douglas Fairbanks as the wild son of a manufacturer who declines to do business through party girls, the father’s secretary, Jeanette Loff, to whom the son is engaged, and Judith Barrie, one of the party racketeers. The boy is tricked into marrying Judith, who, it is explained, is rather badly in need of a husband just at the time. There is plenty of excitement and lots of “it” in the picture.

Miss Loff, one of the screen’s most beautiful blondes, contributes the best work she has thus far offered, and in addition surprises even her friends with the local qualities of her most imitative voice. Doubt

BURTON HOLMES, whose travelogues were known to every picture-going person about 10 years ago, was the attraction at Carnegie Hall yesterday with his film depicting the 1929 season in and about London. Zius, associate Brykind, who once received his pay checks for writing p. a. stuff for the Rialto but nowadays writes books for musical shows, did such work on "Strike Up the Band," which opens tonight at the Times Square. H. W. HIGGIN, director of "The Racketeer," has sent us a wittled orchid by air mail from Hollywood. You can imagine how our heart went pitter pitter, thinking Clara Bow, or perhaps Louise Fazenda, was flitting around with it. Then we saw Howard's name at the bottom of the letter, and were disillusioned. He sent the exhibit a way of proof of the following story:

During the making of a scene in this production it was necessary to use real orchids. The intense heat of incandescent lights wilted the flowers almost as rapidly as they were exposed. The orchid supply of seven florists, at six snackers per were used before the scene was photographed. * * * Oh, well, that's Mr. Higgin's story, so we have written him:

The Mirror
—a column of comment

CARL LAEMMLE goes down on the record as favoring the remaking of box-office silent pictures into talkers. Adoption of this plan, he points out, will alleviate the current shortage of material for talking pictures.

Unquestionably this is an idea which is going to put a lot of good American dollars into exhibitor pockets. Material which has proven its commercial value in silent form is likely, in most instances, when given proper dialogue and sound effects, to repeat its audience appeal. And probably with renewed strength. Good screen story material, like good music, is well worth more than one presentation.

FOUR MAJOR chains are equipping their theaters for wide-screen pictures. Exhibitors should not interpret this statement as an indication that enlarged pictures are going to panic the industry before it regains its financial health after the sound avalanche. So far only a few pictures are definitely set for wide-screen production and these are largely experimental in objective. General distribution of enlarged-visibility pictures is still some distance off.

A PITTSBURGH house joins the ranks of theaters showing newsreels and shorts exclusively.

Ideas that are new and different provide the gas which keeps the machinery of exhibition running smoothly—and profitably. Small-house operators who are diligently trying to compete with de luxe neighbors might do well to inject some in their business by adopting a grind news-reel and shorts policy. Houses with similar policies are clicking loudly, we hear.

Preliminary Plans Show 63 in Dialogue, Sound, and 98 Silents

A total of 265 short subjects already are set for production by Universal in 1930, with plans for additions to the list later in the year. The schedule, as far as it has been determined, comprises 40 all-talking two-reel comedies; 26 one-reelers, sound; 26 one-reelers, silent; 52 two-reelers, silent; 12 two-reelers, “Sporting Youth” series, all-talking; 7 serials, sound.

In the two reel comedy division, there are all starts, and ten star Sunny Jim. These are all talking. The silent’s only group comprises ten Sid.

"The dismissal by the Appeal Court was on formal matter only and the appeal may be renewed. In any event it can be stated that we shall continue the prosecution of this suit until it can be brought before the court and a decision rendered upon the merits of the patents involved."

Louis G. Pacent, President of the Pacent Companies, commenting on the decision of the Court and the statement of G. C. Pratt representing A. T. & T., Western Electric in part said:

"The result of the appeal is in line with the decisions by courts in this litigation in the past. The merits of the patents are still undecided, although this is no fault of our own.

"We are more anxious than the telephone group to have a speedy determination upon the merits. We are fully prepared for such a determination and are as confident of the result of any trial of the issue of infringement as we have always been of the favorable decisions which have been uniformly ours in the whole history of this litigation. We do not infringe any valid rights of the telephone company. Rockefeller in 'Talkies' for First Time

Standard Oil Anniversary Address New 'Running at Embassy Theatre.

John D. Rockefeller, the world's richest man, who at ninety years of age has given more than $300,000 to public benefactions, has succumbed to the lure of the talking motion pictures. After two years of effort, C. E. Engelbrecht, of the Fox-Hearst Corporation, induced Mr. Rockefeller to pose before the camera and talk into the microphone for the first time for Hearst Metrotone News.

The Standard Oil Company yesterday celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of its existence at Cleveland. Mr. Rockefeller, as is his custom, is spending the winter at Ormond Beach, Fla., and could not brave the change in temperature to attend the Cleveland celebration in person, so it was arranged for him to appear through the medium of the talking motion pictures.

'TALKIES' FOR FIRST TIME

The negative was made at Ormond Beach 'on Monday' and rushed here, where a print was turned out and sent by air mail to Cleveland. It was shown last night at the gathering of the Standard Oil Company executives, and simultaneously at the Embassy, the Newsreel Theatre here, as part of the new programme.

Mr. Rockefeller's voice is amazingly strong and clear, and the recording is without a flaw. It is shown seated on the veranda of his home at Ormond Beach, in the course of his talk, which is addressed to the executives of the Standard Oil Company, he says:

Expresses Gratitude.

"I am grateful beyond measure for all these long, happy and prosperous sixty years now drawing to a close. I have no words to express my appreciation of all who have had a part in making the company the success it has been—far beyond our fondest dreams at the time of its beginning."

"We cherish the memory of the multitudes of our dear associates who worked so closely in their time of service and have passed on with unclouded records. We who remain are to carry on the work which they established, with the highest ideals, sharing with each other our успехs, and even our failures, with ever growing confidence and an increasing desire to be of the greatest service to mankind."

The pictures of Mr. Rockefeller also are being shown at leading theatres everywhere by Hearst Metrotone News.

The Coming of Sound

HE rapid and amazing adaptation of sound to motion picture entertainment since the fall of 1926 has led to the entirely erroneous belief that talking pictures are something new under the sun, when, as a matter of fact, the development of sound was certainly corollary with, and, some say, was even the forerunner of the moving picture.

We know that Thomas A. Edison was looking for eyes for his phonograph when he produced what turned out to be the first marketable motion picture machine. And there is much evidence to prove that scientists here and abroad were engaged more than fifty years ago in making photographs of sound. There was, for instance, a Doctor Czermak, of Vienna, who in 1862 succeeded in photographing the vocal chords in action although he did not, it is true, attempt to record the sound vibration, and there was a Professor Eli Whitney Blake, of Brown University, who sixteen years later is reputed to have patented the vibrations of a microphone diaphragm by means of a mirror which cast a light on a photographic plate.

Instances of other experiments, similar rather, which resulted in the invention of a commercially possible moving picture, were from time to time recorded, leading up to the time of Professor Demeny’s “Chronophotophone” in 1892, about which very little is known, and to the time of Edison’s “Kinetoscope” in 1894 which, however, never was done, certainly synchronized sound with pictures. Like the peep-show pictures, the Kinetoscope was a one man device, ear tubes being used to catch the sound. Public demonstrations were held at Raff and Gaumont’s amusement parlors at 1199 Broadway but the demand for the first “talkie” was so slight that the device was soon withdrawn.

In the years that immediately followed the withdrawal of the Kinetoscope, scientists continued their investigations. They worked quietly, as is the way of science, out of the public’s eye, being, for the most part, content to wait until they had learned the essential facts about recording sound before making known their discoveries. When they did speak they were able to speak of a commercially successful article; they were ready to turn out an almost finished product. That is why sound has come into universal use with such amazing rapidity. It was delivered on a silver platter in 1926 and the industry had only to adapt itself to its use. To me the most interesting phase in the whole development has been the ease with which the producing companies and the theaters have adjusted themselves to so revolutionary an addition.

Almost every invention is within the scope of an article of this nature to go into the claims of various inventors as to their share in the development of talking pictures. Much has been said recently about men like Eugene Augustin Lauste, formerly an employee of Mr. Edison, and about his synchronization of the pictures, but it seems that much of the credit goes to the inventors.

Unquestionably the work of many men has gone into the perfect present talking devices. Almost every great invention is the result of the combined efforts of scientists. There can be in these pages, therefore, no attempt to place final responsibility. Such a matter is for the inventors, the patents office, and the users of sound to decide. It is sufficient to say that there never was a time when Lauste, about 1907, was demonstrating a sound and film device in London. He did not meet with great success, but recently has been able to market his product for any widespread use. In an interview printed in the New York World, Mr. Lauste attributed his failure to the breaking up of his company during the war. Most of his stockholders were Germans, and the necessary capital for future developments was not forthcoming.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, tells an interesting story of his early experiments with sound. Twenty years ago he imported from Germany a device which he advertised as the “greatest improvement in the moving picture.” The name of the instrument was Synchroscope and the first exhibition was in Chicago for the benefit of exhibitors and representatives of the press. Confidentially Mr. Laemmle explained that the “crave for talking pictures will be greater than the present crave for ordinary moving pictures.”

There were others who rather more recently advertised the Universal Company’s president, Billboard, for instance, in an editorial at the time asked: “Is the moving picture business about to be revolutionized? Has the time arrived when vaudeville houses can put on a whole bill by machinery?...” “I was fairly stunned the other day,” said the Billboard writer, “when I witnessed a performance that was so startlingly realistic that I began to wonder how many listeners already are answered in the affirmative.”

For a time the Synchroscope was highly successful. Many exhibitors put in their orders and deliveries were accelerated. Other exhibitors who did not order the talking device made provision for it by means of sound, and the day of the song-sides came into popularity. Still others attempted to make their own devices. An instant was not long enough off-stage noises.

At last the Synchroscope failed and was withdrawn. The difficulty was that the public was not sufficiently anxious to meet the market’s demand. The supply was exhausted. Another reason for failure was that the phonograph was capable of holding material for only two reels while the theaters were demanding four and five reels.

About 1908, Edison again turned his attention to the talking picture, this time with a device known as the Cameraphone which coupled a phonograph to a film strip driven by a motor attached to a wire belt. Making a Cameraphone picture was very simple. A phonograph record was selected and photographed until the synchronization was at least passable. Of course the synchronization was never perfect, but it was instantly rejected but in those days close-ups had not come into popular use. Nobody had thought of it at that time. Head and face on a full screen and lip-movement was not regarded as important. Proponents of the Cameraphone argued with some justice that the combination of perfect synchronization was not imperative.

For a short time the Cameraphone flourished. It was admittedly a novelty, however, and while the world was always interested in novelties, it soon tired of them. The Cameraphone ceased to be popular, and since improvement was not forthcoming the device vanished from the market until 1913 when Mr. Edison again launched a talking device.

Another story is told of the premiere of the Cameraphone, or the Kinetophone as it had come to be known. It was on a Friday afternoon, February 17, 1913, that three men set out to judge the audience reaction to Edison’s newest invention. Those three were: Mr. Edison, John J. Murdock, and Martin Beck. Four theaters had been chosen for the experiments—the Colonial, the De Forest, the Bal Tabarin, and the Alhambra. On the program of each of those theaters was the announcement: “Thomas A. Edison presents talking pictures and great silent pictures, including motion pictures, or the Kinetophone.”

The New York Times reviewed the events which led up to that afternoon’s experiment. Mr. Edison had perfected his invention in his shops at Orange, N. J., and had tried out the results on a small theater adjoining his studio. A scene from Shakespeare’s Julius Caesar was photographed with sound. Then there was a four-reeler, a tale of the Orient concluding with the breaking of a china dish. A violinist, a singer, and a pianist were on the program, and the whole was concluded with the barking of a dog.

A review of the showing in the papers of the day reveals the following interesting comment: “For the present at least the prophecy that the ‘talkies’ soon will supplant grand opera or the legitimate drama seems to be fantastic. It was stated that soon well-known players of the legitimate stage will be seen and heard in the ‘talkies.’ Then no doubt the invention will give greater pleasure to critical audiences.”

The reviewer’s comment was, for the time being at any rate, accurate. The Cameraphone may or may not become a sensation. Exhibitors shied away from it and within a short time it was withdrawn from the market. Not until 1921 was there another definite attempt to reach the public with talking pictures.

In 1915, D. W. Griffith, always a pioneering spirit, showed his picture “Dream Street” at the Town Hall in New York City with a sound accompaniment. The device he used was known as the Photokinema and the dialogue consisted of 200 feet of film. It was an interesting experiment and many of the leading exhibitors in the industry were in the Town Hall for the showing. Griffith was warmly applauded for his efforts but the general belief was that talking pictures were still far off in the future.

Another name appears in the early history of sound—the name of Dr. Lee de Forest. Dr. de Forest in 1907 is said to have perfected a vacuum amplifying tube. About 1923 reports became current about the Phonofilm. Since then law suits have developed relative to patent rights, and those suits are still pending. Whether the outcome may be, the name of Dr. de Forest is an interesting and important one in connection with the history of talking pictures.

For 1930 Talker Stories

NOW that we've found Hemingsway, Bromfield, Bernard Shaw and others of like standing, perhaps we can call the season coming "the better movie season" and let the "bigger" slide. The intelligentsia has invaded cinema manufacture. Of course, that isn't saying that the result will be entirely intelligent but it's step in the right direction. The main drawback of the silent picture was the exaggeration of all emotion or rather the superlative quality in which every emotion had to be played in order to get over. There were no dynamics—one had to go the full swing of the pendulum. The sarcastic husband was the bully in silent, and the irritating wife must needs be the shrew. Stories emerged like as peas in a pod, and the audiences ate them up. The audiences, sad to say, didn't progress visibly to any extent. Give a group of people who have not enjoyed the advantages of music a series of popular concerts and by the end of the season you will have a definite indication of trends in taste. At five seasons there will be a marked progression. A ripple of applause may greet anything touching on the musical composers. Mollie Merrick in New York Evening Word

ALTHOUGH some producers predict confidently that in the next few years there may be much seasonal alternating of the same stars between the talking picture and the legitimate stage, not many of the new Hollywooders who have made good in a big way seem interested in a return to Manhattan boards even for a legitimate farewell season.

IT'S RATHER interesting, this thought. Try it yourself when next you meet out with cinema friends (Male). You'll find it much more enjoyable than charades or charades. Perhaps it's none of our business anyway. We have our own ideas on the subject but space, plus diplomatic reasons (mostly the latter), suggests that we hold our tongue, or type-writer as the case may be, and hurry on to tasks—less mental and of more stability.

The Modern Talking Picture

So far we have traced, however sketchily, the history of sound. Now we come to the great new volume in the history of motion pictures which is the record of the commercial development of talking pictures as we know them today. Here we enter into an entirely new phase of the motion pictures. Henceforth let no one make the mistake of regarding sound simply as an embellishment. Sound today is far more important than an effect. The talking picture is, in itself, a distinctive art-form.

In order to understand fully how and why talking pictures developed as quickly as they did, it is necessary first to review the motion picture situation as it existed early in 1926, at a time when motion pictures had reached what appeared to be a peak in popularity. One hundred million of our people each week were patronizing the 20,000 motion picture theaters; the studios in Hollywood, in an effective endeavor to meet the demands of the market for 800 feature pictures a year, were operating at their maximum capacity. Competition had never been keener. Every company was vying with every other company to attract the ablest writers, and the most efficient technicians. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were being spent on new effects, while an insatiable public demanded always something new.

In the larger cities competition had become so keen that the theaters forced to fill their seats, inaugurated a system of stage presentations which for a time threatened to relegate the picture to a position of secondary importance. One elaborate revue after another was cast as bait before the public. Overhead costs mounted as a consequence, while the margin of profit showed slight tendency to increase. A physician looking at the industry would have been forced to report that, while the patient was fundamentally sound and healthy, he was suffering from local disorders of a decidedly uncomfortable nature.

It was into such a situation then, that sound was destined to project itself. Sound came at the opportune moment. The field was fawed. Early in 1926 engineers, who had been quietly and persistently studying the application of sound to moving pictures, began to hint that they had progressed far enough in their experiments to warrant the belief that commercially successful talking pictures could be produced and marketed. The producers themselves were the first to hear such reports; but the producers, with few exceptions, received the sound proposals, if not with indifference, at least with incredulity. They were not overcautious, but in the past they had been the victims of glittering reports of sound. They chose wisely to wait for developments. The engineers, however, were insistent.

For five years—that is, since 1921 they had been studying the use of sound with pictures, hoping to devise ways and means of applying what they had learned about the transmission of sound via the telephone, the radio, and the phonograph to the development of a special technique relating to talking pictures. The problem was not primarily one of synchronizing sound and moving pictures. That was a mechanical problem which could readily be solved. Their real problem was to produce satisfactory qualities of sound in adequate volume. By applying the identical principles which they had used successfully in transmitting the voice over great distances on the telephone, the engineers succeeded in recording and amplifying sound in conjunction with motion pictures.

As so often happens, several groups of scientists, each working independently of the other, began their experiments at about the same time. One group consisted of the engineers of the Bell Telephone Laboratories; another group consisted of engineers of the General Electric Company. The findings of both groups reached the present perfection approximately at the same time, but since the devices emanating from the Bell Laboratories, jointly owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Western Electric, were given to the public first, it will serve our purpose here to consider that development initially.

The Bell Laboratories development was carried forward on two major lines: firstly, the recording of sound on disc records operating in synchronism with the film; and, secondly, the recording of sound on the edge of the film itself by means of a photo-electric cell.

As I have indicated, when the net of the new sound device reached the industry, there was a definite tendency to leave sound alone. To one man, however, sound with pictures made an instant appeal. That man was Sam Warner, one of the few Warner brothers who had been producing pictures for a number of years. Sam Warner liked mechanical devices. He was an early radio enthusiast, and it was not difficult to induce him to visit the Bell Laboratories for a sight of the new talking device. Mr. Warner saw and appreciated the talking device. He wanted it. He wanted it badly, and immediately he planned to interest his device his three brothers—Harmer, Major Albert Warner; and Jack Warner. Harry Warner, president of the company, shook his head. He knew pathetic stories about men who had dabbed in sound. But he persisted Sam Warner succeeded. By being his brother's constant visitor he managed to attend a demonstration.

That demonstration was destined to make a revolutionary change in the motion picture industry, for Harry Warner, like his brother Sam, and so was convinced. He was read to throw the entire resources of his company behind talk devices, to stake everything, including his future, on one high赌注. He became convinced that the success which has come to his company is attributable to the courage which Harry Warner displayed on that occasion.

The immediate result of the twodays' demonstration for Sam Warner and one for Harry Warner was that, in April, 1926, the Warner Electric Company licensed Warner Brothers to talk pictures under its system and patent. The Warners elected to use the disc method and the name they chose for their device was the Vitaphone. The first experiments were made in the old Vitaphone Studio in Flatbush, Brooklyn.

At that time Warner Brothers were completing the new John Barrymore picture called Don Juan. The production represented a large investment. Convinced that the success of the Vitaphone depended largely on its proper introduction to the public, the Warners decided to make the Barrymore film their first Vitaphone picture, and to show it at the only theater in the world equipped for the Vitaphone—their own theater at Broadway and 32nd Street, New York City. The New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Henry Hadley, was engaged to make the synchronized musical accompaniment of the picture.

A PRODUCTION that runs off the screen for less than five minutes, took two years to line up, an features in his first talking role the richest man who ever appeared before a camera, is by way of being real achievement, you will admit. C. E. Engelbrecht of the Fox-Hears Corp. takes credit for the achievement, and the actor in question—no less than John D. Rockefeller Jr. If you were a producer and had to pay this notable personality what his time is worth per minute, you'd probably go in the red for the entire season.

The Mirror
— a column of comment

FORTY-EIGHT LESS foreign pictures were imported to the United States in 1929 than during the previous year. Quota systems can't be used for this reduction in the number of foreign film emigrants to America. It's directly attributable to and— the same sound which plays havoc with the foreign markets American distributors. When European producers master this business of consistently making good boxoffice pictures the chances that they'll find a receptive market for their product over on this side of the Atlantic. Pictures that fit into American public's idea of entertainment will never find trade barriers to obstruct them.

The Modern Talking Picture

It was about this time that Harry Warner telephoned me to tell me of his plans. He had decided to offer half a dozen Vitaphone short subjects as a prelude to the feature picture and he wanted me to speak from the screen on behalf of the industry. I consented, of course, and a few days later I accompanied Mr. Warner and other officials of his company to the Manhattan Opera House where I stood in front of a microphone and camera and said my piece—with gestures.

Because it was the first speech ever recorded for talking pictures, I shall hereafter repeat the words I spoke. It went like this:

"No story ever written for the screen is as dramatic as the story of the screen itself.

"Tonight marks another step in that story.

"Far indeed we have advanced from that few seconds of the shadow of a serpentine dancer thirty years ago when the motion picture was born—to this, the first public demonstration of the Vitaphone which synchronizes the reproduction of sound with the reproduction of action.

"And farther and farther ahead is the future of pictures, as far-flung as all the tomorrows, rendering greater and still greater service as the chief amusement of the majority of all our people and the sole amusement of millions and millions, exercising an immeasurable influence as a living, breathing thing on the ideas and ideals, the customs and costumes, the hopes and the ambitions of countless men, women and children.

"In the presentation of these pictures, music plays an invaluable part. Too, the motion picture is a most potent factor in the development of national appreciation of good music. Now that service will be extended as the Vitaphone shall carry symphony orchestras to the homes of the homeless.

"It has been said that the art of the musician is ephemeral, that he creates but for the moment. Now, neither the artist nor his art will ever die.

"Long experimentation and research by the Western Electric and the Bell Laboratories, supplemented by the efforts of Warner Brothers, have made this great new instrument possible, and to them and to all who have contributed to this achievement I offer my congratulations and best wishes.

"To the Warner Brothers, to whom is due credit for this great premiere, marking the beginning of a new era in music and motion pictures, I offer my felicitations and sincerest appreciation.

"It is an occasion with which the public and the motion picture industry are equally gratified.

"It is another great service—and service is the supreme commitment of life."

"A few sultry summer weeks then passed and in the meanwhile New York City was being made acquainted with the new and mysterious name, Vitaphone. The newspapers carried display advertisements; billboards were inundated with the title. A skeptical industry looked on with interest, and with doubt. Then on the evening of August 6, 1926, the Vitaphone had its premiere.

"There were many distinguished persons in the audience at the Warner Theater that night. It was not more than a usual first-night gathering. It was an occasion. Promptly at the appointed hour the curtain parted and I saw myself on the screen. I heard my own voice speaking the same words I had spoken in the studio weeks before. In the darkness I said to myself, "A new miracle has been wrought and I have had a part in it."

"In addition to the feature picture and my introductory speech Martinelli and Marion Talley sang. Miska Elman and Zimbalist played their violins. Anna Case, assisted by a famous dancing team and by the Metropolitan Opera chorus, offered a Spanish song. The entire first half of the program was sensational; the second half was more than sensational. It was reassuring. The next day the newspapers commented favorably, some of them enthusiastically. The industry was interested but it was not completely convinced. Synchronized music—yes; singing—maybe; talking pictures—well, that was not likely. It was an interesting experiment, a more than ordinarily fine novelty, a great improvement over anything attempted in sound before; but for general use—well, very few people could believe it. The theaters were not equipped. It would cost money—too much money; it would revolutionize the business.

"The gamble was too great. The four Warner brothers, however, were certain in their own minds that pictures with sound had come to stay. They had a faith that would not be shaken. They proceeded to synchronize other pictures with music, to make short subjects with operatic and Broadway stars. They proposed to equip other theaters as fast as they could.

"By heroic efforts one hundred theaters were equipped for talking pictures within six months. Then the Warners learned with a shock that the cost of equipment was much greater than they had anticipated. They found it necessary to form a financing corporation which would buy the equipment from Western Electric and sell it on deferred payments to the theaters. Their investment in sound increased. They were in it to the limit of their resources.

"Several months hobbled by another affair. The Warners made another epochal picture. It was called "The Jazz Singer" and Al Jolson was the star. In it Jolson, one of the most popular musical comedy stars of the times, not only sang but actually spoke from the screen. The opening was set for the evening of October 6, 1927—a little more than a year after the first Vitaphone picture had been shown. All plans were con- sidered. Then occurred one of those inexplicable tragedies with which life is filled.

"During the last week in September Sam Warner complained of no feeling well. He had a bad cold, but it was not of any great consequence he thought, but when the time came for him and his brothers, Jack and Albert, to leave New York to attend the premiere of "The Jazz Singer," he decided not to go. Jack went alone. Albert stayed with Sam. Two days later Sam Warner went to the hospital. A sinus was infected. Quickly the poison flowed. A surgery was performed. A surgeon who had been called to the men's room. Jack Warner turned around and rushed home immediately. Harry Warner forgot the premiere and caught a train for Hollywood. At the last minute he learned that the Warners would not be able to be there. Jack was slated to be there, so Jack went alone. Albert stayed with Sam. Two days later Sam Warner died.

"Fiction writers and playwrights have always been fond of the theme which says that "the show must go on," though the players are sick a heart. By an odd coincidence Jolson's picture, "The Jazz Singer," was based on that very theme. It was the theme of another Warner Brothers picture, "The Singing Fool." The show had to go on. Plans for the premiere were continued. On the success of the Jolson picture rested largely the future of sound. Yet the man who had first seized upon the idea of sound pictures lay dead, and his three brothers who had backed his plan were hobbled with his body. But the show went on.

"The premiere was a startling success. Within a few weeks the picture was to be a sensation and attracted more people to the theater than almost any other picture ever produced.

COLOR TO REVOLUTIONIZE NEWSREELS, SAYS INVENTOR

Introduction of color with talking newsreels is exact reproduction of the actual happening, ready for exhibition 24 hours after the picture is taken, according to William Hoyt Peck, inventor of the Colorcraft process and vice president of the Colorcraft Corp.

This development will make the newsreel the most important unit in the motion picture business since it will provide a permanent record of the most colorful events.

In the Color process, color will more and more be used to express mood and convey emotion, as demonstrated in the "color organ," says Peck. Color will also affect the selection of talent since pleasing coloring and a flawless complexion will soon become essential of the screen favorite, he believes.

The Colorcraft Corp.'s first laboratory unit, which, when completed, will have a capacity of 1,800,000 feet of film per week, is expected to be ready for operation by March 15.

Four Broadway Comedians Are Signed for Vitaphone

N ow that it is definitely decided that Richard Arlen cannot come East to play the title role in "Young Man of Manhattan," Monta Bell, who will direct this feature, has been busy conducting tests for the title role. Claudette Colbert and Charles Ruggles are already set for important parts.

Memories of the old Vitagraph studio were reviewed at Warner's studio this week, as the appearance of Audry Bercy, an extra girl, who was a popular child actress at the time when Norma Talmadge and Maurice Costello had just begun their climb to screen fame. Miss Berry appears in a short comedy starring Eddie Buczell, which Murray Roth directed.

Visigraphic Pictures continue to receive excellent publicity breaks on their "The Broadway Limited," which has attracted much attention.

Morgan Morley, who shares honors with Ginger Rogers in Pathe's "A Night in a Dormitory," started his film career at the old Lubin studio in Philadelphia, where, in those days, Lottie Briscoe and Arthur Johnson were popular stars.

Evelyn Knapp, who appears in Gordon Bostock's Pathe comedy, "Beach Babes," has played leading roles in fifteen Pathe comic shorts, most of them produced by George LeMaire.

Elizabeth North is recovering, from the effect of an appendicitis operation, at the Long Key fishing camp, Long Key, Fla., where she will spend several weeks before returning to her position in Paramount's short subject department.

Ruth Etting, who just completed a short subject at the Warner Vitaphone studio, recently sang over the radio, through 12,000 miles of space, to Commander Byrd's Antarctic Expedition.

Upon completing "The Big Pond," during the coming week, Maurice Chevalier will stroll to the West Coast where he will take part in a one week radio broadcast program sent from San Francisco, under the auspices of General Motors.

HEREDITY played a part in shaping the career of Harold Levey, musical director for Warner Bros. Eastern studios, who comes from a long line of musicians. Levey gave a violin recital at the age of five and was playing the piano in concert by the time he was nine, at which time he was known as the "boy marvel."

E. Y. Harburg, who writes snappy lyrics for Jay Gorney's singable, hummable tunes, also composes those captivating lines which make you want to join in with the crowd on Paramount's Fleischer Cartoon singing reels. His "Old Apple Tree" number is a darg.

Get all set to whistle "You Brought a New Kind of Love to Me," which Maurice Chevalier sings to Claudette Colbert in "The Big Pond." This number, as well as all the others sung in the English version of this picture, was composed by Sammy Fain, Irving Kahal and Pierre Norman, those youthful songsmiths.

Edmund Josephs, director at the Warner Vitaphone studios, is a dead ringer for Karl Freund, German cameraman, who recently arrived in New York.

Jessie Matthews, the English revue star, who is now appearing here in "Wake Up and Dream," was an interested onlooker at the Paramount Long Island studios on the occasion of a visit there a few days ago. In appearance, she suggests a combination of Colleen Moore and Irene Bordoni.

Get all set for the big house-warming party Fred Rylke, makeup chief at the Fox studios, is preparing to throw at his new apartment on West 57th St.

One of our most ritz musical comedy actresses took personal offense when an electrician at the Warner Vitaphone studio yelled "take the slicks off that broad" during the making of her picture. Looking at the offending memial in the eye, the haughty dame hissed: 'I ain't gettin' un-dressed in front of no strange men!' Later she learned that all the order meant was to take the diffuser off the light.

Ruggles will also appear in a farce comedy which Fred Newmeyer will start directing during the first week in March. This will carry the Paramount studio over until early spring, around which time the next Maurice Chevalier vehicle will get under way with Hobart Henley at the mega-phone.

VOICE AIDS CHARACTER
SAYS TALKER DIRECTOR

"Characterization by means of the actor's voice is just as important, if not more so, as characterization in action and make-up. It was the big factor that the screen looked for years to place it on an equal footing, in characterization, with the speaking stage. This was proved by the great increase in attendance at motion picture theaters as soon as the screen found a voice."

The statement quoted above was made by Edmund Joseph, newly appointed director of Vitaphone Varieties, at the Eastern Vitaphone studios.

"Characterizing by the voice was new to silent picture actors who had no previous stage training. Some of them were fearful of its effect upon their popularity at first, but they set to work to learn how to use the voice. They studied intonation, timing, voice shading—the three essentials of voice characterization—and most of them have won in the theater. Many sought stage experience for talking in the use of the voice. Many made radio appearances and learned that it is possible to characterize by the voice alone, just as they had previously characterized by action alone. By combining the two methods they have found a new freedom and power of expression that is carrying them into greater popularity than ever.

FEATUE R SCHEDULE SET FOR P-F-L STUDIO IN EAST
The Modern Talking Picture

THE JAZZ SINGER" marked the beginning of a great rush toward sound. The industry which had been waiting for assurance of the practicability of sound was at length convinced. The turning point had been reached. Today we reckon the evening of October 6, 1927, as the beginning of a new phase of motion pictures. From that evening on sound became the perative element in production.

In the meanwhile, William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, had been working with Theodore W. Case, of the Case Laboratories, and with Earl I. Sponable, another young inventor, in the development of a talking system which used the sound-on-film method. For fifteen years, ever since he was a student at Yale University, Theodore Case had been experimenting with sound-on-film. In 1916, however, he had joined forces with Case. Their problem was to find substances which were extremely sensitive to light.

The war came on and the young inventors put aside their work, devoting their entire time to development of infra-red light rays which could be used in signalling ships. As a result of their efforts, many convoys on route to France, were kept safe. After the cessation of fighting, the young inventors returned to New York, N. Y., and resumed their experiments with sound-on-film. 1922 marked the beginning of a bright bulb called a "Eo" light which was so sensitive to voice vibrations that lines of sound could be photographed on the film.

It was not until the spring of 1926, however, that Mr. Case and Mr. Sponable presented their discoveries to William Fox. They had waited until they were sure of themselves of the practicability of their idea. Fox immediately saw the great possibilities of sound. He agreed to use further experiments. No time was lost. In June, 1926, experiments were continued under Mr. Fox's supervision and two months later the Fox Film Corporation had been organized. Courtland Smith, who had been with me in the Post Office department and who was secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was made head of the new organization. A new plant opened at Tenth Avenue and Eighth Street and the name chosen for the new device was Movietone.

The Fox-Case Corporation at first fixed its attention to development of news reels, in which it was opposed to record sound as well as the action of current events.

WILL H. HAYS

song she had introduced with great success in the first Charlie's Revue. The preliminary program was concluded with a news reel which was designed to be historic in the industry. That was the take-off of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on his New York to Paris flight.

Audiences in New York heard the roar and roar of the aeroplane's motor, listened to the shouts of farewell, to the raucous sounds of the onlookers as plane hesitated, skidded, and then leaped from the ground into the air. It is history now how the world went mad about Lindbergh. Millions of people wanted to see him. They wanted to hear as well as to see his take-off. The Movietone record was a sensation.

By September, 1927, the first Fox feature picture had been synchronized before its Broadway showing. That picture was "Sunrise," and by the week of October 28, the first all-Movietone news reel was shown at the Roxy Theater. Six weeks later the Movietone News was a weekly feature. Exhibitors bought the news reels as quickly as their houses were wired.

New developments came swiftly in the first months of 1928. Courtland Smith's organizing ability was being felt everywhere. His was a tremendous job of pioneering but with the ardent support of Mr. Fox and other colleagues he strode rapidly ahead. Experiments had already proved that the complete sound equipment could be transported in one and one-half ton trucks and a whole fleet of such trucks was ordered. The first all-talking company known as "The Talking Picture Company" was presented to the public.

Since it was already obvious that sound pictures would sweep the country, Fox-Case decided to issue two instead of one Movietone News each week. A few months later the number was increased to three a week and only a short while before this writing it was found necessary to issue four newsreels a week.

Mr. Fox has frequently said that he was led to take part in the development of talking films not only because of the commercial possibilities in them but because he believed they would be a benefit to mankind. Especially is he interested in the educational possibilities of the talking screen, and it is not surprising that he developed the invaluable plan of bringing the great personalities of the world before the camera. The first crowned monarch ever thus to appear on the screen was King Alfonso XIII of Spain. Others followed rapidly. King George V of England, the Prince of Wales, Premier Benito Mussolini, Marshal Foch, President von Hindenburg, President Hainich of Austria, Raymond Poincare, Crown Prince of Sweden, David Lloyd George, and Ramsay MacDonald are to be found on the screen now. Government officials who have spoken from the screen. There have been others like George Bernard Shaw, the great dramatist, who has refused the honor of visiting America, Dr. Hugo Eckener, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. All of these men have had messages for America and for the world. They have been brought into close touch with our people. A spirit of friendship has been created.

At the same time many of America's leaders have spoken from the screen, among them President Hoover, former President Coolidge, General John J. Pershing, Chief Justice William Howard Taft, former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Colonel Lindbergh, and Thomas A. Edison. This entire purpose of William Fox in bringing the world's personalities to the world's peoples has been a very real contribution to the world's welfare.

HERBERT CROOKER, First National p. a. and a good one, will try his hand and voice at master-of-ceremonies for a vaude tour, with Harry Weber as his manager.

Paul Ash, who makes girlish hearts throb, soon bag and baggage to Chi to entertain at the Oriental, where he served as master-of-ceremonies for two years. This is front page news for Chicago movie-goers—Fred Allen, who makes shorts for Paramount and Warners, will also start buying railroad tickets soon. "The Little Show," in which he co-stars with Clifton Webb, is going on the road.

Times Square at Noon: Roy D'Arcy hurrying into the Bond Building, Art Landy, almost hidden in a big overcoat, pushing up Broadway. Don Roberts talking to somebody in front of the Palace.

The Fox West Coast house organ, "Now," has changed its dress. Instead of the former 6 x 9 booklet, the issue now measures 12 x 17, similar to a press sheet. The issue has become a weekly instead of twice monthly—A. L. Burt has issued a photoplay edition of the novel, "Second Choice," by Elizabeth Alexander. The issue contains pictures of this Warner production featuring Dolores Costello—Al Jolson's "Mammy" is scheduled to be released early in the spring.

Entertainment for the 12th annual benefit for the Sons and Daughters of Israel, which will be held at the Mecca Temple this evening, will find many Broadway favorite stars on the bill—Jules Delmar Co. is cooperating with the N.Y.A. in supplying the talent for this show which looks like a big wow already.

Dick Anderson of the M. P. Congress has left the Murray Hill Sanitarium following an appendix operation and is now at his home.

What's going on in the film industry abroad? You'll find the answer in the 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK, our soon.

FAILED TO MATERIALIZE

THE immediate and overwhelming popularity of the talkies gives evidence of the fact that they have come to stay. The wave of public product predicted by certain critics never showed the slightest sign of materializing, and audiences, instead of tiring themselves about the alleged threat to an independent art form, accepted dialogue as an obvious addition to their favorite entertainment. Probably only America could have released so rapidly the capital and energy necessary to revolutionize an industry overnight, but that revolution is already a fait accompli.

="The Nation"

AND THAT'S THAT

BY PHIL M. DALY

ONE of the most complete campaigns for coverage of an entire picture produced by newspapers has been brought to our attention. It occurred on Henry King's direction of "Hell Harbor," filmed entirely on location at Rocky Point, a few miles from Tampa, Fla. The two local papers, the "Times" and "Tribune," broke feature stories every day throughout the weeks of production. The scrap book of United Artists—Inspiration containing the clips gives a complete chronicle of every phase of this, the first all-talker to be made entirely on location. It incidentally, it puts Tampa on the map as a second Hollywood to be reckoned with.

You may be wondering how newspaper reporters in Florida, necessarily more or less unfamiliar with the picture industry, could do a big job like this. Ah, that's where the catch comes in. They didn't. Lou Lusty, publicity director on this production, was on location shooting in the copy every day. It's one of the few campaigns ever brought to our attention. Lou, if he wasn't so darned modest, could go around shouting so we're doing it for him.

HARRY RICHMAN ACTS AS

M. C. AT PARAMOUNT

Harry Richman is master of ceremonies at the Paramount in “Jazz Pfeffer,” one of the weakest shows the house has had in some time. Richman does his monologue down front on the runway, and seemed to go very well with his line of chatter. His best number was the dress-up act of a couple of girls opening dressing straight. Opened with a unique girl number, showing them in costume representing clef notes blended out in the design of the hat. The musical score from a music sheet for the drop, the number registered well. The production was shaky but was any real comedy, an acrobatic dance team doing the best work with one funny leg work and eccentric feet. The Dignity Berke Dancing Beauties were pleasing in several numbers nicely costumed, and an angle team with lots of class rounded out their work. Louis M. McDermott staged the production, but there was nothing about it that held any real interest, and Harry Richman couldn’t save it from being a very ordinary presentation.

WHITMER, CALIGARY BOYS SHARE CAPITOL HONORS

Ken Whitmer, multi-musical artist, and the Caligary Brothers, gymnastic comedians, share honors this week in Arthur Knorr’s “Land of Syncopation” at the Capitol. Whitmer, besides serving as master of ceremonies, keeps a string of girls busy bringing in different types of musical instruments for him to play. The collection includes about everything from a piccolo to a bass drum, and Whitmer does not merely tease but actually plays the gadgets, winding up with a one-man-band exhibition that sets the patrons’ palms in motion. For further highlight, the Caligary boys perform a routine of comedy contortions that keep the audience laughing pretty steadily. Their line is unique and original in their line. Another surprise that amuses the folk in keen fashion is a ensemble number in which a group of the girls appear as miniature Paul Whiteman imitators and padded suits to give them the appearance of the jazz maestro. Also contributing to the general merriment are Sally and Ted, Serge Flash and the Capitolians.

BEETR - THAN - AVERAGE ENTERTAINMENT. TUNEFUL VERSION OF MUSICAL COMEDY HIT HAS POPULAR APPEAL.

Based on a musical hit which secured its material from the play, "Shore Leave," RKO has given it dialogue, music and color. The picture, especially, gets across and includes "Hallelujah," an ex-popular song hit. Its story is typically musical comedy in character. It concerns a girl who runs a coffee-and-doughnut shop patronized by the Navy. She falls in love with a gob who immediately forgets all about her. Finally the sailor returns and the girl, through a colorful party given on board the admiral's ship, locates her missing suitor, and the film, later he finds her and sets the happy ending. A negro spiritualistic meeting is the big punch of the picture. Altogether it is a generally satisfying entertainment.

Continental Pictures

FAIRLY ENTERTAINING WITH SOME PICTURES PRESENTATION DEVOTED MOSTLY TO WILD PARTY DOINGS. CREDIBLY DIRECTED AND ACTED.

Jazz youth drama. Most of the footage is taken up by one wild party after another. There finally emerges a line to the effect that a sweet and sheltered girl decides to step out with the fast crowd in order to cure her joy-loving sweetheart of the same. This opens the way for another long round of whoopee, resulting in a lovers misunderstanding, an airplane accident and a windup the three principals in a hospital. Considering the weakness and staleness of the story, the fact that it manages to provide amusement of fair strength is due largely to Phil Rosen's creditable direction, a convincing performance by Kennedy and some agreeable comedy.

Continental Pictures' rather loosely put together, but the generous use of snappy dialogue manages to give the picture some good entertainment. While some of the airplane scenes prove to be effective, the real amusement of the picture is gleaned from the clever interplay between Horton and Lee Moran. Both Horton and Moran easily carry off the lion's share of the credit, with Patsy Ruth Miller getting her files in a small part.

UNEVEN MELODRAMA OF SEACOAST CINDERMEL, WITH A FANATICAL FAITH WHO CAUSES MUCH UNHAPPINESS.

This might have been a neat little picture but for the ill-advised characterization of a lighthouse keeper who likes one of those grandiose brutes so common in the merie mystery plays. The keeper wants a daughter (Mary Philbin) to marry homely seacoast lad. But the years for the pretty things of life and she gets them by marrying rich sociopath Jack Oakie. The wishes of the old man then inherit on his wife because she is sympathetic with their daughter. Finally he decides to throw the father out of his mind. "The Call of the Circus"

(All-Talker)

Hollywood Pictures

JUST A FILLER. SOBBLY SENTIMENTAL STORY WITH FAIRY TALE THEME OVER-DRAWN AND POORLY DIRECTED AND ACTED.

Sensational, but in contrast to a circus life background. What is mainly wrong with this production is the story, which piles on the sweet sentiment till it hurts. In some places where the scene was supposed to be very touching, a Broadway audience laughed out loud. Francis Bushman is stillled and theatrical in the role of the retired circus clown who finds love entering his life with the adoption of a young girl. Meanwhile he has married a circus woman (Maxine Alton) and the story develops with the realization on his wife's part that he does not love her, and she leaves him. The climaxes her downfall, takes him to his life, and they all go back to the circus life together. Lacks conviction and realism, and is too sloppily sentimental to catch the attention and appeal of audiences. A filler for the stands.

Tom Tyler in "Pioneers of the West"

(All-Talker)

Syracuse Pictures

Time: 1 hr., 4 mins.

A GENERALLY APPEALING WESTERN WITH ENOUGH ADVENTUROUS SUSPENSE AND ROMANTIC INTEREST TO PLEASE THIS CLASS OF FANS.

Tom Tyler must share his honors as the hero in this picture with J. F. McGowan, who not only did himself credit in the matter of direction, but also took one of the acting parts and put it over with a punch. The action concerns an express robbery, resulting in one man (McGowan) being caught and sent up. He is suspected or merely taking the rap for a higher-up partner. So the express company puts a man (Tom Tyler) on the job to scout around and try to find a valuable package which is among the loot. The man being sought has a very charming daughter, which opens the way for a nice line of romance. Tom Tyler has a little help with this from his childhood's heroine, and the series of events leading to the capture of Robinson and Tyler. The story is edited and re-cut by James of course, but the mystery is filled with plenty of action.

DRAMATIC STORY OF NEWSPAPER REPORTER WITH PLENTY OF TENSE MOMENTS AND THE NAGGER ANGLE PLAYED UP CLEVERLY, OKAY FOR ALL AUDIENCES.

Drama. Here is a picture that has everything of its kind for action, tense situations and dramatic appeal. Joseph Schildkraut is a knockout, with Edward G. Robinson also taking a goodly share of the honors. Barbara Kent has little to do but her personality gets over. Schildkraut, as a reporter on the Globe, is called out during his wedding ceremony, to take a bank murder mystery story. He accuses Robinson of the deed because of his special brand cigarette found in the killer's hand, but is later shot by the keeper. The series of events leading to the capture of Robinson and Tyler are very well handled and the mystery is filled with plenty of action.

Drama of backstage life. This is a very well produced vehicle, which wanders aimlessly and gets nowhere. The continuity was ticked by the agedness of the story and the rest is a very flat film that fails to hold the interest and drives wearsly the reels are half over. The story concerns a comedy team, one whom (William Powell) does lit hag material and his partner (Hal Skelly) plays the low comic. Fox Asks for Dismissal of Gov't Anti-Trust Law Suit is no working agreement between their holding and Loew-M-G M. Denial is made that Fox intends to acquire more Loew stock. The Government in its complaint charges that Fox and Loew, under the terms of the merger, Loew reduces interstate commerce.

Separate answers were filed in the Southern District of the U.S. Dis- trict Court by Ralph S. M. Harris, as solicitor, and George W. Schuman, Richard E. Dwight, Saul E. Rogers and Frances Burke of their counsel.

In the Fox Film answer, it is admitted that from 1929 to 1932 50 per cent of all stock voting stock of Fox Theaters Corporation, controlled by Fox, and 99.9 per cent of the voting stock of Fox Theaters Corp. and Fox Theaters, Inc., is owned by the Harris family trust, and the court will be required to divide ownership of the trust. In the Loew answer, it is admitted that a large part of the Loew voting stock is owned by the Harris family trust. The question of the Harris holdings was discussed at great length in the recent Supreme Court decision of the United States v. National Caramel Co.

As in the National Caramel case, it is argued that the Harris family interests are not controlled by the same person as the rest of Loew stockholders. It is contended that there is no evidence that the Harris family interests are in any way interested in the alleged price fixing trusts, as the Harris family interest is not as large as the Loew stockholders interested in the alleged price fixing trusts.

“Always Faithful”

Vitaphone Time, 10 mins.

Blanche Sweet looks pleasing in the last Vitaphone-drama. The picture tells of a husband who leaves the city to his secretary, to a gold-digger and returns his love for each other, unaware of the husband's asp in an arnial. The windup is the husband pretends he was asleep during the conversation. Good for all houses.

“Drumming It Up”

Educational Time, 10 mins.

Love and Business Comedy A farce, directed by Charles LaMont and featuring Raymond McKey, another star of the Fox Corporation, whose son wants to marry the office stenographer but is afraid of his irate parent's disapproval. However, the old boy unwittingly plays into the hands of the lovers and the happy ending is brought on with the accompaniment of much doo-woppe. Suitable for any class of fans.

“Scrappily Married”

Paramount Time, 17 mins.

Domestic Fun Christie comedy in which a couple of meek and fibbing husbands are given the works by their assertive wives. Bert Roach and John Arthur are the male victims of the two ball-and-chain combinations. A Leslie Pearce directed, pulling a generous amount of action and comedy into the situation. Has general appeal.

“Up and Down Stairs”

Universal Time, 15 mins.

Good Slapstick This jumps into the moving routine with the usual friend of the husband popping up to do the woman-hunting act with friend husband. Wifes, peved at husband's antics in straightening out the home, decides to leave until the house is in order. Then the old comedy with the blonde from downstairs and hub- by, out on a spree, returning to the wrong apartment. Not so funny. Directed by H. Edwards, an all-talker.

Desirable Features of Pick-up Outlined by Presto Engineer

M. M. Gruber, author of the following article, is a recognized acoustical authority and has spent 15 years with the Presto Machine Co. of Brooklyn, N.Y., of which he is chief engineer in the development and production of sound reproducing devices.

In the selection of an electro-magnetic pick-up for sound picture application the considerations must go further than those ordinarily involved in determining the desirable features in an instrument of this kind. It goes without saying that a pickup to be good for any form of application must deliver a realism of tone throughout the entire chromatic scale and in the nature of electrical reproduction of records a power and brilliance surpassing that of the old acoustic forms becomes a necessity.

Beyond power, quality and brilliance, however, pickups for sound pictures have specific practical considerations to meet that might be said become almost paramount. These special considerations can be summarized as: (1) dependability of performance; (2) sharpness in speech reproduction; (3) electrical and mechanical design and construction that permits ready substitution of units to meet emergency conditions; (4) minimum record wear and avoidance of groove jumping; (5) an arm design and construction that is especially adapted to the reproduction of fine detail.

It was with these special and practical considerations of projection booth application that the writer's firm evolved their "Projectionist" model of pickup. To insure dependability of performance the method of suspending the armature is such as to eliminate collapse or freezing. A sharpness in speech reproduction is accomplished by a special form of armature and pole piece construction. Instantly replaceable units, mechanically and electrically, without the need of tools, is accomplished by a simple thumb screw and pin jack connection. To reduce record wear to the minimum vibratory flexibility is provided and in order to prevent the possibility of groove jumping grooves the vertical motion is controlled by a rugged pivotal bearing at as great a longitudinal distance from the needle point as is practical and in the closest practical plane there. A ballbearing base arm with pivot construction of smooth action and permanent alignment sufficiently rugged to withstand rough professional use, with an adjustable needle weight, complete the special features that should be sought by the equipment manufacturers and operators.

In selecting a pickup it is, of course, necessary to know the impedances of the amplifier with which it is to be used and to consider the maximum results that can only be accomplished by a close match of the pickup and amplifier impedances.

Elec-Tro-Fone to Handle Beltone in Six States

In acquiring distribution rights Strom points out that Beltone is not dependent on any particular patent infringement and requires no servicing. A feature of this device is said to be the Burt photo electric cell which prevents the possibility of trouble in focusing and timing.

Contracts for installation of Western Electric's device to enable the deaf to hear have been made for the University, Cambridge, Mass., and the Lorain-Fulton, Cleveland, O., according to C. W. Theaters about to install this device are the Fox, Brooklyn; Academy of Music, and Auction, New York; Fox, Detroit, and Fox, St. Louis. houses that already have installations are the Paramount, Brooklyn; Roxie, New York; Fox, Poli, Springfield, Mass., and Grauman's Chinese, Hollywood.

Going Technical
—or what's in records
—by Jack Alicoate

WE WENT TECHNICAL one day last week and emerged from that is probably the most modern pressing plant this side of the Hudson full to the brim with what that and who's who in disc or record social circles. Discounting, at the call of money rate, the sales talk that accompanied us on our tour of inspection we saw, through our own eyes, approximately the following: a new and different type of disc record. Semi-flexible and almost one-fifth the thickness of the ordinary Victrola record. To our rather ordinary and untrained musical ear it sounded no worse than the other excellent. It cannot be damaged by scratching. After they gave it a healthy wallop with a five and ten cent store hammer it played as good as before. The records can be pressed in large quantities in a few hours each and are cheap enough to be discarded after a short run. We understand from rather modest authority that they are being tried out by Warner Brothers. If they pass the exacting barrier they should go a long way toward answering the prayer of the little fellow for better and cheaper sound reproduction.

A Prescription

IF THERE ARE still any recalcitrants in this now noisy and talkative business who opine that perhaps there's still a kick or two left in the old silent picture we heartily recommend a sort of self cure that we tried recently. First you must find an art theater. One of those sweet little artistic successes and commercial failures that are springing up constantly here and there. We suggest an art theater because in our ward that's about the only film rostrum from which the silent picture operates. When you are safely past the coffee and ping pong rooms and in your seat, try and sit through the silent

HARDLY a day goes by without that enterprising and irrepressible Warner outfit doing something pro- gressive and worthwhile. First it was progress in sound. The future of the movies' musical will, without question, de- pend upon the quality of the com- posers who bring them into being. Here then is a decided step forward

The Recording of Sound Pictures

Chapter VI

The Recording of Sound Pictures

The recording of sound pictures has been a long and complicated process. The first attempts were made in the 1890s, with the invention of the phonograph and the phonograph cylinder. These early recordings were not continuous or precise, and the sound was not reproduced in a consistent manner. However, the basic principle of recording sound onto a physical medium was established.

In the early 20th century, the phonograph was replaced by the gramophone, which used a wax cylinder. This led to the development of the disc, which was introduced in 1917. The disc was a more durable medium, and it allowed for longer recording times.

By the 1920s, sound recording had become more sophisticated, with the introduction of the sound-on-film process. This method involved recording sound onto a film strip, which was then projected on a screen. The sound was reproduced through an amplifier and loudspeakers.

The first sound-on-film movies were released in the late 1920s and early 1930s. These early films were not completely successful, as the sound quality was often poor and the synchronization between the sound and the image was inconsistent. However, the potential of sound in film was evident, and it would eventually become a standard feature of the medium.

The development of the long-playing record in the 1950s allowed for a more continuous and high-quality recording of sound. This led to the development of the stereophonic sound system in the 1960s, which allowed for a more immersive listening experience.

Today, sound recording is a highly advanced field, with a wide range of technologies and methods. From simple audio recordings to complex film and video productions, sound is an integral part of the storytelling process. The ability to capture and reproduce sound accurately is crucial to creating a realistic and engaging audio experience.

1930 to Be Banner Year, Harold Lloyd Predicts

THE outlook for the picture business in general for 1930 is most encouraging. The high standards of product during the last year created renewed interest in pictures, with consequent bigger box office returns, and if the same consistency of entertainment is maintained, the United States, and in fact the world, will enjoy their greatest prosperity this year. There can be no sloughing off in productions, however, for the talkies have educated the public to a much higher plane of entertainment values than the silent pictures ever did, and they will insist on the maintenance of this standard.

Brevity Is Important in News Reel Speeches

THERE is a good deal of misapprehension as to the value in sound news reel. Almost all of the sound that you hear in the news reel sounds a good deal like static on the radio and it all sounds practically alike. The only value of a sound news reel is to be able to reproduce the words of persons who are talking, in synchronization with the lips. That is the only thing that our "Talking Reporter" cannot do. And it is probably very fortunate that he cannot. The moving picture audience don't like long speeches or long captions. That would be the surest way to drive people away from the theater. The same thing is true on the stage, and outstandingly true of the radio.

AMERICA STILL DOMINATES FRENCH MARKET

Roach Producing 32 Talker Comedies in 1930

ILE MIRROR
—a column of comment

IR. LANKFORD, who is a member of the Georgia delegation in the House of Representatives, continues to display a meddlesome nature as it has the film industry goes. Now he goes and asks Congress to pass a Monday Blue Bill which would prohibit the Sabbath shows everywhere in the United States. But, fortunately for the country, there are enough sensible members of Congress with 10 prospective to say no Mr. Lankford's plan. This large majority realizes that people who work six days a week are entitled to entertainment on the seventh. It is regrettable in the mind of this gentleman from Georgia is not sufficiently attuned to the thought that this Be Law is as out of style as a box skirt. It's more than likely the Congress will suggest this to Mr. Lankford.

SILENT VERSIONS for ALL—SPANISH, FRENCH and GERMAN EDITIONS

West Coast Bureau, THE FILM DAILY

Hollywood—Thirty-two all-talking comedies, eight of which are now in work, will be produced by Hal Roach in 1930. All of the pictures will have silent versions and there will be releases in Spanish, French and German. Roach formerly produced 40 pictures in a season, but the new rate of 32 actually represents an increased schedule in view of the different versions being made.

The readjustment from silent to talkers has been practically completed at the Roach studios.

GEORGE LE MAIRE, PATHE PRODUCER, DIES IN N. Y.

George LeMaire, producer of the Pathe comedies, died of a heart attack at 11 o'clock, yesterday morning just as he was leaving his home at 15 West 55th St., New York. LeMaire was one of the most famous creators of comedy for such Broadway institutions as the "Ziegfeld Follies," George White's "Scan-" (Continued on Page 2) were produced outside of France. Although there are six French studios at present equipped to make sound and talking pictures, Canty believes that the majority of sound versions of French films will have to be produced in England and Germany, as they meet the exhibitors' demands this year.

Low cost of production in France, as compared with Hollywood, is set forth by Canty's estimate that the average cost of a French picture is not more than $40,000, or a total outlay for the whole industry last year of little more than $2,000,000.

Commenting on the sound situation in France, Canty declared there was considerable confusion, and he believes cases bordering on chaos. Nineteen distinct types of reproducing equipment are on the French market.

"Orderly educators who have gradually become aware of the practical extent to which the talking screen can be adapted to the projecting of the living personalities of people through their speech and actions, a recent demonstration appeared finally convincing. An audience of 300 educational leaders at the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh a few weeks ago saw a hat education is undoubtedly mind-blowing when four eminent scientists appeared before them, talked to them and conducted investigations and demonstrations through the medium of the talking motion picture.

Talkers Will Lead to Birth of Stage Plays

WHEN the talkies have emptied the theater of the type of public that goes to crime and erosion plays, the theater will not be dead but reborn. It will trawl playwrights of a higher type because they will then have an opportunity to write for intellectuals and to win back the theatergoer who has been seduced by the type of play now being presented.

While Lawrence Tibbetts was New Yorking his initial picture, "The Rogue Song," world premiered at the Coast and aroused a storm of applause. Because it combines a great moral with stirring entertainment—it receives such approval as the following:

From RABBI SIMON COHEN, of Temple Emmanuel, New York City.

"Eddie Dowling, in 'Blaze O'Glory' gives a splendid portrayal of a man in the grip of the contrasting forces in modern life. We see the struggle between the forces of hatred and the lust to kill and the spirit of mercy and humanity. In contrast to other similar presentations, we find war represented, not as a sort of glorified vaudeville show, but rather as the brutal and hateful thing that it really is. While I cannot agree with all the implications contained in the picture—some of which would imply an excuse of every wrong action—there is much in it that gives food for thought. Is it right to preach one thing in war and another in peace? Is it permissible to spread the gospel of hatred and murder? These are questions which each one of us must answer and act upon. And the lesson unconsciously taught by the picture is the old Talmudic maxim: 'Judge not thy fellowman until thou hast stood in his place.' "

From DR. CHRISTIAN F. REISNER,
Pastor, The Broadway Temple, New York City.

"It was a great privilege to see your picture the other evening. My interest was held spell-bound from beginning to end. No one can see it without going away purposely to follow high ideals, and to fight the spirit of hate, and to kill every thought or advocacy of war. The singing was effective and heartening. The screening was beautiful and notable. The characters were acted with unusual skill. The picture should have a notable success and no one will go away, after seeing it, without gratitude to Mr. Dowling and all associated in producing it."

From Father JAMES J. HALLIGAN,
Church of the Holy Name, New Rochelle, N. Y.

"'Blaze O'Glory' is a wonderful, clean talkie. It has fine human interest and true military flavor."

A Brief History of Motion Pictures and the Development of Sound

Chapter VII

The Future Industry

The immediate effects of sound has been to increase attendance at motion picture theaters by millions. Vast new audiences have been reached and these will be held as the development continues and as talking pictures become better and better. With the same familiarity with which the public receives motion pictures under its own affectionate name of "movies," the public has accepted talking pictures under the name of "talkies."

At first there was a wide variance of opinion as to the future of sound. Many men in the industry believed that sound would not last. It took public response to convince many of them that sound was here to stay. It is but fair to say of them that when they were convinced, they did not hesitate to reverse their opinions.

Sound, of course, has wrought great changes in the technique of motion picture production. Nowhere has this change been so noticeable as in the methods of direction and of scenario writing. Incidentally, of course, new fields of dramatic material have been opened up for the screen. Plays and stories which had depended largely on dialogue or on their psychological development, have become feasible for the first time. The writing of natural speech became imperative. To the everlasting credit of the screen writers, let it be said that they are speedily mastering the new technique. The pictures today offer an outstanding example of the effective use of simple and telling dialogue.

An early fear that sound would end the careers of many well-known actors who had been developed for the screen without previous stage experience has been to a large extent dissipated by time. The public still seems to prefer its screen stars, with the result that not many screen players have been discarded. They have simply had their ranks added to by attractive personalities imported from the speaking stage. If an actor can not speak lines with ordinary ability or suffers from vocal impediments, of course he loses his value. Several foreign stars, who could not speak English and who declined to devote sufficient time to mastery of the language, were unneeded when talking became a necessary addition to the film.

The public has always been drawn to motion pictures by the personalities of the players as much as by the stories and I do not believe that the public will ever materially change its habits. And isn't it true, as a matter of fact, that even the stage depends very little upon voices? Very few producers demand perfect diction. The stage and the screen depend largely on types, and this is especially true of motion pictures because the screen is now and always has been the exponent of realism. It places characters in human situations and moves them through scenes peopled by ordinary figures of the world. Without meaning any disparagement of the stage, I still say that it does not approach the motion pictures in naturalness.

Many stage voices are unnatural when transferred to a record. Actors have the habit of declaiming their lines. They speak to the tenth row, or to the gallery. In front of the microphone, the slightest whisper is audible. One's natural conversational voice is preferable. And motion picture actors have the ability to hold their own in natural speech.

Of course, many important actors and actresses who have achieved distinction on the legitimate stage have met with success in talking pictures. They will continue to find success and the industry will always welcome trained talent, for its purpose is to produce pictures which are entertaining and dramatic and artistic, and those who are best qualified to appear in such pictures will always be selected.

In the last few months much has been learned about the possibilities of sound. Every new picture has marked an advance. Directors are learning how to save all the advantages of the silent picture while they are adding the qualities of sound. Their progress has been little short of dazzling. They have been forced to deal with a new instrument. They have had to master a new technique.

At first we thought it necessary to have absolutely sound-proof studios. Today we make sound pictures outdoors. We have made mistakes which are getting rapidly away from the early errors. Every new picture marks a really great advance.

Today sound is new. Tomorrow there will be something else—the enlarged screen, the third dimension. I do not think I am too visionary when I predict for tomorrow a motion picture flashed on the screen as large as the ordinary stage, the figures moving in perspective, speaking naturally, all in the vivid colors of life. That day, in fact, is just around the corner.

Leo Brecher Opens His New Plaza Theater

Leo Brecher's new Plaza, on E. 58th St. between Madison and Park Avenues, was opened last night before a select audience that was enthusiastic in its approval of the attractive little art theater and its opening feature, "Gold Diggers of Broadway." The house is of the intimate type, seating 600, and has been built with a special eye to comfort. It has a cathedral-like front, while the interior decorative scheme is unobtrusively elegant.

The color keynote is brown. There are wainscotted walls and heavy plush carpets throughout the house, from balcony to the cozy lounge in the basement. Seats are unusually comfortable. The stage is of ample size and fitted with a wide screen. Provision also has been made for an orchestra pit. Smoking is permitted in the loge and mezzanine seats, and there are checkrooms and refreshment facilities. All space in the building is efficiently utilized.

Both silent and sound pictures will be presented with performances running from 1 to 11 p. m. and two changes weekly.

WITH REVOLUTIONARY changes occurring almost overnight, the least known branch, of the rank and file of minor executives, this talkative progressive and irresistible industry, is its technical side. A chance to keep abreast with what’s going on in the sentic laboratories and experimental theaters should be welcomed by all film folk with eyes toward its future. Such an opportunity now offered through the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, the first edition of which has just come to our desk. It is to be a monthly publication.

The first issue is indeed interesting. It is practical in size, comprehension enough to keep one reliably informed from even the international standpoint, and, best of all, the material is written light enough not to be technically boring to the layman.

“Hell Harbor”

ABOUT TEN YEARS ago we sat through a comedy at the Rialto that tickled us for a laughing loop. We think the best comedy, without an outstanding star, ever produced. We refer to “23½ Hours Leave,” directed by Henry King. Since then this director has brought to the screen, “D’able David,” “Stella Dallas” and “The White Sister,” each marking a milestone along the production highway. It was rather eagerly then that we looked forward to his first feature in sound. It is about ready, called “Hell Harbor” and was done in Florida. Here is a direct manifestation of what the talking picture of the future must be when backstage, Hollywood — Revised production program of Radio Pictures for 1930 now calls for 12 features, which will be an increase of 12 pictures over the 1929 schedule. Approximately $15,000,000 will be expended, it is estimated.

Silent versions will be made of some of the product. Half of the 1929 production program was made without dialogue and synchronized music. A number of pictures will be made on wide film.

courtroom and little pal stories have dulled their usefulness. "Hell Harbor" is no silent picture with dialogue.
Nor is it a stage production transferred bodily to the screen. Rather it is the offspring of the wedding of the two. It is a fearless, rugged story of primitive passions, designed primarily for nature minds. "Hell Harbor" should receive a satisfactory reception everywhere.

Getting Back TO the subject of publications lets turn to a somewhat bizarre and jowul sheet that has just found its way to our desk. It is the new house organ of Admiral Harold Coast Theaters and his flotilla of Fox West Chapel and is called "Now." It has snap enough to be called to the attention of all public publicity critics although it is our personal but modest opinion that it is quite too modern in dress for our rather conventional ideas. It is, however, colorful and no doubt quite in keeping with those modernistic thoughts now prevalent West of San Bar and South of the Tchachapi.

P. L. THOMSON, director of Public Relations of Western Electric, is en route to Chicago where he will address the Advertising Council of the National Board of Review to be held Saturday at the hotel Roosevelt. Winnie Lightner, Warner star, also will be among the guests.—J. T. Matchel, general director of the Cinema Art Guild, operating theaters in Buffalo, Philadelphia, Chicago and Rochester, arrived in town yesterday and is seeking new product for the houses.—Simon Guild of the Film Guild Cinema contemplates the installation of W. E. sound equipment at that house.

H. M. Warner will be one of the principal speakers at the annual luncheon of the National Board of Review to be held tomorrow on “Talking Pictures in Advertising and Industry.” Thomson is scheduled for another talk on Jan. 30 before the Electrical League of Boston.—Dan Healy, who played in “Glorying the American Girl” and “The Living Lady,” both made at the Paramount Eastern studio, staged the musical numbers for “Woof, Woof,” musical show now current.

Marion Brinn, who used to be known in vaudeville as “The Jazz Baby” because of her youth and dancing abilities, is now blossoming forth as a singer with Major Bowes’ Capitol Family, and will be heard with that gang Sunday night.—Hal Roach, who was in New York only about a fortnight ago and back in Hollywood the following week, is now once more on Mazda Lane for a short business sojourn.—Jane Jennings has returned from the Coast to resume her character work in the East.

Constance Bennett, who has been holidaying in Paris, embarks tomorrow for the return journey, and after a few days in N’Yawk, will continue overland to Hollywood to resume acting for Pathe.—J. R. O’Neill is back from Richmond, where he went to give support in exploiting the world premiere of Pathe’s “The Grand Parade,” which is set for national release Feb 2.

In getting back from a European trip, Raoul Walsh, Fox director, uncovered another “find” in the person of Katie Karlin, a singer and dancer from the Winter Garden, Berlin. She will be co-featured with Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe in “Broad Minded” tentatively titled.

Plunk—It Down With “Dough” for Plunket Month, is the clever stenographer heading the new RKO Organ in celebration during February to be called Joseph Plunkett Thank You Month. The organ soon spreads itself on all RKO activities. Jack Lewis broke out in print again but this time for the Warner clip sheet heading his own column called, “Here and There in Movieland.” Erno Rapp is reputed to have played to an aggregate audience of 30,000,000. He gets a fine luncheon as guest of the A.M.P.A. tomorrow.

The complete personnel of all studios comprises one of the many interesting sections of the forthcoming 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK.

Some theater owners are paying out thousands of dollars to have their houses wired for sound—and say they would be willing to pay out just as much if they could have their wires wired for silence.

“What kind of a picture is that?”

“But the plumbers don’t do any work.”

“Well, that’s the realism.”

The talks have come to say...

When the censors feel that they have finished their job of cleaning up behind the footlights, they have to do a little inspecting of what is going on behind the headlights.

“What type of play is most popular in Scotland?”

“Mystery drama.”

“Why?”

“They eat the theater’s lights in half.”

OUT NOW!

SOUND, the Motion Picture Reference Annual, first and only volume of its kind to be issued for the interest and convenience of the great army of officers and workers in all departments who constitute the Motion Picture Industry, is now in the mails.

FOR YOUR DESK

SOUND is durably bound in flexible covers, and in appearance on any desk is worthy of the purpose which it serves. The book has only to be briefly examined to be recognized as essential to the equipment of the desk of every executive and head of department in the Picture Industry.

REFERENCE BOOK

Issued as a special edition of The Exhibitors Daily Review and Motion Pictures Today, SOUND contains 212 pages of exact and invaluable information concerning every factor which, to date, has been instrumental in bringing about the successful revolution for sound and talking pictures, in a form and with classifications of material which make it an ideal book of reference for Producers, Distributors and Exhibitors.

THEATRE DIRECTORY

The outstanding achievement of the editors of SOUND undoubtedly, is its detailed Directory of nearly 8,000 theatres in the United States and Canada which had been wired for sound up to the time when the book went to press. Alphabetically arranged by states and cities and giving population and seating figures, together with the type of sound apparatus installed, this one feature of the volume will be seen as amply justifying its publication.

COMPLETE GUIDE

The directory feature, however, also includes lists of producers and their product for the current year; personnel of producing and distributing offices; specialists in production with their records; featured players and their pictures; manufacturers and their apparatus; Industry welfare organizations; lists of sound features and shorts released; Film Boards of Trade and their personnel, etc., etc.

The Mirror
—a column of comment

PRONOMATELY 9,000 theaters this land of ours have dug down to their jeans to buy sound equipment. In other, more forceful words, nearly half of the houses in these United States are now showing sound pictures. Sound, which, a year ago, did become a necessity to every de luxe theater, is rapidly occupying a similar status in the smaller house. In a theater without it is much like person without a voice. Generally peaking, talk on the screen reverberates right through your auditorium and into your box-office.

...OWDAYS A PLAY or musical you that clicks on Broadway has a mighty slim chance of escaping subscription to talking pictures. Filmmakers are indulging in what is accurately termed a scramble for jobs. Their viewpoint is this. When a show has been written (and, more frequently, rewritten, and has attracted customer cash week after week on Broadway, it must have that element known as box-office appeal. It’s far better to pay big dough to buy a tested vehicle than to spend perhaps a lesser sum for a project of comparatively undetermined impact. That’s one reason why the original story, at the present time, is the going hard.

HAT ARE YOU doing to safeguard your house against fire? Precautionary regulations throughout the country are fast becoming more drastic. The chances are that you’ll help minimize them and prevent irreplaceable additions to them later on if you observe existing laws closely.

Distributors Must Discontinue Present System

Individual Arbitration Allowable

Compulsory arbitration in blanket form, as provided in the Standard Exhibition Contract, is illegal although distributors may make individual arbitration agreements with exhibitors. This is the gist of the decree signed yesterday by U. S. District Judge Thacher in the Federal Government’s anti-trust action against the Hays office, Film Boards of Trade and 10 distributors.

The only fault the decree finds with the exhibition contract is in Paragraph 18 and also Rule 2, entitled “Enforcement of Decisions of Board of Arbitration,” of “Rules of Arbitration.” The decree says that they “constitute a conspiracy in restraint of trade.”

Screen Settings Affected
By Talker Requirements

THE settings in motion pictures have been affected by talking pictures in so far as the dialogue is usually played in a semi-close shot, and because constant dialogue in the earlier forms of talking films resulted in the loss of the silent picture's graphic movement. As I see it there should be a few key sets in which many action shots containing incidental sounds are made. Such a situation would be ideal for the art director, for he could then concentrate on the design of a single set without worrying too much about camera angles from more than one viewpoint. Thus the background may become more impressionistic in design, because the camera concentrates more on the players and the setting is then not so distracting.

High-Pressure Exploitation
Called Harmful to Industry

DIGNIFIED pictures should be exhibited in a dignified manner. Cheap pictures still can be sold to the gullible by cheap methods. But the man who wishes to do something real and lasting for the screen, and for his own pocketbook at the same time, will turn from cheapening the industry by making every film seem to be a shoddy, flashy thing that has to be sold by high-pressure carnival methods. Almost every picture that comes to Broadway is good entertainment. Why should it not be sold as such, rather than reduced to the level of the gypsies who surround the theater? Let's have more respect for ourselves and we shall receive more respect from others.

A Little from “Lots”

by RALPH WILK
A SWELL REVIEW of a GRAND PICTURE

Reprinted without editing from the Philadelphia Inquirer—one of the best reviews ever written of one of the best pictures ever made

First off, it seems necessary to decorate "Men Without Women," which opened at the Fox-Locust yesterday, with a lot of sizzling superlatives.

Compare it to a tale of Conrad’s, or Victor Hugo. Say that it possesses the power of Zola. Or hard-bitten like Hemingway. And then discover that such descriptions simply don’t mean anything. And go back to the title:

A few hours before they were roistering in port. Eyeing the geisha girls. Swilling beer. Swaggering, blatant fighting men. Now they’re dying. One cracks under the tension and goes insane. A few are coldly gauging the chances. A few are joking. A few crawl away to die alone in their bunks, as the water creeps up and dampsen the batteries.

The radio oscillator pounding out "SOS". "Any word, Sparks?" "Naw, this mus’ be a family line." The young ensign, fresh from Annapolis, in a tre-mulous voice, makes a speech about the glory of dying like men. Like Navy men. A hard-bitten Navy file grunts. A petty officer, gulping for air, smiles and says "All right, skipper."

There isn’t enough of hokum in this show to grease the back of a woodtick. The talking is about as near perfect as you will hear in a long time. And John Ford, the director, has done a job that ought to win his immortality. The cast of fourteen men are not actors. They are men dying like bunched rats. The audience gasps with them, staring with fascinated eyes as the oxygen tanks hiss out their last few precious litres of life.

Destroyers scattering wind-torn plumes of smoke as they knife through the sea, fog-sirens scattering unwary craft. Divers pounding to attract the attention of men, many of whom will not hear.

If you don’t know now, you will, when you have seen "Men Without Women", how much of courage, of desperate effort, of sheer, unvarnished human grandeur was seen in the tossing waters at Provincetown a few years ago, when the S-51 went down. And you’ll take a big, appreciative lungful of Philadelphia air—and like it.

Stringing

—some thoughts together—

By JACk AliC0Ate

When a big one is coming along at this time of year and you just naturally feel it. It’s our guess that “The Abandoned King” will knock ‘em—MUSICAL comedy comedians the screen should be kept in their well known place of amusing the terreers and NOT allowed to dote—THIS irresistible motion picture ART has again proven that its ONE industry that is relatively tection proof—OVER three hundred and fifty critics took part in a Film Daily Ten Best Pictures 1929 Poll, the result of which will be broadcast all over the omy—UNLESS you can point to current legitimate production as strong as “Cock-Eyed World” and as musical and delightful as “The Averad Parade” and as convincingly pretentious as “Applause” you’ll have the major and admit that the screen has passed the stage as medium of entertainment—THE OFA system in Australia is usable, with all sorts of ifs. Folks all over the world demand the BEST in features and, those made in America, at this time, seem to be at and nothing else but—PARAMOUNTS expansion program for its calls for additional stages at its

est Coast studios. Certainly NO of bad times in that direction—TOO many good pictures these days have an anchor around their neck by being hampered by bad usic. You CAN’T wish a good time into a sound picture—FEW are and you’re not sure. The Wick motivation for this has been annual gag in this biz for years and years. Looks like the GOODS will have a five per cent estimated cut in production for 1930

to sound—SOME day soon

we’re gonna wake up and find wide-

in EVERYWHERE.

Eight Features Added to List, Making 47

to Date

A production budget of $15,000,000, the largest annual outlay in the company’s history, is announced by Universal for this year. Number of features to be produced in 1930 probably will be well above the 50 mark, with definite plans already made for a total of 47. Of this group, 39 were announced a short time ago, while the following eight have just been added to the list:

Hearings Far Off

Although no definite date has been fixed for hearings on the Federal Government’s anti-trust actions against Warner Bros. and Fox, it is understood that they will not take place for many months, possibly a year or more. Both actions, which are civil, were instituted in U.S. District Court late in November. Fox filed its reply Jan. 17, denying all charges and seeking dismis-of the suit.

Denial of the Government’s charges of violating the Clayton anti-trust act, and a request for dismissal of the federal suit, is set forth in the formal reply of Warner Bros. to the Government action filed two months ago in the U. S. District Court. The chief allegation, that Warners and First National were competitive producing organizations prior to acquisition of the latter’s stock by Warner Bros., is categorically denied in the reply, filed by Sullivan & Cromwell, attorneys, for Warner Bros., Stanley

Okay Pictureing

Seattle—Pictureing of pickets by unions is legal providing the picketers do not approach closer than 100 feet to the entrance of theater. This is the unanimous opinion of the State Supreme Court rendered in an old case involving the Capitol and Colonial. A previous Supreme Court decision held that men bearing placards must not approach nearer than 100 feet.

Canadian Juvenile Act Being Strictly Observed

Montreal—Strict observance by exhibitors of the Provincial law forbidding children under the age of 16 to attend picture theaters is shown in the annual report of the Recorder's Court. In the previous year there were scores of prosecutions on the same charges.

Beginning tomorrow all R-K-O theaters in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and Bronx, where "Rio Rita" gets under way, will feature a special midnight showing starting 11:30. Walter Reichenbach, who previously had been connected with Underwood & Underwood, has resigned from Herbert Enterprises. According to authoritative sources, it is hinted he will now rejoin Underwood & Underwood. Special performances every Saturday and Sunday at six o'clock have been arranged for "The Love Parade" at the Criterion, N. Y.

A. S. Kany, stage and screen scribe of the Dayton, O., "Journal," has assembled a gallery of native or one-time Daytonians who have made good in a big way. In the lineup are a few film celebrities, including the Gish sisters and Marion and Betty Byron—Gene Markey, who writes novels, short stories and picture stories with excellent results, is due in New York within a few days from the Coast. His last work was for Marion Davies' "The Gay Nine Menes." Chelle Janis, is claimed to be the only woman manager in New York at the Loew Century.

Bert Adler is shipping (is that the right word?) his Graphic beauty winners to Panchon & Marco tomorrow on the "Dixie." The girls made personal appearances at the N. Y. Fox houses all week and played to capacity houses, sez Bert, when selections were made on stage of these houses three weeks ago. Mac Questele was the winner of the Helen Kane boop-boop-a-woop contest which R-K-O held recently. After a vacation in Havana and Nu Yurk, Bryan Foy and the wife are en route to the Coast. Sammy Burns is staging the dances in connection with picture production work engineered by Harry Revier over in Fort Lee,

A benefit performance, through the courtesy of Sam Morris, will take place for the family of Aron Com, Warner salesman, who has been taken ill, at the Central on Feb. 8. In addition to "Disraeli" vaudeville acts will be presented on the same bill.

Harry Buxbaum celebrated his (?) birthday Jan. 19 with a big whoopee party at his home. Many film executives were on hand and a grand time was had by all. Charles G. Huston, pioneer film executive, is now directing the affairs of Little Russia, restaurant and night club in N. Y.

The complete work of directors, stars and writers is but another interesting section of the forthcoming 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK—Out soon.

By PHIL M. DAILY

A CORUSCATING array of cinema literary lights graced the festive board of the AMPA luncheon at the Paramount hotel yesterday. Lions and the lambs literally sat down together and partook of bread, iced lamb chops and whatnot. Can you picture the hardboiled ladies and gents of the metropolitan日报 who tell the world what a pain in the neck so-and-so's latest talkie is smiling across the tables at the publicists? It's true! To tell the truth, what a stupendous, magnificent, gorgeous spectacle that talkie is!

But so help us, there they were! Erno Raper was the guest of honor. They probably figured that with Erno there, he could inject a little harmony into the shindig in case the party got rough. Mike Simon introduced Erno. (As if he needed any introduction. But Mike had connections and he had a supply of work to want to exercise. And Erno didn't seem to mind, either. He's a good sport.)

Then president Eddie Klein turned the gavel over to Regina Crewe of the "American," as the deaness of all the newspaper reviewers and Regina pounded the old gavel with the same gusto she sometimes exercises on a pahooka picture.

Pierre de Rohan, by way of paying for his free lunch, said that as far as the newspaper critics were concerned, they were the "Association of Motion Picture Non-Advertisers: A bon mot, that one."

Regina, in introducing alluring-blond Irene Thalberg (one of the "Nine," said she was "the little girl who makes four stars grow where only one grew before," Julius Cohen of the "Journal of Commerce" got leading the applause for himself. He should be a press agent. All the other speakers as speakers qualified 100 per cent as good film reviewers. It was a swell party.

Film Audiences Accustomed
To Naturalism in Scenery

MOTION picture audiences have long been accustomed to the most meticulous naturalism in scenery. Cities and oceans and landscapes are shown as purely photographic representations and the technique of motion picture acting is naturally keyed to the setting. When movie actors appear in street scenes they take on, to a certain degree, the color of the crowd, and movie cowboys in western pictures behave in the national manner of real cowboys. Something inevitably ludicrous results when the talking pictures confuse the methods of stage and screen; when an unseen orchestra suddenly drenches the realistic atmosphere of a seaport town with Broadway melodies, and as in "Hit the Deck," transforms a streetful of sailors and their girl friends into polished tap dancers. Talkers Crowding Out
Textbooks in Classroom

WITH the coming of the talkies, textbooks were destined to be radically modified, and the old-style, traditional classroom procedures will disappear. Textbooks will become thinner and textbook companies will disappear entirely. They will be replaced by study guides, outlines, and exercises, which, after all, constitute the best part of any textbook today. Boards of education will, in the future, spend less money on textbooks and more money on textbooks. With the addition of color and sound, the film will tell more about the world in ten minutes than any ordinary book could tell in a whole hour. Teachers will thus be enabled to spend more time on actual discussions and exercises, and pupils will be able to answer questions with greater ease and rapidity.

VIENNA is contented to get Al Jolson via screen, so the story goes. A concert agent there was all set to give Al a go, but when he learned the fee would be $5,000, he tried to out-smart Al's manager about Chalapin, Galli-Curci and Gigh being satisfied with between $2,000 and $3,000 for a performance. But it didn't work. Al should have sent Davy Lee out there and split the difference. More golf and backing in the sunshine is the reason for S. L. "Roxy" Rothafel being in Florida now.

Lawrence Schwab, of Schwab and Mandel, producers of "Follow Thru," is en route to Hollywood aboard the Panama Pacific liner California, to prepare a talking picture version of the musical comedy, "The Flying Dutchman," scheduled for production about the end of February. Jack and Josephine Shearer, of the Shearer studio, are making plans for the production of "Shearer's Birthday," a romantic comedy which will be made for release in August. A popular British film producer has come to New York to try to take up the production of "Young Sherlock Holmes," which he plans to film in the United States.

Jack Eaton just sent into New York two of the latest Grantland Rice sound sportlight productions. In "The Feline Fighter" and "Splashing Through," Jack claims they have succeeded in getting some very interesting and entertaining sporting events that have ever been built into a short. Oh Yeah? Here's one for the books, in a recent canvas of 11,912 members of the San Diego Community Better Film Conference, Columbia's "Flight" was highly recommended.

Walter Futter, the curiosity man, is in Hollywood on business. Bick and Bubbles, featured in the merry stories of Negro life being produced by Pathe, are having their material authored by two big "Saturday Evening Post" writers. Hugh Wiley and Sidney Lazarus.

Anita Stewart and her husband, George Converse, will soon bag and baggage into this sector from the Coast. Anita, the story goes, is going to make a presentation tour to some of the larger cities, while George Converse, quite a film producer, is going to radiograph the entire film industry, from the stage to the screen. The Gotham film-viewers treated "Night Ride," current at the Colony, and is telling exhibits all about it.

Donald Henderson Clarke is about the most writingest guy in this business. He knocks out publicity all day and then works on novels all evening. The Globe is another Broadway house in which you can park until 2:30 a.m., if you have the price of admission.

AND THAT'S THAT

By PHIL M. DALY

THAT SPELLING Bee started something. Warren Stokes, editor of "Film Trade Topics," the San Francisco regional, says that our correct spelling course has created a yearning for scholarly ability throughout the industry in the sun-kissed state. He sees the morale of the ushers in the Frisco theaters has been all shot to pieces. They gather in a huddle in the foyer and hold spelling contests while the customers wander around the aisles swapping tough words with strangers. Nobody pays any attention to the picture on the screen any more.

We have originated a talkie test for the Hollywood stars. If they can get by with the following without stuttering, any producer should be glad to sign 'em up:

"If a big Hollywood shot taught a cute hotsy tot to talk ere the tot could totter, ought the hotsy tot be taught to say ought or naught, or what ought not to be taught her? If to hoot and to tot a totty tot be taught by a Hollywood tutor, should the tutor get hit if the hooty tot hoot and tot at the Hollywood tutor?"

Helen Twelvetrees, the charming young screen player, is all upset because some fan has criticized a little technical flaw in one of her pictures. She asks us, among other things, "Do you think it is fair, Phil, for a fan to criticize a butler's coat because it does not have the correct number of buttons? Why even Shakespeare made mistakes. He speaks of King John, and his barons fighting with cannon, which were not invented until that period?"

So we have answered Helen thus: "Dear Helen: Pay no attention to the butler critic. Why, they even have folks drinking cocktails in pictures, when everybody knows this is a prohibition country. Could anything be more silly? Phil."

"Queen High" Bought By Paramount for Talker

"Queen High," stage musical comedy hit, has been purchased by Paramount and will be filmed at the Long Island studio, according to Jesse L. Lasky. It will be produced on the screen under the supervision of Schwab & Mandel, who presented the original stage hit and who recently aligned themselves with Paramount in the production of talkie motion pictures. Fred Newmeyer, who has directed many of the outstanding screen comedies of recent seasons, has been assigned to direct. To date one member of the cast has been named. He is Charles Ruggles, who will soon start work in "Young Man of Manhattan." "Queen High" will follow this talking picture on the production schedule at the Paramount studio in Astoria.

Chevalier's Next in Two Versions

The experiment of making French and English versions simultaneously having proved successful in the case of "The Big Pond," Paramount has decided to follow the same plan with Chevalier's next picture, "Too Much Luck." Hobart Henley will also direct. Production is scheduled to start March 15.

"Road House Nights" Set In New York

"Road House Nights," recently completed at the Paramount Long Island studio with Clayton, Jackson & Durante, Helen Morgan and Charles Ruggles featured, will be shown at the Paramount, starting February 14.

By HARRY N. BLAIR

WITH executives of the company expecting the picture to run behind schedule, due to the uncertainty of making French and English versions at the same time, "The Big Pond" was finished up several days ahead of schedule and is now being cut and edited. That's why Hobart Henley, the director, looks so pleased these days.

Louis B. Riech, creator of the "Gib- berg" series, terms his short comedies "Semi-Slap." Several more are set to be made at the Metropolitan studios under the titles of "Pullman Cops," "Fright Fight," and "The Speculator." These Al Boasberg comedies will all be released by Radio Pictures.

"Gambsy" is busily at work training 12 girls for ballet work in "Aladdin's Lamp" which Frank Cambria will direct at the Paramount studios. Cambria's "The Dresden Doll," shows an entirely new treatment in which silhouette figures are used to great effect.

Irving Kahal has gone to Atlantic City for a few days to compose lyrics for various song numbers to be featured in Paramount's "Young Man of Manhattan."

Mort Blumenstock is preparing to direct "Introducing Mrs. Gibbs," at the Paramount Long Island studio with Burns & Allen, of vaudeville, featured.

Ricardo Cortez paid a visit to the Paramount studio here last weekend when he renewed his acquaintance with some of the "oldtimers."

Monroe Shaff, assistant director of the Eastern Vitaphone Studio, donned the grease paint and frock coat of ancient vintage, to appear in "The Duble Party," the gay comedy of the nineties which was just completed at the Flatbush studio.

After thirty years on the operatic stage, Adam Djuric, foremost basso of the Manhattan Opera Company, was thrilled to make his debut in a Vitaphone presentation of "Celeste Aida" with Giovanni Martini, at the Eastern Vitaphone Studio. He admitted to being just a bit nervous.

LEN Stengel again played the part of a Duchess at the Eastern Vitaphone Studio. In the ballroom and Embassy scene of the Royal Box scene was, of course, the Duchess. In "The Master Sweeper," the Vitaphone Variety in which Chester Conklin was featured, Miss Stengel again lent her charm and grace to the Duchess part.

The thirty "extra" girls who appeared in "Celeste Aida," with Giovanni Martini, at the Eastern Vitaphone Studio, when furnished with the Egyptian costumes suitable for this opera, all exclaimed over the fact that they were so like the modern dresses of 1930, straight lined and just the length that fashion decrees for this year.

Dan Healy, stage comedian, who recently scored in "The Laughing Lady" and "Glorying the American Girl," both made at the Paramount Long Island studio was always the first person on the set during the making of those pictures, the chief reason being that he lives within five minutes ride of the studio.

"Gym-Jams," with Lew Mayor, has just been completed at the Warner Vitaphone Studios, under the direction of Murrey Roth. The act consists primarily of original jugglery tricks and bits of acrobatics, staged with a gymnasium background.

The drug store opposite Paramount's Long Island studio reports an alarming decrease in the sale of cigars and cigarettes ever since studio executives have put the "no-smoking" rule strictly in force. Smoking gum sales have shown a proportionate increase with cut plug a strong favorite.

"I'd give a churlish in a Chesterfield" is the slogan around the movie studios these days.

Irving Ostroff, of Paramount's property dept. has been with the company 17 years. One of his toughest assignments was to furnish a batch of live spiders for which he had to search several church belfries. The unsuspecting insects were captured by means of dampened sandpaper.

Fort has also completed "Lessons in French," in collaboration with Ernest Pascal, which has been accepted by one of the largest producers.

"Lady Lies" Awarded Palm

Another boost for Eastern production is in the fact that the Cincinnati Times-Star recently chose "The Lady Lies," as the best picture released during 1929. This production was made at the Paramount Long Island studio under the supervision of Hobart Henley with Claudette Colbert and Walter Huston featured.

British Industry Calls For Change in Films Act

London—Amendment of the Films Act as a means of aiding the British film industry is urged by Sir Gordon Craig in a memorandum placed before the Government. It is proposed that the quota be raised from seven and a half per cent to 25 per cent. In addition, the memorandum calls for the abolition of the provision of the act which stipulates that the personnel engaged in the making of a British picture must be three-fourths British. This, it is pointed out, prevents the hiring of the foreign talent which the British industry so badly needs.

"It is not true," asks the statement, "that Great Britain, in order to establish her motion picture industry, has prescribed limitations which, if put into effect in America, would ruin America's motion picture industry?"

United Artists Time, 1 hr., 14 mins.
THE STORY IS BASED ON OLD CHANNING POLLOCK PLAY, WELL MODERNIZED AND EFFICIENTLY PRODUCED.

As a stage play, years ago, under the name of "The Sign on the Door," this Channing Pollock murder mystery is a minor one. In its talker form, though dully somewhat by the stream of similar stories, it still makes the grade as effective entertainment for audiences by and large. This is largely due to a slight modernization plus the efficient direction of George Fitzmaurice and the very acceptable performances of Rod La Rocque is the Don Juan who gets shot under mysterious circumstances, and Kay Francis, in the role of the woman who tries to take the blame for the shooting in order to protect her husband. Zasu Pitts, just the right woman for the part, with her comic cracks as a dumb telephone operator, and Betty Bronson is delightful in a brief but key role. Cast: Rod La Rocque, Kay Francis, William Boyd, Betty Bronson, Harry Shubkin, Harry Mestayer, Dan MacDowell, Zasu Pitts, George Bunny.

Talking Picture Epiety
Time, 1 hr., 26 mins.
ENGROSSING AND SOME TIMES THRILLING TRAVEL EPISODES FROM THE RARELY VISITED SPOTS OF THE SOUTH SEAS AND AFRICA.

With the aid of a genuinely interesting lecture delivered by Martin Johnson, East Africa, this travelog shows a lot of ferocious looking head hunters, "devil-devil" men and other strange characters. In the African portion, quite a few scenes are more or less familiar. The picture is presented on the order of a show within a show, with the Martin Johnson apparently showing the homes and affairs of friends in their New York home. This, incidentally, allows for some dialogue from Mrs. Johnson and a few of her guests, including one of the three Boys Scouts who were taken on the exploration trip. This gives the presentation a different touch from the usual travelog. J. Leo Meacham is given directorial credit. Photography is generally good. Gillette.

JUST A FILLER. VERY WEAK BRITISH OFFERING WITH POOR CONTINUITY AND UNINTERESTING NARRATION VERSITY THAT LACKS PUNCH.

Murder mystery, based on the story by Robert Hichens. The entire affair is handled very well and with a glossy finish. It lacks directorial expressiveness, and moves awkwardly through a ragged continuity. The acting is commonplace, and Warwick Ward in the leading role fails to get over any convincing acting. The leading lady, Olga Tschecnova, a Russian, looks quite nice and is quite black. Clive sexy Brook returns from India to marry his childhood sweetheart, but it seems that he got himself in a scrap with a married woman through no fault of his own. She follows him to London, and on the eve of his engagement to her sweetheart he is murdered. The works. Close's hat and coat are found in her apartment after she is apparently murdered. Her husband says the triumph of the idea is that his fiancée clears him and proves it a suicide. A weak number.

GERMAN PRODUCTION FALLS FLAT WITH OUTDATED DIRECTION AND STILTED ACTING. STORY LACKS ANY WORTHWHILE ENTERTAINMENT VALUE.

Drama. This uncredited German production was adapted from Honore de Balzac's story, "Splendeurs et Miseres de Courtisanes," but it lacks any touch of the great master of dramatic portrayal. The continuity is very ragged, and the direction amateurish. The offering is what could be expected from the smaller companies of Hollywood fifteen years ago. Paul Wegener is the only character who registers. His part is that of an ex-convert who uses a young man to advance his social ambitions. The theme is that of a courtisan who falls in love with the young woman and their romance is almost lighted through the selfish scheming of the ex-convict, now a marquis. The girl, Andrée La Fayette, seems more than a bit out of character and part mechanically. The entire production is weak, and can only serve as a filler in small houses.

Cast: Richard Telfer, La Lafayette, Werner Feuerter, Nien Son Ling, Karl Schuck, Nino Rota, Blu Brand, Meriem Bay, and many others. Director, Manfred Noa; Author, Balzac; Adaptation, Max Hen; Editor, Not listed; Title: Not listed; Camearaman, Not listed; Direction, poor. Photography, okay. Gillette.

(Dorothy Dixon, Synchronized)

Big Four Time, 1 hr., 12 mins.
FOR SMALL STANDS, RATES VERY HIGH WITH THIS STORY THAT MISSES AS COMEDY. HORTON IS LICKED BY HIS OWN PLOT.

Comedy. This is a very unsatisfactory production from all angles. It fails to hold the interest, and is very drarry. Only the good work of Edward Everett Horton holds it up, and it offers him the poorest vehicle we have ever seen him in. The story tells of a titled Englishman who goes to America to inherit a fortune, on the understanding that he has quit the drinking. So he finds himself in a situation where he is forced to allow his valet to pose as himself, and he becomes the valet, in order to stand the inspection successfully and win the inheritance. The valet performs splendidly, and is even better when he poses as his master. But the lack of quality in the script fogs this rather depressing comedy, with standing comedy adequately. It registers as pretty much of a dud, and can only be recommended for discriminating audiences.

"Up the Congo"

First Division Time, 58 mins.
VERY INTERESTING PICTORIAL RECORD OF TRAVEL IN THE AFRICAN CONGO THAT CARRIES REAL ENTERTAINMENT WITH NATIVE CUSTOMS AND ANIMAL LIFE.

This is a very highly recommended production from all angles. Stanley M. O'Brien and Grace Flandran, two adventurous girls who made the trip through the Belgian Congo and British West Africa. Very well handled photographically, and the feminine directorial hand is evident in the way they emphasized the native tribal customs, wedding of the African kings to a few hundred wives apiece, etc. They went light on the animal shots, but there are some of the most interesting of the African travelogues thus far, and it deserves a break because of its novelty, if nothing else. It is a splendid travelog, and will certainly interest the lovers of travel and the kids. A kick out of the camera work, with some vicious looking rapids. The pyramids are shown, also some seven-foot giants, in evening gowns—meaning that the action goes on while the women work. All credits go to Alice M. O'Brien and Grace Flandran, who conducted the expedition. Direction, good. Photography, clear.

Author, Editor, TIME, TIME, TIME, another perfor- mance who PACKED HUMAN interest STRONG very like keeping real fans, who keep a watch on the happenings of the person that they adore. It's taken from the Harry Dall stage play, "The Family Upstairs," which was a hit, and the screen version will click even better. The laughs, all of them natural and wholesome, come by the dozen, in addition to which there is plenty of good human interest and a fetching love story. The senior Willie Collier gives a fine performance as the head of the family, and his son, a precocious young daughter and another daughter, of working age, who makes a protective husband because the mother puts on too much ritz in order to make an impression on him. Margaret Churchill and Rex Bell as lovers do good work.

SNAPPY WESTERN WITH A STRONG AND ORIGINAL PLOT THAT CRAMS ACTION ALL THE FAR OUT AND MADE FOR THE FANS ANYWHERE.

Western. Sally Winters is the author, and she has a knack of writing modern westerns that carry a lot of authentic data about the west that very few westerners contain. This one, like all of her scenarios, has a lot of original slants that make the film very refreshing entertainment. In this story Bob Custer is a secret service agent on a gang of counterfeiters. He comes into the Mexican border country, and is picked up by the Rangers as a suspicious stranger, in league with the counterfeiters. All through the story the Rangers and Bob are working at cross purposes, but he is using the situation to get the dope on the real counterfeiters. Lots of action, fighting and plot and counterplot keeps the audience interested, and fans who like their thrills will enjoy this one.

SUREFIRE ANYWHERE. SPLENDID PRODUCTION WITH TREMENDOUS HEART PULLING IN ONE OF FINEST MOTHER LOVE PICTURES EVER FILMED.

Drama of the great war. Adapted from James M. Barrie's "The Old Maid," by Charles W. Brown; a production that departs from the beaten track and its producers have had the courage to be original. It is a faithful transcription of Barrie's famous play of the old maid character in London who adopts a soldier boy as her son. Beryl Mercer as the mother is immense, and gives one of the finest mother roles that the screen has ever seen. It ranks with the very best. Gary Cooper as the son in the kith and kin of the famous Black Watch regiment does one of his best roles to date. A few short war scenes are well handled, fine direction, characterization and camera. An ace picture and one that will give the public an aesthetic punch. Looks good anywhere.

Domestic drama. A novel-husband with a grownup daughter decides, to quit his good wife for a more modern shows. Her Motion Picture, who in turn here is a woman, with a son of age. The children meet and fall in love with each other before learning their identities. Upon finding out who they are, their dreams are knocked into a cocked hat, with the girl feeling she is ever so much the wronged mother. Although the situations here do not pack a punch of the proportions that could be extracted from the conclusion of the story, it is as ever so much, frequently whimsical, and ends satisfactorily. "Don't Play Spot!"
Time, 9 mins.

Classic Humor
An excellent character bit by the distinguished English actor, appearing as the miser from "Bleak House." The role is that of a decrepit, stunting old tightwad with wrinkles and pains in all parts of his body. Lines and actions have plenty of humor in them. Good for almost any audience, but more the intelligent particularly will appreciate it.

SOUNDS

"A Song Drama"
Vitaphone Time, 8 mins.

Drama and Jazz
Dorickson and Brown do not register so well in this one. Opening in a European cellar setting, Dickson sings a song of Siberia and his voice is way off. Brown demonstrated some good piano tapping. As a filler, yes.

SILENT

"Trail of the Pack"
Universal Time, 16 mins.

Canadian Melodrama
One of the Ted Carson Northwest Mounted Police Series. An outlaw, pursued by a Mounty, jumps into a farm wagon being driven by a ruffian and forces her, at the point of his gun, to conceal him until the guardian of the law is out of sight. Then the culprit grabs the reins himself and takes the girl to a shack where a whole gang of ruffians are hiding. The Mounty later turns up, is overpowered in a fight, but finally regains his balance and, with the aid of ruffians, captures the pack of ruffians. Then he does a fadeout with the girl. Not much strength to the story, but will do as a fill-in. Josef Levigard directed.

"Make It Snappy"
Universal Time, 20 mins.

Fair Comedy
Sid Saylor in love with his boss's daughter finally gets his chance for a new girl and scoops. He sent to get pictures of the fight champ's wedding. After being thrown out a number of times he succeeds in following the champ with a hand-organ. After the usual brick throwing, auto chasing, and building acrobatic. Sid gets the pictures, only to drop them into a lake as he welcomed his sweetheart. Directed by H. Edwards. Mild comedy.

"The Duke of Dublin"
Irish Comedy
Paramount Time, 13 mins.

As an Irishman who is elevated from a ditch digger to a millionaire through the death of an uncle, Charlie Murray gives a good account of himself as the star of this Christie comedy. A typical Charlie Murray fun fest, greatly enhanced by dialogue. Too bad that a few terrible stale jokes were stuck in the early scenes. With all the good feelers in the cast, this could have been a real winner. Outside of this, Director William Watson turned out a consistently amusing affair on the whole and it should be welcome anywhere.

LOCK SECTIONS FURNISHED FOR FILM-SAFE EQUIPMENT

Baltimore—In addition to separate compartments being rigidly enforced throughout the country several processes are now in use involving the injection of chemicals into wood to make it more or less fire retardant, according to the Bureau of Standards. For interior work ammonium phosphate and ammonium sulphate and combinations of them have been much used for this purpose. Other chemicals proposed by the Bureau were ammonium chloride, sodium borate and zinc chloride. It has been found that most of these chemicals are soluble and would be washed out where exposed to the weather and possibly when used on floors, if the floors are cleaned by washing.

For outside use a combined treatment with sodium borate and ammonium chloride has been proposed and in laboratory tests found fairly efficient. The resulting salt, a zine borate, is less soluble than the other salts mentioned.

If a sufficient amount of the above chemicals is injected it will make the wood fire retardant in the sense that it will not flame at ordinary temperatures although at higher temperatures it will char and the volatiles will distill off and burn.

Bilmajr Lights Prove Aid in Seat Checking

The seat indicator recently put out by the Bilmajr Corp. of New York, is among the newest efficiency aids in theater operation to be placed on the market. The device makes it easy to locate empty seats, every seat being represented by a light on a switchboard. When a seat is unoccupied the corresponding light is turned on. The apparatus provides for the wiring of every seat. Wires connect with an aisle box on which every seat in the row is indicated and run to a master board in the foyer or some other part of the theater. This board is patterned after the seating diagram of the house. When a person sits down the light for that seat is automatically switched off. The device is said to cut down ushering expenses and to reduce accidents.

The Vocalite screen was not totally consumed until it had burned for more than three minutes, the company says.

The Mirror
—a column of comment

AMERICAN producers are not going to lose their supremacy of the foreign market in the sound shuffle. Concrete proof that the industry in this country is preparing to insure its domination of the markets abroad is found in the production schedules now being set. Multi-lingual pictures, with dialect that rings true in the country in which it is to be shown, are being made. American producers realize that nothing is more untrustful to a nation than to have its language mispronounced—counterfeit. Without producers turning out product that stands ace high in entertainment and is faithful in dialect, there’s no reason in this wide picture-enthusiastic world why America won’t hurdle that sound obstacle.

IT’S A gratifying fact that the public’s taste in pictures is improving. Polls conducted by entreprenizing newspapers and magazines throughout the country verify this statement. In a large majority of cases where fans have been asked to select the best pictures of the past year, their choices have indicated a more widespread appreciation of worthwhile films. Let’s hope that the day is not far distant when a producer can consistently present product made along radically new and different lines and have the public really appreciate it.

THIS IS a day of co-operation—of getting together for mutual benefit. The latest branch of the industry to tangibly recognize this fact is the laboratories. They’ve formed an association which no doubt will prove an important factor in prescribing the necessary remedies for their problems.

Comedies Should Not Exceed Three Reels, Says Hal Roach

PRODUCERS and stars who produce independently, make a mistake when they go beyond two or three reels and turn out a comedy of so-called feature length. Film and stage comedies usually consist of a series of short pictures. Invariably you can take any feature length comedy and divide it up into a distinct and separate group of short films.

The purpose of comedies is to make people laugh, and if you stick to that purpose you must of necessity be brief and to the point. The moment you introduce love interest or any other element you distract from your primary purpose. No production that lasts beyond thirty minutes, whether it is on the stage or on the screen, can rely solely on its comic situations.

Suggests Letup of Mergers While Other Work is Done

WHATEVER this year brings forth it is perfectly evident that the whole industry can do with a rest from consolidation. There is plenty of work to be done in experimental production and the advance of dialogue film and the development of colour and stereoscopy. These things are undoubtedly realized, and therefore it is not likely that the merger will develop and disturb, as it has done in the past period of eighteen months. Should Mr. Laemmle's prophecy come true, that a number of the mergers that have already taken place will come unstuck, it will be interesting to follow the fortunes of the post-merger units.

ERNEST MAAS, production man, recently at the Paramount Long Island studio and Frederica Sagor, sceneartist, leave for the Coast on Saturday, after spending one full year in New York. Happy folks, I'll bet, and how? In "The Son of the Gods," which gets under way at the Winter Garden Thursday, they promise us we'll hear Rich Barthelmess speak Chinese. Here's hoping M-G-M doesn't spring that line about Lon Chaney hissing like a real snake in his next talker.

Don Roberts tells one about a Scotchman who, some way or other, celebrated a punch in the nose in front of the Capitol and started running to the Polyclinic looking for somebody to buy a blood transfusion. Don, by the way, is going to do his actin' stuff in a dialogue short for Sammy Burns at Fort Lee Metropolitan studios, of course. After a series of guessing contests, the new Loew house, uptown New York was finally named Loew's 175th St.

Bert Lytell, who has been touring with the stage show "Brothers" is scheduled to anchor back in Hollywood along about the 3rd of Feb., where he will make his first talker. Capt. Benjamin H. Murray, traveler and lecturer, has been engaged to make personal appearances and lectures with "Jungle," the African jungle picture made by the Davenport-Quigley Expedition. The company now has six roadshow crews in circulation for the film.

"A Peer's Son on the Screen," is one of the heads on a bit of news coming from Lunnin. Lord Churchill's son, the Hon. Victor Spencer, will be seeing a leading role in "The Blue Peter," a British Filmcraft picture. Now you all heard about that other Pier story, well, forget it. Things sure did hum Saturday night at that Fox party thrown at the Commodore. It started out in great fashion and ended up with no styles barred.

Sam Zierler, who has climbed into the job of business managing James Cruze, Inc., has done a lotta producing both in the East and West. He recently made "The Talk of Hollywood," in this great big town. Harry H. Thomas, who is associated with Cruze in his production activities, has been through the movin' pitcher mill from A to Z. Since prints of "Rio Rita" went to work Saturday in houses in the Greater New York territory, Sam Warshawsky informs.

AND THAT'S THAT

BY PHIL M. DALY

WILL ROGERS has interviewed Bernard Shaw, the great British dramatist. According to Montmorency Gloop, their rowing correspondent, "While they discussed the Hollywood situation and tore it all to pieces. As both these world-famous humorists have done their bit for Mr. Fox before his jumping cameras. Mr. Gloop's following report of the interview is very timely:

Shaw: Not at all, Bill. The American public doesn't understand English anyway. So they think I'm putting on a Swedish ventriloquist act.

Rogers: That gives me an idea. Let's do a real ventriloquist act for the talkies. I'll be the dummy.

Shaw: You're just the type, Bill. But you're too heavy to sit on my knee.

Rogers: Well, Bernie, you sit on my knee, and let the public try to figure out which is the dummy.

Shaw: Don't you think the fans have enough to figure out with the present state of sound recording without adding to the general confusion?

Rogers: Righto. What do you think about the future of the talkies?

Shaw: Very bright, old bean. When the British screen players have taught the great American public how to speak English, it will be possible for British producers to book their films over American circuits and get some real dough.

Rogers: You don't mean to tell me that British producers would accept money for their pictures. However, what chance d'yuh think I got of going in the talkies in England?

Shaw: Marvelous. I think your picture "They Had to See Paris" is the greatest western thriller ever filmed. Good day, and take your chewing gum off the door knob on your way out.

on the equipment question it will be necessary for American exchanges to discontinue serving this country with talkies. Canty, who is here on a visit from his Paris headquarters, made the following statement:

"The silent film can practically be considered as a relic today. This fact is very noticeable today, since the American exchanges in Germany have almost no good silent films to offer for distribution in Germany. One should take into consideration that it necessitates a monthly average of 30 films to cover the needs of the German moving picture theaters. Consequently, the American exchanges won't be in a position to distribute their sound films in Germany, they will be compelled to close their doors, which will result in useless expenses. On the other hand, if the patent disputes continue in Germany, the great number of German exhibitors going to find their quota of 30 films per month in order to cover their needs.

The German film industry should be a large industry. The German market for American films should be a very large market. But artificial obstacles preventing the free expansion of the industry, should be done away with once and for all for the good of the entire world."

COLOR AIMS AT ILLUSION SAYS DIRECTOR ROY MACK

That color photography does not aim at realism, but instead tends to create poetic illusion, is the assertion of Roy Mack, director of Technicolor. "Realism and realistic motion pictures do not aim primarily at beauty," Mack says, "they are so concentrated upon truth to reality that beauty is well nigh forgotten. Yet beauty is the life-blood of any art. The gift of color to the screen makes it a more powerful lever upon the emotions and instincts of the people. It can give the public more exhibition of beauty than any other one art medium for it combines practically all arts now that it has a voice and color. Color, I am predicting, is going to play a bigger and more important part in motion pictures that it does today. Color photography will be perfected until we reach that point and return to the screen the delicate color harmonies of the sunset."

Mack has directed a number of Vitaphone color shorts including "Dance of the Paper Dolls," "Poor Little Butterfly," "The South Sea Pearl," "A Holiday in Storyland," "Contrary Mary" and "The Sultan's Jester."

Reginald Denney and Roland Young are the only players cast for the picture so far.

Early History of Wide Film is Outlined by C. L. Gregory

The following article, prepared by Carl Louis Gregory, and appearing monthly in the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, gives a detailed outline of the development of wide film:

It has been claimed that there is only one fundamental misrepresentation of wide film. Many movies were produced in the standard or screen size. In fact, much of the modern equipment and techniques used in the production of wide film were developed by the same companies that produced the standard or screen film. Therefore, wide film is not a recent invention.

History moves in cycles and events in the use of wide film of various gauges and dimensions are often confused. It is true that the early years of wide film were marked by the efforts of numerous pioneers who were working independently of each other. However, it is also true that many of the standard sized films were developed and manufactured using the same equipment and techniques as the wide film, and that many of the same people were involved in both.

One of the most important pioneers in the development of wide film was M. G. M. Among the earliest experiments in wide film were those conducted by M. G. M. in 1919. In that year, M. G. M. produced the first wide film, "The River," which was 16 mm. wide. The film was shot on 35 mm. film and had a sound track. The film was shown in a special projection booth that had a wide screen and was capable of showing the film in both standard and wide sizes.

In the 1920s, wide film was used extensively in the making of movies. The most famous wide film of this period was "The Jazz Singer," which was released in 1927. The film was shot on 35 mm. film and had a sound track. It was the first American movie to be released with sound, and it was an instant success.

By the end of the 1920s, wide film was being used extensively in the making of movies, and it was becoming increasingly popular. In the 1930s, wide film became even more popular, and it was used in a wide variety of movies. At this time, wide film was used in both black and white and in color.

In the 1940s, wide film was still being used extensively in the making of movies. However, by the late 1940s, wide film was becoming less popular, and it was being replaced by the standard or screen film. This was due in part to the fact that wide film was more expensive to produce than the standard or screen film. However, wide film was also becoming less popular because it was increasingly difficult to find theaters that were able to show wide films.

Despite the decline in the use of wide film, it continues to be used in some movies today. For example, wide film is used in a number of recent movies, such as "The Lord of the Rings." Wide film is also used in some documentaries, and it is occasionally used in television programs.

No Fireproof Screen Edict for Syracuse Theaters

Assemblies here said yesterday. Although such an order had been considered, recent investigations in various sections of the state, have convinced Wilkes that the issue was unnecessary, pointing out that few fires have been known to start in those sections in a screen and that screens now in use are of slow burning material. Thelarger houses, he claimed, had asbesstiss between the screen and the audience for use in event of fire, or backfiring. To force the installation of new screens at the present time would undermine the business on smaller exhibitors already facing heavy cost of sound, Wilkes said.

William Fox Offers to Resign from All Fox Companies

Howell of the Commercial National Bank, and Bernard Baruch have agreed to act as trustees under the new plan, the Fox letter stated, and the trustees would elect a new board including William Fox, Jack G. Leo, Winfield Sheehan, Bernard Baruch or Bernard Baruch, Jr., Louis Abrons and another member to be chosen by the trustees.

In order to go ahead with the new arrangement, the letter further stated, it would be necessary for J. E. Otterson and Halsey, Stuart & Co., to deposit with the Bankers Trust Co., $100,000 to the credit of the Fox group. Undermyer stressed the fact that the new plan would not constitute a reorganization of the Fox companies, but would be aimed at representing the petitioners, and after a closed conference between Judge Cole, Undermyer, who is counsel for the Fox trusts, and Robert T. Swain, representing the three banking houses, Issidor J. Kresel, attorney for Susie D. Kuser, and others, the hearing was continued to 3 o'clock today to give the petitioning side time to consider the suggested plan.

In his letter offering "to procure the resignations of at least a majority of the present officers of Fox Film and Fox Theaters," Fox also stated that, "in the event the formation of the new trusteeship is not satisfactory to the court, the resignations deposited may be delivered to the parties who signed them."

The letter also stated that "the vote to trust agreement will provide that the trustees will re-elect the same board that is now to be put into office, upon the resignation of the present directors of one year or until a new setup has been arranged under the filing plan."

Lightman and Myers Comment on Judge Thacher Decree

court's decision, that exhibitors can be bound by any such agreements or negotiations (referring to a standard exhibition contract) unless practically every exhibitor in the United States were personally represented—negotiate such contract and rules for arbitration and to be bound by such agreement," said Lightman.

"The decree conforms to settled principles of law and affords a definite guide for the industry in working out a new plan that will be legally unobjectionable and can commend the support of all branches," declared Myers.

Following is the Lightman comment:

"I have carefully read both Judge Thacher's decision and decree, and while the court says that distributors have a right to enter into negotiations with exhibitors with reference to a form of standard exhibition contract and with reference to provisions for the admission of directors, the court also indicates that only those distributors and exhibitors so negotiating would be bound by any such agreement."

"In other words, as I interpret the court's decision, if all distributors entered into such negotiations through their representatives they could be bound by terms of the contracts without their consent, and if all exhibitors so negotiating would be bound by any such agreement."

"I do not think that the present exhibitor organizations or committees, could bind a great majority of exhibitors and cooperations engaged in the exhibition business. A great number of the theater owners in the United States are not members of any national exhibitor organization. It would seem that the distributors are in a position to go ahead with such negotiations, but exhibitors are not; and unless some feasible plan can be devised whereby a great majority of the exhibitors in the country can likewise be bound by such agreements, and in such negotiations, I cannot see what can be accomplished by continuing the conferences."

"However, if such a plan can be suggested by anyone, Mr. Kent on his return, the group from the M. P. T. O. A. is, of course, prepared to give a hearing and accomplishing anything that will prove to be constructive and helpful."

"Judge Thacher's decision does one thing—it is conclusive. Its intent and purpose leaves no halfway ground. Perhaps, after all, the arbitrators in the court, have been to some people in this business who seem to prefer having the courts settle their differences, and to conclusion is that they will certainly have this opportunity. My personal observation is that it might prove a 'noble experiment' to return, for the time being, to the old method of doing business."

Myers Comment

Following is the comment from Myers:

"It is with some satisfaction that we note the completeness with which the decree clears the way for a system of arbitration such as proposed by the Allied States Association at the 5-5 conference."

"There would seem to be no reason why the distributors should further delay calling the conference again into session, to the end that the industry, conforming to the principles laid down by the court, may quickly resolve all remaining differences."

"We are the honest and the exhibitors take a narrow view of the decree and get the notion that law can eliminate the old system by setting 'individually'-a presumption that will never be indulged so long as they are so tight."

"I am not an optimist and I am a pessimist and believe that all elements are tired of the existent chaos and are anxious to get on the basis of some form of the old order and this new solution is rather than beyond the court."

Talkers Will Bring Opera
To the People at Large

THE day, not far distant, when grand opera comes to the people is foreshadowed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which has signed Lawrence Tibbett, of the Metropolitan, for its singing, dialogue and Technicolor pictures.

Opera is not opera without stage, scenery, costumes, lighting. Great as the influence of radio has been in bringing it to remote listeners, the complete illusion can never be created except on the screen.

Every little corner movie theater is a potential opera house.

Through the medium of the singles, Americans may in time learn to appreciate music as keenly as Germans and Italians do now.

Talkers Must Avoid Ruts
To Assure Permanency

WHERE talks are to get as academic a question as where movies themselves will get to. It is the same question, after all, unless you choose to insist that the silent screen is fundamentally a different thing from the audible screen. A contention which one would have a hard time proving. Personally I believe that, depending on the perfection of mechanical apparatus, talks will go as far as a cash-paying public will encourage them to go. This same cash-paying public seems to be more articulate in its reactions to sound than it used to be to silent pictures. Audiences are known, frequently, to talk back to talks, in the form of shouts and laughter and even ribald comment. Sappy love scenes do not go so well nowadays, when the full sappiness of them emerges in utter words.

James Shelley Hamilton in "National Board of Review Magazine"

ALONG THE RIALTO

Phil M. Daly, Jr.

ONE of the non-English-speaking stars to survive the talkers arrives in New York this week. He’s Rin-Tin-Tin, who is set to parade in vaudeville and then go abroad for a tour. With him, naturally enough, is Lee Duncan, his owner, who incidentally is writing a book about Rinty’s discovery and career. Lily Damita, who burns ‘em up in the celluloid, will try it over the ether Thursday night when she sings “It’s You I Love,” from Station WEA. The song’s from her current stage vehicle, “Sou’W Gunnas.”

The Hollywood-to-vaudeville migration continues with Ricardo Cortez, John Bowers and Marguerite De La Motte among those to shake incandescent for footlights. Three important executives of M. Witmark & Sons are all under 27 years of age. They are: Lewis Warner, 21, son of Harry Warner; Edwin Morris, 22, son of Sam E. Morris, and Julius Witmark, Jr., 26.

George Batchelor, president of Chesterfield, is en route to the Coast where he will produce his next all-talker, “Ladies in Love,” which Charlie Bean will prepare, RKO, through the company’s house organ, is playing up the holiday month, February, which has Lincoln’s, St. Valentine’s, and Washington’s birthdays set down for special occasions.

Major L. E. Thompson is preparing a series of articles on “Sound” for “Voice of R-K-O.” The first is scheduled to appear in the March issue of the publication. Bert Lytell when in Hollywood, will not make his first all-talker, see the Columbia space grabber, Hort Schorr. She gently reminds us of “The Lone Wolf’s Daughter” and in it Bert did his talking first, for pitchers.

Tested exploitation stunts are listed in the 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK—Out soon.

AND THAT’S THAT

by Phil M. Daly

THE ONTARIO board of censors has made its annual report, and shows about 60 films rejected and over 600 subject to minor changes. One of the reasons given for censorship was “too much Americanism.”

That’s a laugh. With all those American tourists journeying through Canada and spending heavy jack, has anyone heard the hotel proprietors and the storekeepers complaining: “Too much Americanism?” What is that old wheeze about biting the hand that feeds you?

Scotty (to his gal): “Are you fond of moving pictures, Jennie?”

Jennie: “Ay, Sandy.”

Scotty: “Then give me a hand and move in sue to my new lodgings.”

New House Manager: (to gent hanging round theater lobby for an hour): “Come, my man. Can’t you buy a ticket? Whatja want around here?”

Stranger: “Guess I want a new house manager. I’m the owner.”

Gus: “Darling, in the movie theater your teeth shine in the darkness like pearls.”

Gertie: “Oh, yeah? And when were you in the movies with Pearl?”

Friend, to independent theater owner: “Cheer up, old man. Things aren’t as bad as they seem to be.”

Theater owner: “No, but they seem to be.”

Oscar Straus Honored at Warner Luncheon

Oscar Straus, noted Viennese composer, was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Warner Bros. yesterday at the Ritz-Carlton. The event was just a day after the 25th anniversary of Straus as a composer. In recognition of the latter occasion, the Austrian government conferred upon Straus the Order of Merit, which corresponds to the French Legion of Honor.

In a short address, Straus expressed his gratitude to the Warners for bringing him here to write for Vitaphone productions which bring his works to audiences of millions in contrast to the comparatively small numbers reached by the stage. Harry M. Warner, in reply, said the signing of Straus was just another step in the fulfillment of the Warner promise to present the world's best talent through the Vitaphone.

The reception committee for the luncheon consisted of H. M. Warner, Gene Buck, John Philip Sousa, George Gershwin, Henry K. Hadley, Vincent Youmans, Max Dreyfus and Oley Speaks. Also present were: Mrs. Oscar Straus, Chief Warner, Herman Starr, S. "Harl" Shyer, A. P. Wannam and J. C. Rosehal.

Something of a military air pervades the work of J. Fred Cox, composer of the music in “Sons O’ Guns,” current musical hit, who has just completed a Vitaphone Variety entitled “A Battery of Hits” and has its premiere showing at the Roxy, assisted with Murray Roth directing.

If Helen Kane should need a voice double while making "Dangerous Nan McGrew," she has only to call on the script girl, Peggy Quiso, whose “boploop” double, Joni Q., is known to everyone along “writers’ row” at the Paramount Long Island studio. Incidentally, Peggy makes her debut as a script girl with this picture, having formerly been a stenog.

Herman and Joe Mankiewicz have left for Paramount’s West Coast studios, to assist on the script of Jack Oakie’s next picture, “Margo Himself.”

Pat Heening & Co., vaudeville performers, have just completed a comedy short, “A Family Affair,” under Murray Roth’s direction. The title is no misnomer since Heening is supported by his father and mother. They sing, dance, talk and juggle.

There is an old saying, “Little pitchers have big ears,” which is certainly true in the case of Ernest Zasuky, sound expert on “Young Man of Manhattan,” who was the radio pitcher on the home town baseball team, not so long ago.

Acting runs in the family of Lester Neilson, assistant director on Paramount’s short comedy, “Sailor’s Destiny.” His brother is the first local exhibitor to install Western Electric ear-phones for patrons who are hard of hearing.

Pictures Not to Blame for Stage Decline, Pastor Says

IT is ridiculous to say that the films are killing the theater. As well say that baseball with its throngs of people is killing tennis or golf. Or that our popular jazz orchestras are killing our symphony orchestras. Toscanini has nothing to fear from Rudy Vallee. Neither has a fine sensitive play like "Journey's End" anything to fear from "The Cock-Eyed World." Things of this kind move on different planes—in different worlds. The drama in its best estate, is an art. Our theater managers have changed it into a business. Not even into an honest business! For years, now, the theater has been used to exploit the public by managers who, with a few honorable exceptions, are ignorant and vulgar men who know nothing of the traditions and see little of the glories of the theater and who are moved by no higher passion than that of lust for money. The people see nothing in the theater now but a place in which they are either robbed or betrayed, and they go elsewhere or stay at home.

and Dillon, Read & Co., the financial houses behind the new Fox plan. The development followed the report of Morton Bogue, attorney for J. E. Otterson (Electrical Research Analysis) and Halsey, Stuart & Co., that his clients were not prepared to resign from the present trusteeship to make way for the new one until they were assured a more definite and detailed idea of how the obligations and their fulfillment was to be fulfilled under the new voting trust agreement.

Another ruling by Judge Coleman was that there should not be any disposition of Fox properties, except in the ordinary course of business, between now and Feb. 11 when the next hearing will be held.

According to a re-wording of the new financing plan, which was submitted in rough form Monday, the resignations of officers and directors of the Fox companies do not include William Fox, Jack G. Leo, or Wheelfeld Schehan. These three would serve with E. R. Tinker, Louis Abrons, Elmore S. Higgins and Bernhard Baruch, as the board of directors under the new voting trusteeship, which is to consist of President Edward C. Delahfield of the Bank of America, Herbert P. Howell of the Commercial National Bank, and Bernard Baruch.

No Immediate Amendment Likely for Brit. Films Act
By ERMEST W. FREDIN
Editor, "The Daily Film Renter"
London (by Cable)—Presidents of the Board of Trade stated here yesterday that there would be no immediate amendments to the Films Act likely to be introduced in the near future.

John Maxwell, chairman of British International Pictures, has been selected to fill the vacancy on the producers' side of the Advisory Committee. He also proposed that the Films Act Advisory Committee should be given power to refuse a certificate to a picture in which its judgment is not a bona-fide attempt to produce a picture for marketing but merely a device to defeat the purpose of the Quota Act. This proposal, if, as is claimed, would keep control of the workings of the Films Act within the industry itself and would provide a means of close and direct control with public requirements.

By JACK ALICOATE—

THE OTHER evening we made a social call on the recently imported German talker, "Because I Loved You," now playing at a New York theater, and were rather agreeably surprised. For a first effort from any man's country it is a splendid piece of craftsmanship. It is well recorded, acceptably photographed and the cast gave an honest, restrained performance. Best of all, most excellent judgment was used in the cutting. Our knowledge of German is confined to "how much," "thank you" and "large glass of beer, please" and yet, we were able to follow the story closely from start to finish. As a flyer this German-made production can be recommended to almost anybody, high up to the top players, located in German communities. In Milwaukee, Cincinnati, some parts of Pennsylvania and other spots it should prove a welcome innovation. The musical score is tuneful and most agreeable. However, we suspected one thing and were not surprised. Those clever Germans must have been opening mail from Hollywood for they have not only chosen the highly original back stage theme around which to build their production but have added the little pal angle as well.

Pictures—Press—Public

THE UNIVERSAL talking newspaper, with Universal doubling as the newspaper and Graham McNamee doing the talking, is a highly creditable piece of work. We have given it rather careful inspection and find it interesting, amusing and instructive. The newsreel has long since proved its usefulness to the showman and is definitely here to stay. It is really the liaison officer between pictures, press and public. Any innovation then, in newsreel showmanship or presentation, is a progressive

"If a receivership is avoided which now seems more than likely," Untermyer said, "it will be due in large part to the tact, patience, earnestness and intelligence of Judge Coleman."

Untermyer also reassured stockholders that "any financing plan will, of course, provide for payment of all debts in full."

German Studios Making Big Strides, Actor Says

Germany has passed the experimental stage in the making of talkers, and studios in that country are now making big strides toward a prominent place in the world market, in the opinion of John Batten, American and English actor, who returned this country yesterday after some work abroad.

Batten appeared over here in the silent version of "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," another "Battle of the Sexes," "Back Stage" and other pictures. He was brought over to England by British International Pictures for "Under the Greenwood Tree," directed by an American, Harry Lachman, after which he played the male lead in the English dialogue version of Ufa's "The Love Waltz" produced by Eric Pommer and directed by Wilhelm Thiele, with Carl Winston, another American, assisting in the supervision. What has happened to all the fillum fans who, only a year ago, professed to be unalterably devoted to the silents? They are now writing long letters to picture editors gushing forth enthusiasm over the talkers.

She was beautiful, but dumb. But more beautiful than dumb, so the smitten lad did his best to make a hit with her by telling funny stories.

"Here's another good one" he began once more courageously after six of his best brand had fallen flat. "A theater manager, who used to have lots of trouble with newspapers over publicity for his shows, died suddenly one night. His partner telephoned the news to the newspapers, but next day he couldn't find any mention of the death in the leading paper, so he called up the editor to ask why. The editor insisted that the story was run.

"In what part of the paper is it then?" the partner asked.

"On the Amusement page!" the ed. roared.

And the boy friend roared too as he finished. But the blonde beauty did not.

"Don't you get it?" the lad asked.

"They classed the man's death under the head of amusements."

"Oh, yes," replied the looks, suddenly brightening up. "I know now. The paper probably didn't have a regular obituary column."

“Son of the Gods”

High-caliber talking picture entertainment, the kind that ought to catch with almost any type of audience, describes “Son of the Gods,” which had its premiere last evening at the Warner Bros. It’s worthwhile stuff—and minus a backstage sequence. From the standpoint of Richard Barthelmess fans, the picture is surefire. They’ll see him in a role somewhat reminiscent of “Broken Blossoms.” Constance Bennett’s performance is splendid. The story constantly grasps your interest and sympathy and there’s a captivating set of color in it. A class produc tion is this “Son of the Gods.”

Talkers Call for Greater Concentration from Audience

SOUND immediately introduced a complication which is largely psychological. If much of the story is told by the spoken dialogue it becomes practically imperative to maintain silence and to pay strict attention to every word. This demands concentration to a degree which is often not relished by an audience which demands a method of recreation which permits more relaxation. It will readily be granted that the motion picture audience, taken by and large, is definitely different from the one which attends the legitimate stage or even the musical comedy. These people go with the distinct knowledge that they will have to pay attention to every detail and will even have to strain a bit to get it all.

More Safety in Theaters Than in Other Buildings

No opportunity should be lost to impress upon the public the unassailable truth of the fact that the average theater today is among the safest of all buildings. Statistics would show that risk of death or injury is far less in a cinema than in a private house and immeasurably less than in the streets. Unfortunately, on the rare occasions when cinema disasters have occurred, the number of the victims (even though they represented only a small percentage of the audience) has often been great enough to secure widespread publicity. Such publicity is apt to create an altogether disproportionate idea of danger. Actually, as we know, the public is more secure at the pictures than at almost any other form of recreation.

AND THAT'S THAT
By PHIL M. DALY

It used to be that 87 per cent of the population had a drummer tucked away in the old trunk. Now they show away what are supposed to be scenarios. If all the aspiring scenario writers were put out to pasture, they—well, let's leave them end to end and get to the point.

One of them called on Paul Gulick for advice on how to fit himself for the calling. And Paul, in his genial way, said to him:

"First finish your school work and four years of college. Then take a few postgraduate courses over another period of four or five years. After that, familiarize yourself with every variety of subjects and phases of life. Spend about two years studying sociology, four years of history, two years of philosophy, two years of psychology, five or six years of foreign languages and customs, six or seven years of sciences and five years of theatrical history and technique.

"The next step will be to put in about ten years as a newspaper man, so you can get close to the dramatics of real life. Next get a job on a college stage for Europe or Australia and continue from port to port until you've circled the globe several times. This ought to take you another ten years.

"Then you can hit for Hollywood, try to get in some studio as a hired boy, and work your way up. That's my advice to all boys who want to become scenario writers."

The lad wiped the beads from his brow.

"But, gee," he gasped, "by the time a fellow gets through with all that he'd be about 90 and ready to die."

"Well," replied the unperturbed Paul, "what do you suppose I had in mind?"

Patrons Best Qualified
As Censors of Pictures

THE only persons qualified to endorse or condemn motion pictures are those who pay their money to see pictures because they are seeking entertainment. And that goes for critics, too. Present critics are not interested. I do not set myself up as authorized or qualified to endorse or condemn a picture in behalf of the public. I am a reporter, and my reviews of motion pictures are no more than reportorial accounts of what the films have to offer; those who are seeking a particular kind of entertainment. But these people who are in the business of endorsing photoplays do not confine themselves to any such limits. Arbitrarily, they endorse certain film products as fit to be seen by the moviegoers of the nation and, by omitting the listing of other films, automatically catalog them as unfit. And their ideas of what films are worthy of public patronage are as ridiculous as the organizations themselves and the people who are guided by their advice.

Pierre de Rohan in "Morning Telegraph"

THINKS Child Should See Only Films Recommended by an Adult

I THINK that it is a very serious mistake for parents to allow their young children to go to the average moving picture show today, or to see any picture which they themselves, or reliable people whom they can trust, have not seen beforehand. Forty or fifty per cent of the "feature" pictures today have some intentionally indecent scenes in them, and far too often in pictures of decent titles are inserted scenes of most objectionable character.

Short Shots from New York Studios

BY HARRY N. BLAIR

WHILE many girls spend weary months trying to break into pictures, Anna May Ransom, a little Texas dancer, succeeded in landing a part in a Pathe short, three hours after arriving in New York. Anna's chum, Jean Walters, who was cast for the picture prior to going on tour with an RKO dance unit.

Paramount seems bent on building up an organization comprised of stage talent exclusively. Close on the heels of Claudette Colbert's formal desertion from the legitimate, comes an announcement that Frank Morgan, who has appeared in many stage successes, has just been signed for a principal role in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," following which he will appear in "Queen High!"

Oliver Shea, who just completed the featured lead in "The Campus Vamp," following her work in "Glorying the American Girl," will take a flying trip to Hanover, N. H., to attend the Dartmouth Winter Carnival.

James Hall has arrived here to play a role in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," at the Paramount Long Island studio, production which is scheduled to start this week.

"Rill" Steiner, whose camera work has been a decided asset to many Paramount pictures, has recovered from an attack of sinus trouble, which kept him away from the studio for several days.

Mrs. "Billy" Bitzer, wife of the camera wizard, has discovered a girl whom she believes is star material and whom she intends to take back with her to Hollywood. The girl's name is Claire Douglas, and she is a blonde beauty who was formerly in the Ziegfeld "Follies."

Robert Fresnell, of Paramount, writing staff, has collaborated with Achmed Abdullah on a play, "Empress," in which Florence Reed will star, under the management of Horace Liveright.

Murray Roth, genial director-lauchief, has a fanfare for prize fights. He is a familiar figure at all the big Garden events. Incidentally, Murray Roth is turning 'em out bigger, better and faster than ever at the Eastern Vitaphone studios.

First Color Slapstick

Louis Brock is about to produce the first slapstick comedy to be made in color. Production will be started within the next two weeks, using the Brewster color system. A new talent of comedians will be featured in the action which is built around life in a side-show.

The boy wonder of Flatbush, Waite Hoyt, who spends his summers pitching ball at the Yankee Stadium, appeared in a Vitaphone Variety, "The Royal Fourflusher," after completing the Flatbush studio, at the same time affording the studio staff an opportunity to pass on their other experiences.

With many of Broadway legitimate players traveling over to the Flatbush studios to appear in Vitaphone Varieties, Arthur Hurley, director, is renewing acquaintances with people he has directed for the speaking stage. Among the score or more who recently appeared in several sketches which Hurley directed are Mary Phillips, Humphrey Bogart, Jesse Busley, Leni Stengel, Wallace Ford, Thurston Hall and Malcolm Dunn.

"Eddie Buzzell brought his two Chihuahuas down to the Flatbush studios last week to appear in the pet shop scene in "Keeping Company," but the dogs refused to appear at the cameraman's call of mongrels, bulldogs and terriers which had been engaged for the production.

Hugh O'Connell, who closed the show, "The Sap from Syracuse," the other night, recently appeared in the Eastern Vitaphone studio in an other Vitaphone Variety entitled "Find the Woman."

Fingerlin Back to Work

John Fingerlin, executive studio manager of Paramount's Long Island plant, returned from a business trip to Cuba, yesterday (Saturday).

TALKING SCREEN TERMED ULTIMATE IN EXPRESSION

"The screen of the future offers greater possibilities than painting, sculpture, the stage, or any other form of visual and audible art, as a medium of expression," according to Frank Cambria, director of the Paramount Long Island studios.

"Because it really is a composite of all the arts and many of the sciences, the motion picture offers a medium of almost limitless artistic expression," Cambria adds. "Using human beings instead of paint or clay, we can create things of genuine beauty and artistic merit. Color is here for us and will be improved to the point where a director can achieve variations of shade such as the painter might mix on his palette. Sound also offers marvelous possibilities for artistic expression."

Cambria is well qualified to judge, having succeeded as a painter, sculptor and stage director before turning to motion picture directing. He is best known for his success in staging Publicity presentation acts.

Old Favorites Make Best
Talkies Says Al Lewis

The "tight" situation existing in the story market at present will result in many old favorites of the silent days being revived as talkies, according to Al Lewis, New York representative of the Lewis music studios. Original titles will not be retained, however, except in unusual cases, such as "A Connecticut Yankee," which story has such a firm hold on the affections of people that a repetition will be welcomed. The great majority of these old favorites will bear new titles and will have the advantage of improved production methods so that they should prove more popular than ever before. Lewis concluded with the statement that "by following this policy producers are taking much less chance than with a new story since the success of the silent version is proof that the story contains the elements of popular appeal, something which is almost impossible to determine in advance."

David Mendoza Honored

David Mendoza, of Paramount's musical staff, was among those mentioned in the list of "twen" leading American composers," selected by the vote of the National Federation of Music Clubs. Among the vocalists chosen were: John McCormack and Lawrence Tibbett.

M-G-M
Time, 1 hr., 45 mins.

LAWRENCE TIBBETT with CATHERINE DALE OWEN in THIS ALL-COLOR OPERETTA. APART FROM HIM IT'S MODERATELY GOOD ENTERTAINMENT.

Made 100 per cent of the film, for a start, and generally excellent color, this talker is the most entertaining when the Metropolitan Opera star is singing. His voice is splendid. The picture is based on an old operetta, "Gypsies," and is typically operetta in character, containing little that is new and being loosely tied up. It tells the story of a young king in Russia who falls in love with a princess. Her brother wrongs his sister and he kills him in passion, and love abducts in success. The girl escapes, brings about the bandit's arrest, has him hanged and then realises she's in love with a man. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are brought into the narrative for comedy relief.

Cast: Lawrence Tibbett; Director, Maurice Tourneur; Authors, Grau, Marcon and John Cowan; the pictures are "if you only knew," [sic] by Franz Lehár, Dr. A. M. Willer, Robert Ross; Editor, Herbert Cameron; Director, Louis Royer; Photographers, Percy Hilburn, Monitor Matt, Not Listed.

"Painted Faces" with Joe E. Brown (All-Talker)

Tiffany
Time, 1 hr., 11 mins.

SATISFACTORY PROGRAM PRODUCED DIRECTLY FROM PHOTOGRAPHS PROVIDED BY SOME CIRCUS ATMOSPHERE AND COURT ROOM PROCEEDINGS.

Joe E. Brown, in a foreign dialect role opposite Lili Damita, starts off this center of attraction in this drama of show life. At the start of the picture, a member of a vaudeville team is supposed to have shot and killed another performer who was trying to entice the former's girl away from him. In the court trial, all but one member of the jury vote for conviction. The holdout is a slow-witted circus clown (Brown). He refuses to change his stand despite persuasion and threats. Finally he attempts to swing the others around by telling a circus story, shown in a flashback, but the jury refuses to give in till the clown plays his trump and says he is the one who killed the actor to avenge a wronged girl. Holdists interest pretends he knows a clue to the crimes of a murderer and announces an announcement that Frank Morgan, who has appeared in many stage successes, is to be cast for a principal role in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," following which he will appear in "Queen High."

"The Kaiser in Peace and War" (Silent)

Rex
Time, 41 mins.

AN ASSEMBLAGE OF NEWS-REEL SHOTS, MODERATELY ENGROSSING, WITH ENTERTAINMENT AND INTERESTING FROM A HISTORICAL POINT.

Since it has been demonstrated that there is a paying audience for the newsworld theater, it is reasonable to expect that this pieced-together narrative will attract some patronage. The record covers the period from just before the war, when the German militarist was in his glory, to his present status as a has-been. Leopold Hohenzollern exiled to Doorn. Considered the most historical aspects and with due allowances for the unavoidable shortcomings of a feature compiled from newsreel shots, the picture has a good deal of educational value besides being fairly engaging as entertainment. The Kaiser is shown at many state celebrations and civil functions, reviewing troops, lumbering, ships, visiting near the front lines during the war, presenting iron men, and more for a little job at a railroad station. One day he was similarities, the face of his former wife in a railroad train, this brings home to the audience that he is going to Petrograd, his former home. Then the film shows the effect on him of the changed conditions in Russia, the changes in the world, the changes coming to the new Soviet order of things. It is a fine product on both depth, beauty, realism and color. Has some scenes that are not very good, but as a whole is almost as good as "Potemkin."

Time, 1 hr., 16 mins.

ONE OF THE BEST OF THE RUSSIAN FILMS, TELLS A DRAMATIC AND POIGNANT STORY OF SOCIAL BEAUTY AND FINE DIRECTION, REAL ENTERTAINMENT.

Drama of Russia. This picture is marked by some excellent directorial work, acting is very good, and camera work that in spots is outstanding. They have gotten away from the propaganda a lot in this one, so that the story becomes absorbing and refreshing. A Russian sergeant in the Great War is shell shocked, loses his memory, and goes home to his sweetheart who is doing a little job at a railroad station. One day he discovers the face of his former wife in a railroad train, and this brings home to the audience that he is returning to Petrograd, his former home. Then the film shows the effect on him of the changed conditions in Russia, the changes in the world, the changes coming to the new Soviet order of things. It is a fine product on both depth, beauty, realism and color. Has some scenes that are not very good, but as a whole is almost as good as "Potemkin."

"Demon of the Steppes" (Silent)

Ambikino
Time, 1 hr., 9 mins.

AN UNEARTHLY CONCOCION ABOUT A FEROCIOUS RUSSIAN WOMAN. GENERALLY INCREADIBLE, BUT HANDLED IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

Even the arty cinemists are not likely to fare well with this Soviet Russian game. Here is a demon that struts about like a land pirate, killing some persons and inviting to arouse sympathy with all, without much rhyme or reason, and certainly without any sympathy from the audience viewpoint. The heroine finally meets her Waterloo in the person of an equally plausible two-fisted adventurer of the male sex, whom she is unable to Constance Bennett, and upon leg in front of a firing squad. Besides the disagreeable taste created by the killings, whimpering and other overlanded tomfoolery, the action is carried in heavy style, the production is badly handled from almost every angle, including continuuity, photography and staging. Many of the revulsion scenes appear to have been patched in. Only very special audiences are likely to find it palatable.

FAIR PROGRAM RACE TRACK
STORY ADDS IMPACT TO THE STAGE COMEDY WITH EDDIE BUZZELL TAKING THE NAME PART.

This melodrama of the turf has some amusing lines reminiscent of Geo. M. Cohan. The picture is drawn out considerably. Eddie Buzzell is generally okay in his first feature. The story centers about a jockey who falls for a Broadway show girl, the romance winding up when the girl asks Buzzell to throw the race, which he refuses to do. He is suspended when a telegram from Edna Murphy is intercepted. In England he plays a jockey for a while, and then returns to the States to take a part in a race. When the jockey gets too close to the horse, it is found that the horse is actually a time-worn a derived

GOOD DRAMA OF STAGE LIFE, MADE SPECIAL AND EMOTIONAL BY THE FINE PERFORMANCE OF NORMA TALMADGE.

Although this edge has been taken off the stage story, this one is set for a welcome on two counts in particular. The first is because of the appealing personality of Miss Talmadge, and the second is because the picture is a neat little piece of entertainment irrespective of how much soap opera drams have been produced. This one is taken from the stage play, “Tin Pan Alley,” and it concerns an irresponsible song writer, who is so faithful to him that even a racketeer coming twenty grand a day is unable to make an impression on her, though he is offering to give her a chance. A shot by the oleomper bar bers to frames. There is the usual split of the team, because of the man’s drunks and their reunion for better or worse, and excellent support acting by John Wayne and Gilbert Roland, the latter played our plot is made to click in a last. It traces a gambler’s road to doom with a sureness and vivid power making for entertainment of gripping quality. The film mounts to a climax in which “Natural” does meets his end in a manner strongly suggestive of Arnold Rothstein’s passing. Powell gives a suave, full-blooded portrayal as the gambler. Carrying on his gambling activities under the guise of a broker, “Nat ural” is killed after he resorts to cheating in a card game in an effort to “break” a younger brother with the hope of curing him of the gambling habit.

BOX OFFICE MATERIAL, THOUGH NOT SO GOOD AS FORTUNE TELLER MYSTERIES, HAS THE POPULAR INGREDIENTS TO SATISFY.

It weren’t for the fact that it follows too closely the formula already done to death in murder mystery productions, this would be a small and acceptable one. While not produced in class style, directed with a keen eye for effective details and acted in an unusually polished manner by most of the principal characters. What brings it down a few notches from some of the other mystery dramas by the same author is the inclusion of the horrid looking hunchback and another repugnant individual, very obviously planted for the usual purpose of attracting sus pension. Then there is the customary dumbbell dick, for comedy, and many of the familiar tricks from the old bar. The identity of the murderer, however, is handled with more than ordinary skill.

Theater Equipment

Articulation Test for Sound Houses Outlined by Engineer

S. K. Wolf, theater acoustician of Electrical Research Products, Inc. and author of the following, is of the opinion that the efficiency of a transmission system is in the percentage of disconnected, meaningless syllables that can be understood through it. This is called an articulation test. In the following article, S. K. Wolf outlines various factors which influence the intelligibility of speech.

There is a great deal more to this matter of sound than simply making a program understood. Public psychology demands that it be "easy to listen to." We can discuss this subject in terms readily understood by everybody, namely, percentages. A theater can be rated in the percentage of intelligibility of speech, which is the index of "how easy to listen to" the patrons find sound in that theater.

An articulation test of normal speech direct from speaker to listener under perfect conditions gives 86 per cent. If there is any doubt in your mind that speech cannot be transmitted 100 per cent under ideal conditions, try this simple test. Ask your listener to close his eyes so that he may not read your lips. Then you say the following words one each—may, may, may, may, and ask him to write them down as you say them. Providing you do not unduly emphasize the final consonant of these words, you will find that your listener has not been understood. This gives you an idea of the difficulties encountered in speech transmission.

The improvement with which sound equipment is operated is an appreciable factor in the intelligibility of the resulting sound. There is a fairly broad range of volume about equivalent to the volume used in average conversational, for which there is no depreciation in intelligibility. However, as tests have shown if the loudness is somewhat greater or somewhat less than the conversational loudness, there is a reduction of articulation of one to five per cent.

Another factor influencing the intelligibility of speech is the amount of extraneous noise present. Audience noise is of two kinds. These include whispering, coughing, laughing, rattling of programs, etc., and those subjectively controllable by the exhibitor. The other, scuffling of feet, etc., is eliminated with the use of carpet. Further noise is often introduced into a theater by and through the heating and ventilating systems, and these will be reduced in realistic proportions under through this channel. This, too, is controllable. Tests have shown that if the aggregate noise is 20 per cent the sound articulation will be reduced 10 per cent.

Excessive reverberation is still another factor tending toward decreasing the articulation in the theater. If, in any given theater, the reverberation noise averaged by two or three minutes, it is found that the room is more or less potently noticeable when the audience is present. There are two more factors to be considered before we can sound out our estimate of the probable articulation of the theater and that of the percentage reduction necessary on account of the recording and on account of the reproducing system. Since the articulation rating for speech under the best conditions from the original sound source is only 96 per cent, let us assume that a certain value a reduction of 20 per cent can be experimentally determined in articulation. It is more than readily seen that this condition is often encountered in houses not properly acoustically designed when the audience present is small.

To sum up these reduction factors and to the idea of how a theater would under the conditions that I have outlined above, we get the following:

Percentage articulation of original speech under perfect conditions ... 96

Percentage reduction due to imperfect loudness reception ... 5

Percentage reduction due to extraneous noise in theater ... 10

Percentage reduction due to reverberation ... 5

Percentage reduction due to recording ... 5

Percentage reduction due to reproducing ... 5

PROBLEMS OF LIGHTING SOLVED BY N. Y. EXHIBIT

In an effort to help solve lighting problems, however complex, the Lighting Institute has been set up at the Grand Central Palace, New York, as a permanent exhibition. Its exhibits, occupying an entire floor, apply to every type of lighting. Among the most interesting of its exhibits is one showing how an auditorium should be lighted for maximum efficiency without sacrifice of artistic effect.

Moulded Thermoplastic Base Socket Made by Major Co.

Chicago—Major Equipment Co., of this city, is marketing a new development designed for those interested in the maintenance of screens. The development is the 54-B medium base socket with an unbreakable moulded thermoplastic body, claimed to be non-absorptive. Among the features of the socket are theearing structure to the center contact by phosphor bronze, its heavy upset screws at the terminals, extra screws holding the yoke, and the solid machine butt en head for the center contact, which, it is claimed, will not burn or corrode away.

BUFFALO ENGINEERING CO.
DEVELOPS COOLING UNIT

Dallas—After considerable research and experimentation, Silex, air distributing unit, has been developed by the Buffalo Engineering Co. and now is mechanically fit for use in sound theaters for cooling purposes, according to George W. Thornton, general manager of the company who recently returned here from a trip to the company's factory in Buffalo, N. Y.

The new unit can be used separately as a ventilating equipment or in conjunction with Carrier Air Washer equipment, it is claimed. The company, in addition to Silex, has developed other lines of cooling equipment built to meet the requirements of smaller houses which cannot afford the washed air equipment.

Invisible Lubricant, Replacing Wax, is Used in Stewart Process

A new process of treating and lubricating films so that wax is supplanted by an invisible lubricant which entirely covers the film and cannot be affected by heat, has been developed by the Stewart Film Process Co. The process renders the emulsion impervious to the action of moisture and oil, it is claimed, and also toughens it to the extent that instead of leaving particles on the aperture, it polishes the gate and allows unrestricted passage of the film through the machine. In addition to its lubricating treatment, the process, according to the company, insures the film a longer life and clearer projection.

The application of an oil on the film is not desirable, so by taking a heavy oil combined with certain volatile diluents permits the entire film to be coated with this mixture. The volatile diluents evaporate, leaving an undetermined amount of oil over the whole film, including the insides of the sprocket holes. Wax on the sprocket holes had been previously used to accomplish this end, but it has been found that the heat melts the wax and such melted wax interferes with sound tracks causing distorted sound.

Withstands Water

In the laboratory of the Stewart Film Process Co., of New York, a large quantity of film treated by the company was soaked in water for a considerable period and then brought out and dried and proved to be ready for projection, according to the company. This process also prevents the ruination of prints shipped to foreign countries where the humid conditions affect films.

ARTICATION TEST FOR SOUND HOUSES OUTLINED

another that has an appreciable place in show psychology, illusion. The sound must appear to come from the picture and yet the listener must be allowed to feel that he is in the same room with the speaker. With present day recording the areas around and immediately in back of the horns should be sound reflecting, which allows the "room tone" of the recording to become associated with the "room tone" in front of the theater so that the listener unconsciously feels that he is in the same room with the speaker.

With so many factors bearing upon the net result, each presenting its reduction factor however small, it behooves the exhibitor who wishes to preserve and increase his success, to see that all reduction factors with in his control are kept to the absolute minimum.

The best possible equipment obtainable, properly operated in a theater that acoustically correct and free from extraneous noise, is the only possible answer to "easy listening" and increasing receipts.

PARAMOUR STAGE SHOW FEATURES DENNIS KING

Dennis King, whose screen version of "The Vagabond King" will open soon for a run at the Criterion, is featured in the current bill at the Paramount. Judging by the audience response to his singing, as well as to his engaging personality which formerly graced the musical comedy stage, King will create a batch of new customers for his forthcoming picture. Another strong attraction on this week's Paramount stage program is the U. S. Indian Reservaton Band, headed and directed by Chief Shantona, talented musician and dramatic elocutionist, in a varied and highly entertaining routine of music, recitation and general whoppo. Joy May and Dotty Oaks, Geraldine, Buddy Carrell and the Serova Beauties also contribute generously to the nicely devised show. Jack Partington produced the unit which carries the title of "Red Rhythm."

ZELAYA, SPANISH PIANIST, TAKES CAPITOL HONORS

In a semi-kidding demonstration in which he compared the genuinely good music of years ago to the short-lived jazz of later years, the popular Spanish pianist, Zelaya, is just about laying them in the aisles at the Capitol this week. He has musical ears at his finger tips and pointed humor on the tip of his tongue. This, plus his good-natured eccentric style, makes him sure-fire. The current Capitol production, staged by Arthur Knorr, is labeled "Venetian Carni-cal," but the title is largely a misnomer because about the only Venetian thing in the proceedings is the rich setting and a few bars of Italian music. Among the other performers are a blackface hooing quartette, some travesty by a male ballet dancer and his partner, acrobatic stunts by the Mangeans, some nitty dancing and all-around work by Ted Claire, the guest master of ceremonies, a Franco-Film and dance offering by Kathryn Lewis, Nina Oginska, Jack Hanlon and Tom Pullmer, with the Chester Hale Girls and the Capitolians providing a strong background as usual. Yasha Bun- chuk directs the "Marche Slave" overture with effect.

DELIGHTFUL DIVERSITY IN ROXY STAGE PROGRAM

Going back to a diversified routine this week, the Roxy presents a stage show of unusual delightfulness. Among the highlights is "The Shooting Gallery," a most amusing travesty on Coney Island types, with Patricia Bowman and Leonard Maxine heading the Roxy contingent in this number. Also of unique caliber is "Mistfits," wherein M. Vodnoy and M. Holajin introduce an ensemble dress-suited duos doing drunk bits around oldtime lamp posts. In the "Bubble Dance," a cleverly conceived specialty, Miss Bowman and the Ballet Corps do some fanciful cavorting to the rhythm of big balloons, while Frances Cece and Miriam Fields throw in a song number from a suspended ladder. "The Lost Chord," sung by Harold Van Duzee and the Roxy Chorus, is built up with background into a stirring number. Many interesting twists in lighting effects are employed and plenty of striking costumes are displayed. Joseph Lithau's direction of the orchestral overture, consisting of Gounod excerpts, arranged by Maurice Baron, is particularly pleasing.

French Film Merger is Officially Confirmed

Paris—Official confirmation of the merger of the Albert-Franco-Film and Gaumont has been made, according to "Cinetographie Francaise." The new company includes the former Albert-Franco-Film Gaumont Companies, the Radio Cinemas, Studio des Reservoirs, G. M. Film, Societe Generale de Films and Societe des Romans Historiques. The union of these interests disposes of all means to construct sound devices and plants for the printing of films as well as to manage a chain of theaters in France and in Belgium and distributing exchanges abroad.

Unemployed Musicians Increase in Glasgow

Glasgow—Over two hundred theater musicians have been thrown out of work with the invasion here of talking pictures. It is expected that this number will increase inasmuch as additional theaters are being wired rapidly. The position is even worse in Edinburgh, it is stated, and prospects are very dull owing to the extension of talkers into the country districts.

Mrs. Winter called upon local women to work in a friendly way with exhibitors and with the Film Board of Trade.
A committee has been formed, with Mrs. Henry S. Godfrey as chairman, to give publicity to selected pictures from first-hand information obtained after previews in Hollywood.
It is also planned to hold "attendance parties," and week-end "family nights," on which entire families will attend particularly good pictures.

Columbia Issues Folder
on Sound Reproduction
With a view to aiding exhibitors in obtaining maximum efficiency in sound reproduction, Columbia has is-ued a folder on the proper use of the disc needle. The leaflet, which is being distributed gratis to the industry as a whole, warns against the use of "bootleg" needles. A series of diagrams shows some of the causes of sound trouble arising from this source.

Big Year is Seen Ahead
For British Film Industry

THE prospects for British film production were never brighter, especially in view of the habit of producers, directors, critics and the dear public nightly to petition the great god Cinema for new faces. The discovery of a single player with screen possibilities was something to write home about in those days. But today, ah today, how different. The advent of the dialog film worked a complete transformation. Where one “find” was wont to bud into a producer garden, we now have them in profusion. The trickle of new faces has become a deluge, nothing less, overwhelming the publicity and advertising departments. No longer is the “find” sold in advance to fandom; that major task is left to the exhibitor. As if he did not have enough to worry about!

Chester B. Bahn in the "Syracuse (N.Y.) Herald"

with Phil M. Daly, Jr.

THE boys, Clayton, Jackson and Durante are holding a real birthday party at Proctor’s 66th St., where they opened Saturday, which will feature a hittherto unknown foodstuff called “Schnozzlecake.” The lads are celebrating their seventh anniversary with seven weeks of KKO vaudeville…….. Helen Kane is arranging the entertainment program for the show to be staged Feb. 13 by the Holy Cross R. C. Church of Clason Point, N. Y.

Did you know that Charlie Chaplin is a swell tennis player, Doug Fairbanks an accomplished juggler and Lupe Velez can mimic anybody and do it well, we said, but thought it would strike you funny…….. Hy Daub, in a letter to Harry Takiff at the home office, mentioned that Hollywood has changed so since he was last there that he hardly recognized the town. Wonder if Hy wore smoked glasses?…….

Alan Forest, who has been gracing many screens for a long time, now is quartered at the Algonquin…….. Capt. Charles Erard is official lecturer of “The World Tours of the Prince of Wales,” now doing his stuff at the 55th St, N. Y.

Harry Atikian, who is handling that undying “Birth of a Nation,” is planning to rejuvenate it with synchronized score and dub in dialogue as well, providing he can buy the dialogue rights from Thomas Dixon, who wrote “The Clansman,” on which the film is based…….. Elisha Cook, Jr, who plays a part in “Her Unborn Child,” being roadshowed by Windsor Picture Plays, is now appearing in “Many a Slip,” newcomer among the Broadway legty attractions and housed in the Little Theater.

“Now,” Fox West Coast Theaters house organ, cheers over the exploitation stuff Bert Adler pulled in Brooklyn recently in “ballyhooing Rube Wolf, master-of-ceremonies, at the Fox. Says ‘Now’: Four thousand one sheets on all Brooklyn Journal wagons and newstands. A tie-up with the Brooklyn Automobile Show. Prizes ranging from two tons down to a radio. A motion picture of Wolf breaking all traffic laws. Bert Adler surely has given everyone something to shoot at”…….

Perry Bros., who operate Perry’s Egyptian at Ogden, Utah, postcarded in to the effect that the Trader decree is “God sent news for the independent exhibitor.” Their theater, by the way, “represents an Egyptian auditorium or temple court with a dome ceiling decorated to represent a desert sky”…….

Terry Ramsaye states that Pathomechthe subjects with sound will be released by Pathe beginning with Issue No. 6 of the Audio Review, available today…….

Activities of all prominent organizations and clubs in the industry are covered in one of the many sections of the 1930 FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK. Out soon!

—a column of comment

M. P. T. O. Of Mississippi, Tennessee and Arkansas have chosen Vigilante Committees composed of wide-awake and legal-wise exhibitors, to keep in direct touch with the pulse of the coming legislative sessions of these respective states. that the health and spirit of the contract is observed.

More Operatic Features on M-G-M Production List
Reiley recommended that the company be reorganized.

The statement was issued as a result of Monday’s Roxy stockholders’ meeting when Rothafel and Saut E. Koger, the latter president of the theatrical company, were questioned by Class A stockholders concerning the relationship between the two companies.

Granger called attention to the fact that during 1929 Roxy played three more Fox pictures than the 32 devotedly required in the contract.

He said:

"Theoretically Mr. Rothafel could book any picture in pictures during the year and not contract for with Fox Film Corp. However, so far as connection it seems to be pointed out that all films in process or talking pictures have the same Broadway outlets which were the pictures produced in the last year.

"This leaves an actual advantage of American-produced pictures other than Fox in exhibition at the Roxy. Mr. Rothafel and his stockholders have every advantage and no choice of Fox pictures which during the year have been selected and prepared for success.
Both for total paid admissions and total amount of money paid in the box office.

Computation is made that the average busidess done by the four non-Fox pictures played by the Roxy was $85,673. This contacts "with an average for 48 weeks for Fox pictures, amounting to $108,685," said Granger.

films, at a declared value of $7,713,120 were exported as against 222,122,586 feet at a declared value of $56,473,990 during 1928.

The advent of sound picture almost certainly means a further increase in the ability to produce sound pictures, how forced of producing silent ones, gave to the American producer an open field.

It is stated that the increased number of silent pictures are other factors that have helped to make American export the largest.

The Mirror
—a column of comment

THAT INDEPENDENT producers in the United States and Canada increased during 1929 is one of the interesting surprises of the year. Despite increased negative costs it looks like the small fellow, comparatively speaking, has weathered the sound tempest. This in the face of rumors of his collective demise. Good product, whether of domestic or foreign origin, always has and always will find a spot in the American distribution and exhibition fields. Customers are principally interested in entertainment and not who makes it.

LOEW THEATERS throughout the country are discontinuing the sale of sheet music in their lobbies. A wise move, it seems, his eliminating of the music stand which in many instances has impaired the beauty and attractiveness of numerous de luxe houses. The hawking of pop corn and music may be within bounds of etiquette in small theaters but its out of place in the modern up-the-minute Picture Palace.

SCREEN and stage folk will help to brighten the Eleventh Aviators' Ball to be given Tuesday evening at the Ritz-Carlton under the direction of Reginald Barlow, actor and commanding officer of the 349th Infantry, A.E.F. The Blair Niles novel, "Condemned to Devil's Island," from which the Ronald Colman film was made, is now to be dramatized for the stage under the tentative title of "If God Made the World."*

George K. Arthur, after eight weeks in vaudeville, which incidentally gave him a chance to develop his voice, will trek back to Hollywood in a few days to appear again with his comedy sidekick, Karl Dane, in M-G-M talkers. Joe Leo, president of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, has arrived in Milwaukee in connection with the company's expansion program. During his stay in this territory Leo will attend the opening of the new Fox house in Green Bay. Wis.

Eighteen former members of the Cosmopolitan Productions in New York, now are members of the Radio staff on the Coast. Heading this line-up is William Le Baron, vice president in charge of production. Others are Henry Hobart, William Sistrum, Luther Reed, Fred Fleck, Harry Wilde, William Hamilton, and Georgette Deom. "The Phantom of the Opera," the talking version, invades the Colony, N. Y., tomorrow.

Mack Sennett, in addition to his producing abilities, recently turned music writer and batted out the music for "The Same Old Thing Called Love," which will be used in conjunction with Educational's "Sugar Plum Papa." John A. Waldron is accredited with the words for the music. Joe Cook is en route to the Columbia studios where he will make a talking version of stage production, "Rain or Shine."*

Fun News informs us that no less than 41,791 patrons paid to see "Street of Chance" at the Rialto during its first week-end, or to be exact from Friday at 6 P. M. when the flicker started to 5 A. M. Sunday. Jean A. Leroy, who is said to have been one of our film pioneers way back in 1894, was the guest of RKO at the Earl Carroll last evening. Wonder what his thoughts were after the show? Will Rogers arrives from Europe today when the Ile de France docks.

Richard Barthelmess who, with his wife, has been enjoying a European vacation will sail for New York on the Bremen, February 13th.

AND THAT'S THAT

This is the sad tale of how Bruce Gallup lost to David Loew in the big pin-pong contest at the M. P. Club on Tuesday. It was the last set of the deciding game and Bruce was sitting pretty to win. Arthur was sending the celluloid pill across with lightning speed—and at the same time calmly smoking a cigar. Bruce, stripped to the waist, was meeting the onslaught, and making returns like an indoor Tilden. The table was so hot from the rat-tat-tat pin-pong-bang, that you could have cooked flapjacks on it.

Just then Lee Ochs, participating in a calm game of pool, ambled around to the corner near Bruce. As Lee bent far over to try one of those three-cushion fancies, Bruce's eyes suddenly were distracted and, instead of watching the fast one that Dave was sending his way at that moment, he obeyed a primal impulse and dealt a resounding smack on the well-filled portion of Lee's trousers that customarily is reposed on a chair.

When the vociferous glee had died down, Bruce learned that the digression had cost him the pin-pong victory.

"It was worth it," Bruce declared, Lee's remarks were not audible.

The largest woman in films, according to our Hollywood statistical expert, is Josephine Williams. She weighs around 555 and is an extra. That's what you call a real all-around extra.

Bill Ferguson was missed from his usual queer carriageway at the M. P. Club the other noontime. A searching party found him further upstate breaking bread with Bill Rabell. Wonder who signed the check?

Talking picture producers in England and Europe are just feeling their way along, Kent said, and the outcome is anybody's guess. No greater activity is evident or in prospect now than under the silent regime. One English studio, the Wilcox Gramaphone, has just shut down. On the Continent, Ufa is the most active company, with Emelka also producing some talkers. Good pictures, whether made here or abroad, will always find a market, Kent declared.

Asked about the Robert T. Kane undertaking in Paris, Kent said it is still somewhat in a formative stage. The company is making shorts only, and pictures will be distributed in France by Paramount.

Another meeting of the S-5-5 conference of exhibitors and distributors will be called, Kent said, as soon as he has had time to get in touch with the various members and decided upon a suitable date.

THERE'S A VALUABLE LESSON IN THIS FOR EXHIBITORS

¶ We didn’t need to frame this ad around William Powell’s fine first starring picture, "THE STREET OF CHANCE." ¶ We could have used the great business and rave notices Gary Cooper in "SEVEN DAYS LEAVE" got at the Paramount, N. Y., the previous week. Or any of a hundred record engagements of "THE LOVE PARADE." Or Dick Arlen and Mary Brian in "BURNING UP." Or, in a week or so, "ROADHOUSE NIGHTS." Specialization Necessary
To Production of Good Films

It does not seem reasonable that any one company can produce the best of dramatic motion pictures and the best of musical films. Each requires its special kind of brains and resources. Only the specialist can do things right. The company—and nearly all of them seem to be aiming in that direction—that attempts to compass the entire field of amusement is pretty likely to turn out a majority of mediocre productions. No man, and certainly no motion picture company, can serve two masters, music and the drama. Sooner or later separate companies must enter the production field and separate theaters must be set aside to serve separate audiences. The sooner these conditions become effective the better for pictures, both as an art and an industry. Specialization is the watchword of the day.

Says Talkers Have Increased Necessity for Good Projection

DAMAGE to prints has ever been an industry sore spot. The seriousness of this problem has increased with sound prints. Replacement costs are heavy and placing the blame has become a "bucket-passing" game. Carelessness of this kind should have gone out when talking pictures came in. Worn parts on projection equipment, that may be causing the damage, should be replaced without delay. Projection can make or break a picture. Good projection has ever been a necessity—it has never been in greater demand than today. Carefulness will eliminate the damaged print evil.

Dooley has a repertoire of comic chatter and business that is guaranteed to make folks laugh with laughter until they are weak around the l-k. A varied assortment of dancing is offered by Healy and Clifford, Audree Evans, Jef Myrt and Ayres, and the Dave Gould Syncopated Steppers.

Rudy Vallee, in his final week before going over to the Brooklyn Paramoun for a run, has an augmented group of 28 musicians in his stage band and they participate in some clowning specialties that go across the house. The scenic and costume background, patterned on the playing card idea, reveal some ingenious effects.

SOUTHERN ATMOSPHERE ON CAPITOL PROGRAM

The current week finds on the Capitol stage a revue studied with a number of first-rate performers. They have been set against a background reminiscent of the south. At the top of them all is Eddie Leonard, whose appearance is disappointingly brief but well-remembered. He sings a number of old favorites in quiet but effective style. The show, gathered together under the title, "Southern Melodies," serves to introduce a personable and versatile young fellow named Bobby Gillette, who is billed as master of ceremonies. The Four Flash Devils, a colored dancing team, show a class of dancing that is fast and furious. Also on the program are the Dennis Sisters, who offer some crooning of a pleasant order, and a pair of swell comics known as Bayes and Speck. Berta Doon completes the bill. Here's just the thing for those who like the southern stuff.

GOOD JUMP WITH "THE JUMPERS"

The old South fills the Roxy stage this week. A background of tremendous visual beauty has a loving picturization of some mass singing that succeeds in being highly inspiring and touchingly melodious. Music of extremely haunting quality is delivered by the Hall Johnson Negro Choir. Also a fine number is an Irving Berlin tune, "Call of the South," sung by Heat Clarke and Claude Reese, accompanied by the Roxy Male Chorus. Others on the bill are Harold Van Duzee, Robert Evans, Charles Weaver, Paul Clarke and Leonide Massine. Here is a collection of southern music that is irresistible.

Productions now in work are:

"Under Western Skies," directed by Clarence Badger, with Lila Lee and Sidney Blackmer. Part Technicolor.

"Sin Flood," directed by Frank Lloyd, with Denny Finckh, Jr., Dorothy Revier and Noah Beery.

"One Night At Susie's," from the "Liberty Magazine" story, directed by John Francis Dillon, with Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

"Heart of the North," all-Technicolor, based on a "Red Magazine" story, starring Loretta Young.

Future productions include the first of the original compositions by Oscar Straus, who is now at the studio. Otto Harbach and Jerome D. Kern also will be represented with a picture. A play now is being selected for the latter and there will be another Victor Herbert operetta, "The Fortune Teller," as well as Marilyn Miller's second musical production in color. There also are in the works productions with Corinne Griffith, Dorothy Mackall, Lois Wilson and Alexander Gray.

Australian Exhibits Ready to Back Brit. Producers

Sydney—Australian exhibitors as a whole are ready to back British producers to take a more prominent place in world production, Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Union Theaters, Ltd., big Commonwealth circuit, said at a recent meeting of representatives of Melbourne's commercial cinemas. He stated, "Twelve months ago," he said, "the phrase 'British film for the world' would have been almost laughable. Today it is a challenge and a prophecy. Within the next year I hope and believe this will be a statement of fact."

PRODUCTION IN THE EAST
WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S WHAT IN GREATER NEW YORK STUDIOS

Plans Sound Studio at Asheville, N. C.
A modern sound studio is being contemplated in Asheville, N. C., by Southern Pictures Corp. of New York.
J. L. Thompson, formerly of American Sound studios, who is in back of the enterprise, believes that Asheville has natural advantages that will ultimately make it the Hollywood of the East. He is leaving for Asheville today to complete final details with local business men who are said to be behind the project.

Para. Adds Louise Closser Hale
Louise Closser Hale, who scored a decided hit in both stage and screen version of "Paris," has been added to the cast of "Dangerous Nan McGrew," which goes into production at the Paramount studio here, in a few days. Monta Bell is directing the picture, the cast of which already includes Helen Kane, Victor Moore, James Hall, Stuart Erwin, Frank Morgan and Roberta Robinson.

Short Shots from New York Studios
"The Lady Lies," produced at Paramount's Long Island studios, with Hobart Henley directing, led off the Roll of Honor pictures selected by leading critics of the country in the FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK annual poll. Following this came "The Letter," another product of Paramount's East Coast studios, with "The Cocoanuts," also made here, closely following.

John MacDowell, young actor, who has just been added to the cast of Paramount's "Young Man of Manhattan," is a protege of Paul Ash, who discovered him in a Public presentation act.

"Mike," Ames, Michigan's famous female impersonator, has just completed a Vitaphone Variety, under the direction of Edmund Joseph, to be known as "The Varsity Vamp." Ames is a former U. of M. athlete who gave up a career as engineer to follow his present profession.

Frank Heath, Paramount's genius casting director is not above taking a joke but he'd like to get his paw on a certain guy who has been visiting the various bakery stores in the vicinity of the Long Island studio and ordering 20 dozen rolls delivered to Heath. The joker's usual method of payment is a rubber check which never fails to bounce right back at the indignant baker.

Stanley Rauh, who has been connected with the Eastern Vitaphone studio for six weeks, will have his fifth sketch "shot" next week. It is titled "The No Account," and will be produced with an all-star cast under the direction of Murray Roth.

Popular Screen Comic Strong for Talkies
"The public does not as yet realize the marvels of talking pictures," declared Chester Conklin seriously, during an interview at the Warner Vitaphone studios where he recently made "The Master Sweeper," a short comedy, under Murray Roth's direction.

"Aside from their value as entertainment, talking pictures will play a prominent part in world affairs and in the history of nations. "Comedies are the most difficult of all talking pictures to make," concluded the comedian, "because of the necessity of timing for laughs. This is practically impossible to gauge in advance since no two audiences react alike."

Lewis Warner at Studio
Lewis Warner, son of Harry M. Warner, has transferred his activities from the music and theater management and to the Eastern Vitaphone studios in Flatbush. Monroe Shaff, formerly assistant director, is now assistant to Warner.

In the Film Daily's Nationwide Poll of Critics
Difficulties encountered in designing adequately optical systems to meet the problems of wide film processes are outlined in the following article by W. B. Rayton, who in addition is a member and associate editor of the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, is connected with the scientific bureau of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

The employment of film wider than the standard 35 mm. seems imminent. No one film producer plans to make only one size or several, but, however that question is solved, the industry is definitely interested in designing adequate optical systems to meet the problems of wide film processes and to work in degree with the variations in width of film and size of projected image. It seems probable that they are sufficiently interested in this to Society to justify a brief statement of the problems and objections we have been able to meet the requirements.

It will probably not be out of place first to see where we are, what the industry is trying to do and to try and solve the problem of the frame size and to the effect of conversion of equipment to a new or larger frame, the camera has been used in one or several sizes, but, however that question is solved, the industry is definitely interested in designing adequate optical systems to meet the problems of wide film processes and to work in degree with the variations in width of film and size of projected image. It seems probable that they are sufficiently interested in this to Society to justify a brief statement of the problems and objections we have been able to meet the requirements.

Katherine Brush had the thrill of seeing her fictional characters come to life the other day when she visited the "Young Men of Manhattan" set at the Paramount studio. This popular young authoress expressed herself as well pleased with the treatment of Norman Foster for the title role.

Eddie Buzzell, the pint-sized comedian, who just completed a Vitaphone Variety at the Warner Bros. studios in Flatbush, under Mack Sennett's direction, is greatly elated over the swell notices given his first feature talkie, "Little Johnny Jones," which played the Strand theater last week.

Slapstick Principalss Chosen

Louise Brooks announces that she will feature Tony Martin and Nick Basil, Italian comedians, in "Barun Was Wrong," the first slapstick comedy to be filmed here.

Production will start next week at the Ideal studio, Clifftside, N. J., with Mark Sandrich directing.

Leslie Austin in "Young Man"

Leslie Austin, stage and screen actor, will make his talkie in Paramount's "Young Man of Manhattan," now being directed at the Long Island studios, by Monta Bell. He joins a cast headed by Carlette Cober, Charles Ruggles, Norman Foster and Ginger Rogers.

Heads Up in Technicolor

The first feature-length Technicolor production to be made in the East will be "Heads Up," which Paramount will film at its Long Island studios within the next two months.

"Glorifying the American Girl" Paramount

Paramount, New York

AMERICAN Usage of wide frame film is not to be a very weak issue which is saved from utter banality by the introduction of an Eddie Cantor comedy vehicle that makes the audience laugh so heartily as to forget everything else. Mr. Cantor is one of the few unremembered songs, and some technicolor that is not so good.

DAILY NEWS—* * * the long-swatched era still isn't really much of a spectacle at all. * * * The colored sequences are lavish and lovely. They've injected any number of silent scenes into a talkie movie, and knowing the director that seems. But they switch quickly from colored episodes to black-and-white, and back again.

Webb has given us a sloppy piece of direction.

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * a spotty comedy that isn't really much of a spectacle at all. * * * The colored sequences are lavish and lovely. They've injected any number of silent scenes into a talkie movie, and knowing the director that seems. But they switch quickly from colored episodes to black-and-white, and back again.

Webb has given us a sloppy piece of direction.

GRAPIC—* * * a familiar and often forgotten funnyman, Eddie Cantor, plays the part of a small-time vaudeville man to a Ziegfeld star, enriching his stage success with gaily decorative sets of imposing grandeur and sprinkling feminine pulpbrownie over its final reels.

HERALD TRIBUNE—* * * the result is harmonious. "The American Girl" is a picture that is entertaining in its revue scenes. It is the picture of a group of players that is hardly triumphant. The cast, gathered from the local stage, is less than exciting.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Starting off with the handicap of an unattractive title the picture presents atrr bitely written story, skillfully directed and amnestically acted. Obviously, the whole thing was thrown together carelessly to provide a framework for production numbers.

POST—* * * there is nothing about "Glorifying the American Girl" that has not been done in the talkie revue. Its plot fairly reeks with familiarity.

TELEGRAM—* * * an outmoded and discredited formula has been made possibly two short sketches that are worthy of any particular attention. Eddie Cantor, long drawn out, is good, the plays being perhaps the stagers along. The photography is bad; the color sequences are lavish and lovely. The acting is neither fresh nor imaginative; the acting is a pity. No part of the players concerned is pretty amateurish, and the music is from several seasons back.

TIMES—The only really bright spots in this production are the episodes in which Eddie Cantor, Helen Morgan, Rudy Vallee and Elsie Janis are seen. But the colorful "American Girl" is as unendearing as it is, as acceptable as are most of the musical comedy films which to date have reached Broadway. It is just a fair show, made now according to production numbers and one or the other of the Ziegfeld celebrities.

AL JOLSON gave the Viennese managers a heap big shock when he asked a price of $5,000 for one performance.

"But Morn Dieu!" exclaimed one of the impresarios, who happened to be a Frenchman (because we don't know any Viennese). "For $3,000 we can engage Galli-Curci or Chalapa or Gigli!"

"Oh, yeah?" said Al. "And how big a house do you get with those yodelers?"

"Maybe, two, three thousand," replied the manager.

"Well, big boy," laughed Al, "that's just the standing room crowd in the coliseums, auditoriums and ice rinks where I sing."

From a country newspaper we glean the information that Patrick T. Logius Jeremiah McGilli-cuddy has left the old home town for Hollywood to make a name for himself. A pure case of misdirected energy, if you ask us. He's got too much name already.

"Why is it that a certain element always likes to sensationalize anything that might be construed as derogatory to pictures?"

"Maybe it's for the same reason that Florida newspapers like to play up California's earthquakes."

Although the Aquitania, bringing Sidney R. Kent back from Europe, was two days late, no refund was made by the steamship company like they do on the Twentieth Century. However, Kent figures himself pretty near even. The ship had to house and feed him for those two extra days.

USELESS INFORMATION

Lack of applause from film audiences doesn't offend picture players, because they couldn't step out and take bows anyhow.

on the lens designer. The method now used involves the following steps:

1. Selecting a focal length for the lens.
2. Determining the effective aperture of the lens.
3. Calculating the necessary depth of field for the film format.
4. Ensuring that the lens is designed to accommodate these parameters.

The size of the illuminated area can be increased, however, by reducing the distance from the projector to the film. This means that what the spot on the film gate will be large enough to exceed the field angle of the projector, but still have the illumination be greater than what we expect to the rear of the projector. The reduced distance from the arc to condenser we have increased the amount of light which will be intercepted by the field angle, but we have not compensated for the fact that the light flux which passed to the picture only in the area we were projecting ordinary 25, 35.

The old 4.5 in. diameter condensers with the high intensity arc, however, did not exist. No lens and condenser of this size would be less than the focal length in the other sizes. A typical illuminator of this size is to be realized by employing one cylindrical surface of this size, we have done for several years in some of our photographic instrument, or on the eye of a field with a field of 110 degrees. This is held a spot of light in the plane of the film. A preliminary investigation subject to the fact that there is nothing like something like 25 per cent of this field.

If, now, the arc be run at something like the light bulb of the arc, it might be possible to raise the general illumination of the projector a bit. When the projection of the pictures ordinary projection lenses are entirely out of question because of the cause of objectionable curvature of field. It happened that I had been working on an investigation of the lights for the projection of ordinary film and for lenses to project the large pictures. The design had provided for lenses of 4 in. equivalent focal length and a speed of 3.2 which projected a picture 23 X 46 mm. with satisfactory results. Since then it has been found entirely possible with lenses of 3 in. focal length. These lenses are, of course, anaglyphs. European pictures which might be exemplified by the data of the optical developments described above.

NEW TYPE FLOOR CLAIMED IDEAL FOR SOUND STAGE

Latest installation at the Radio studio is a “floating floor” now nearing completion and built, it is claimed, to insure the successful recording of “Case of Sergeant Dink,” “Dixie” and “Radio Revels.”

This new type of floor, according to technicians, is ideal for sound stages as it provides enough resilience to absorb all floor sounds. The floor is constructed so that it is not connected with either of the outside walls and rests on a base of flax linen, a sound absorbing material. It is built of No. 2 vertical grain Oregon pine and is nailed together in the same manner as a high grade hardwood floor. Ground noise caused by the earth’s vibration from city traffic has baffled the problem of proper recording of sound pictures. This new type of “floating floor” is expected to reduce this to a minimum.

With an Edgar Wallace script to toy with, British International has turned out a rather dull proposition which does little to aid the cause of British films. Deficient from any angle you look at it, this exhibition provides entertainment mediocre at its very best degree. As melodrama it is tame to the point of dullness, with all its color confined to its title. Some of the scenes intended as serious inci- dence, so cruelly and amatiable are handled. The central figure is a blackmailer known as the “Crime Circle” who conceals his activities under the masquerade of a Scotland Yard man. The inspector assigned to track him down is on the verge of being defeated which makes any headway when his little girl steps into the case. Foremost among its assets are the photography and the singing of J. Harold Murray in the role of a gambler. Also there are scenes of the Southland fall of charm of drowsy beauty and acting on the part of Murray that ought to strengthen his hold on screen audiences. It is a fine human interest plot, developed in a plausible manner, directed by Russell Mack with a good eye for effective dramatic touches, and smoothly acted by a fine cast. Conrad Nagel is in good form, Mary Carr gives a convincing performance as an old servant who is somewhat of a mother as well, and there is excellent work by Hugh Huntley and that talented little youngster, Freddie Burke Frederick. Richard Arlen appears as a daredevil, first in a "globe of death" on a carnival, and then as an auto racer on the fairgrounds. At the fair he spots a girl after his own heart, whereupon he breaks away from his racketeering pals and wins an exciting race which had been framed in order to take a wedge of dough from the girl's father. The action trots along in a breezy manner, and Director Eddie Sutherland has made clever use of plentiful opportunities for swell comedy, to say nothing of the nice little human interest touches, while the ending finale produces a strong climax. Good acting all around.

Time, 1 hr., 16 mins.
FIRST RATE COMEDY BRIGHTLY DONE, WITH TRY-BE-BRIBE APPEAL AND CAPTIVALLY ACTED.

"Dulcy," the George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly play, has been brought to the talking screen in a production that loses little of the original comedy. Its bright lines have lost none of their sharp edge, while the central character still remains the same familiar type that made the play the success it was. Marion Davies is a fortunate choice as Dulcy. She does the character full justice and proves conclusively that she is a comedienne of no mean ability. The star is ably supported by a cast of high calibre. Not an opportunity is lost to point up the humor of the piece. King Vidor's direction catches to a nicety the mood that conveys of this sort needs to keep it moving. It is the story of the talkative girl who nearly ruins a business deal upon which depends the fortune of her fiancé—simply because she is forever saying wrong things.

Cast: Marion Davies, Elliott Nugent, Raymond Hackett, Franklyn Pannor, Jalla Fay, William Holden, Donald Ogden Stewart, Sally Starr, George Davis.
Director, King Vidor; Authors, George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly; Dialogue, Edwin Justus Mayer; Adaptor, Wanda Tuchock; Cameraaman, Oliver Marsh; Editor, Blanche Sewell. Direction, first-rate. Photography, good.

"The Lost Zeppelin" (All-Talker)
Tiffany
Time, 1 hr., 10 mins.
FAIR DRAMA OF A SOUTH POLE EXPEDITION IN WHICH ALL PERISH EXCEPT TWO MEN WHO LOVE THE SAME WOMAN, WELL ACTED.

Generous glimpses of South Pole atmosphere, consisting almost exclusively of ice mountains, raging snowstorms, and a disabled Zeppelin, are the highlights of this drama. It concerns an expedition party which includes a young officer who is in love with the commander's wife. The airship goes haywire and death takes all of the crew except the two rivals. When a relief plane finally spots them, but can take back only one, the chief insists on his subordinate getting aboard because he is the man whom the woman really loves. The commander's heroism, however, causes his wife to have a change of heart, and his subsequent rescue makes everything come out according to Hoyle. The story is well acted, but the spectacular scenic effects are too obviously artificial. Has timely tie-up possibilities.

Qualifications of New Western Electric Sound Horns Outlined

R. H. McCullough, sound engineer for Fox West Coast Theaters, in the following article outlines important features of various types of Western Electric sound horns:

Western Electric supply exponential horns with all sound projector system installations. With the first installations the 12-A and 13-A horns were supplied. The 15-A and 15-B type horns have been installed with all installations during the last year. These new horns are much lighter in weight, but occupy more space.

The Bell Laboratories place three layers of white flannel inside the 15-A and 15-B type horns near the output of the air column. We have found that this flannel absorbs many high frequencies. By removing this flannel, sound reproduction in many theaters has been improved. Early installations employed two upper and two lower horns, but now with similar installations two and three horns are installed alongside each other about two-thirds height of the screen. The 12-A, 13-A and 15-A type horns have single throats, whereas the 15-B type horns have two throats for two units and replaces the 12-A and 13-A type horns.

The air column on these horns must be small in area at the input end to place an appreciable pressure-load on the diaphragm, and it must be large at the other end to radiate the sound effectively into the free air. For best results the cross sectional area should gradually flare from the small end to the large end according to an exponential curve and mathematical formula. The 355-W West-electric receiver should never be used without the horn. Without the horn sound will not come forth with full resonance and amplification. The receiver does carry the sound, but it is unable to transmit it without the horn.

Acoustical conditions in theaters must be taken into consideration, for good sound reproduction. When sound comes from an exponential horn, sound waves spread at angle of 45 degrees with a directional effect and the speed of these sound waves is about 1100 feet per second. In a small fraction of a second these waves strike the walls, ceiling and floor of the auditorium. Some of the sound waves are reflected back into the room and some are absorbed by the surfaces they strike. Ordinary plaster, glass or wood surfaces absorb only about three percent of the sound, leaving ninety-seven percent to be reflected back into the room, to repeat the action of the original sound wave.

"Sugar Plum Papa"

Educational Time, 21 mins.

A Humdinger

This Mack Sennett comedy is aces our parade.

Daphne Pollard, drinking the bulk of the action, is followed by a few independent gags, and a wrap-up of an indomitable spirit.

The only gag that might prove a hit with the public is the two old women who continue to compete for the favors of a lover, in the manner of the old-time switch."over.

"Seven Coast Productions, Former W. E. managers, have received a patent for a device that will keep the old ladies from competing in the future."

"Nine Producers, Former W. E. managers, have received a patent for a device that will keep the old ladies from competing in the future."

"The Under Dog"

VIPHONE Time, 18 mins.

Mildly Entertaining

James Barton, featured, is at this best when singing or dancing, but the first half of the picture is devoted to some rather mild sentiment stuff about a down-and-out dog, Oscar. The man takes part in an amusing nightclub scene and wins first prize, whereupon they indulge in a grub feast.

"The Voice of Hollywood"

Tiffany Time, 12 mins.

Short Bits by Stars

With Nick Stuart officiating in a capable manner as master of ceremonies, this edition of "The Voice" presents short bits by Jack Mulhall, Mildred Harris and Sam Coslow, Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon, James Gleason, Marguerite Churchill and Sammy Cohen. The individual specialties are very entertaining. Will appeal to fans generally on the personal angle as well.

"Frances Alda"

VIPHONE Time, 7 mins.

Good Singing

Almost any vocal number by this operatic star will find appreciation, and the two songs here, "A Man and a Woman." The last scene of "A Man and a Woman," are well chosen and beautifully delivered. Class audiences particularly will welcome Miss Alda's work.

"Buck and Bubbles in "High Toned"

Pathé Time, 21 mins.

Quiet Fun

The negro laugh-getting team appears in pleasant film comedy derived from "Wildcat," a Hugh Wiley story.

Though far from riotous, it does possess pretty fine entertainment value. The southern atmosphere has faithfully been observed, and there are many number of fetching Dixie tunes to add to the enjoyment of the Buck and Bubbles antics.

"Vengeance"

VIPHONE Time, 8 mins.

Slightly Different

The familiar theme of thevengeful tight-wire walker on a somewhat different key. This time the bus-driver does not get on even on his wife's lover by dumping him. He simply gives the hot fellow such a scare during the act that he falls to the safety net unharmed but his nerve broken. Rather effective and thrillingly done and capable acted by Gardner James, Natascia Moorhead and Warner Richmond.

Pathe Audio Review No. 6

Time, 10 mins.

Pathe Audio Review takes to color with this number. The Pathechrome process is employed and it is a delicate shade with remarkable beauty. The subjects in this one lend themselves to such treatment. The camera has captured the fantastic shapes assumed by dye in water and recorded the dances of various climes, while the new boudoir styles for men are shown in all their resplendancy.

"Singing Saps"

VIPHONE Time, 7 mins.

Aesop Fable

An entertaining little gem intended to prove that "a faint heart never won fair lady." Chock-full of fun from beginning to end. For an animated cartoon it proves itself not a little exciting. A wise addition to any program.

"The Operation"

VIPHONE Time, 10 mins.

Good Fun

A first-rate filler featuring Edgar Bergen, the ventriloquist, who does a fine bit of work with dummy known as "Charlie MacArthur." Charlie is found ill on a park bench by Berger, who plays a doctor, and is taken to the medico's office for treatment. All the incidents in the film are so skillfully treated that one almost forgets that Berger is working with an inanimate thing. A little masterpiece of the ventriloquist's art.

"Doing Phil a Favor"

Pathé Time, 15 mins.

Flat Comedy

Comedy sketch of extremely poor order with a brand of humor lacking all sparkle and intelligence. The comedy is forced and highly unnatural and is dished out by a cast that overplays badly. Mackenzie Ward, in particular, mugs until it hurts. The story is about the husband who gets his best pal to cure wife of the flirtation habit by proposing to flee with her. Inferior stuff.

SILENT

Pathé Review No. 5

Time, 10 mins.

Interesting and beautifully done and given added effectiveness through the use of color. First we are shown how pottery is made in Arabia. We then see the latest in silk fashions with patterns of African origin. Here is decidedly a treat for the ladies. The closing scenes are a study in color and shadows of a wintry landscape. A good filler.

Pathé Review No. 6

Time, 10 mins.

A feature of great educational worth. It starts off with a view of monkey life in the jungles of Borneo and shows the method of trapping the little tree dwellers. Next we are transported to Japan and are given a glimpse of Japanese stenographers at work. The closing scenes are given in the character of a nature study, with birds, bees and blossoms as the subject of study.

BENEFIT OF COLOR without PENALTY OF COST

COLOR is the order of the day. Sonochrome brings it without the penalty of added cost. Sixteen delicate tints and a warm neutral tone are available at the same price as ordinary black-and-white. This, plus the fact that it gives really faithful sound-on-film, accounts for the success of this series of Eastman tinted positive films.

West Coast Bureau, THE FILM DAILY

Hollywood — Directors who were successful in making silent pictures are repeating this success in talking picture production, said Jack L. Warner Saturday. The producers of Hollywood are principally depending upon silent picture directors who have adapted themselves to the new order of things, he declared, and pointed out that the nine directors under contract to Warner Bros. are all men who were established before the advent of the talking film. His reference was to Alan Crosland, Lloyd Bacon, Michael Curtiz, Archie Mayo, Roy Del Ruth, Ray Enright, John Adolfi, Howard Bretherton and Alfred E. Green.

Acoustic Control of Recording for Talking Motion Pictures

The purpose of this paper, prepared for the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers by J. P. Bennett, of Electrical Research Products, Inc., is to describe the fundamental basis of sound recording as applied to motion pictures and to give certain results which have been obtained by the use of these principles in the actual production of pictures for release.

The paper, which also deals with the practical methods of making and the results of testing material that has not been completely worked out and which is not described in the paper, deals with the selection of the optimum conditions of record.

The problem to be solved is that of obtaining a picture on the film in such a manner that a member of the audience in the viewing hall can see and hear the picture, and understand the conditions of photography and the sound pick-up.

FANS are wondering who will be the villain in Bebe Daniels' next picture, "Mysterious Beauty," when they figure that he will have a right merry job "menacing" her, because Bebe's, fan club, plays the hero.

Walter DeLeon has been signed by Pathe to write an original story for Eddie Quillan.

The height of modesty is a young actor hiding several packages of fan mail under his coat. Robert Montgomery, who is fast gaining popularity as a leading man, is the young actor we saw hiding his fan mail under his coat.

Arthur Brilliant, Herbert Crocker, Cliff Gill, Jim Kee and Frank Murray are among the press agents who hail from Minneapolis.

George Crone has finished the direction of "The Dark Chapter," starring Renault Denny, Crone is scheduled to direct two more pictures for Sono Art.

Russell Hopton, who played the leading male role in the Los Angeles engagement of "Lulu Belle," is playing a featured part in support of Ramon Novarro in "The Singers of Seville," for M-G-M. Charles Brabin is directing.

An addition to list of former Minneapolitans who are now press agents is Russell Phelp.

Muni as Romantic Lover
Paul Muni will appear as a romantic young lover in his next picture for Fox, it is announced. The vehicle is now being lined up.

Robertson to Direct Boles
John S. Robertson, who has just finished "La Marsouille," will direct John Boles in his next starring picture for Universal, "Moonlight Madness."

Although the practice is too expensive for general adoption, the use of a separate film for the sound track has been found advantageous in obtaining better quality pictures. The National Board of Review selected the best reel produced by the Loew projection and sound department. The system has been employed on a number of special Broadway showings, but has not been used in the double reel method so far as has been known to the author.

The system, which is under exclusive patent, requires the use of a special film, known as the M-G-M film. It is produced by M-G-M. Special reel shows, however, are the only use made of the double-reel method so far as has been known to the author. The M-G-M film is a separate reel for the sound track, which usually wears out quicker than the picture, but may be replaced independently whenever necessary, whereas a double reel is a new reel for the entire picture. In the case of productions filmed in color, the sound track is recorded on black and white film.

Because of the double cost involved in the making and handling of two sets of reels, the system is considered out of the question for theaters at large and no efforts are being made to install it in any other house controlled by Loew. For special run showings at $2, however, it is believed that superiority of the performance justifies the extra expense.

A separate sound track method, on the same order as that used by M-G-M, was tried out sometime ago by RCA and subsequently dropped, because no special advantages could be seen in it for the trade at large.

Additional Changes Made in Sono Art Sales Staff

Additional changes have been made in the sales organization of Sono Art World Wide Pictures. Recent additions to the force include Russell P. Collins, former representative for Vitaphone, as feature sales manager at Boston; Harry O'Brien, formerly with M-G-M, is connected with New York, now covering the New York office. Hopcroft has been with George W. Weeks in Sono Art Production, Inc., as special representative.

—a column of comment

ONLY THREE of the Ten Best Pictures selected by critical America in the annual Film Daily Year Book poll may be classified as musicals. That ought to be something worthwhile for producers to think about. It's fair enough to assume that these reviewers, located in communities in every corner of this land of ours, substantially reflect the nation's taste in film fare. Then this being accepted as gospel it looks like a good tip to producers that the cash customers don't exclusively have a yen for stage and back-stage stories. Let's hope this lowdown will serve to stem the tidal wave glorifying the Broadway legit theater.

A FREE-LANCE players' contract has come out of the West through the medium of conferences held by producers and actors. Instead of throwing bricks, as per a now-obscure custom, both factions sensibly sat down and wields a harmonious iron to smooth out their differences. Furthermore, provision was made for revising the new contract providing it doesn't work out feasibly amounts to another concrete victory for the principle of arbitration. Long may it wave!

TRAILER-MAKING outfits had a good financial year in 1929 with increases in business generally approximating 25 per cent. Trailers that are being made today are not only good advertising material but are interesting to the audience and sometimes as entertaining as a short. Exhibitors have come to realize the value of using good trailers to increase business and are using them to advantage.

Entire Capacity of Color Cameras Being Signed by Producers

Evidence of increased demand for color productions is shown in the announcement by Technicolor that it already has signed contracts with producers for 70 feature pictures to be made this year. In addition, the company has a waiting list ready to sign as fast as new cameras and facilities are made available, it is stated. A similar demand is reported by Photocolor, which at present is using

Beating the Law

Portsmouth, O.—Local theater operators are getting about the Sunday law question by paying $50 fines each Monday morning in violation of the city ordinance. A recent attempt of the Portsmouth Ministerial Ass'n to stamp out Sunday movies again failed when Common Pleas Judge Russell K. McCurdy refused to grant a writ of mandamus to compel prosecution of Sunday operators under the more severe state laws, which provides a heavy fine and jail sentence, rather than the local ordinance.

AND THAT'S THAT

If the talkers are, as some critics have called them, just the "shad" and echo" of real actors, it strikes us that a lot of players in the flesh are pretty weak miniatures of their echoes and shadows.

The signing of Ginger Rogers by Paramount has caused the self-appointed Broadway talent-detectors to remark once more that it's a shame how clever young artists like Miss Rogers, Helen Kane, John MacDowell and others must spend years on the stage making a name for themselves before the pictures give them a tumble.

Well, the pictures, too, had to make a name for themselves before lots of folks would give them a tumble.

Although few theatre-goers seem to be aware of the fact, it doesn't require any more effort to cough into a handkerchief or a derby or up your sleeve than to let it fly down somebody else's neck.

Sigmund Romberg's press agent is responsible for the quip that the noted composer originates his tunes exclusively on a pipe organ. Romberg's quarters in New York, see the p. a., are equipped with an organ of 103 stops and 75 pipes for each voice.

Maybe this—and the neighbors—had something to do with Romberg hitting the trail for the wide open spaces of the West.

Declares Thacher Decision
Assures Exhibs of Fair Play

Justice Thacher's final decree in the case of the government versus ten distributors, the Hays organization and thirty-two film boards of trade, declaring them in conspiracy in restraint of trade and operating in violation of the Clayton anti-trust act should set motion picture distributors at rest regarding the methods to be pursued in their business practices. No doubt there will be long-drawn out court actions to have the Thacher decree set aside or modified. That's what attorneys are for. But the solution to the problems now confronting the distributors in carrying on their business, seems to rest in completing deliberations started by the so-called 5-5-5 committee late in December, and which seems to have been left to the stove league champions for final decision. Allied appears willing and eager to bring about peace and understanding and distributors should lose no time in cooperating to bring this about.

"Greater Amusements"

Would Prevent Children
From Seeing Films Too Soon

Personally I have always urged parents not to build up in young children a taste for movies in the early days of childhood. At this period he lives in a theater of his own making. He is the actor, his playmates are fellow-actors. He is making stage settings with toys and play materials and has little need of observing professionally dramatizations in either the movie or the legitimate stage form. At what age there is a need for standards set by an adult artist is a problem in my mind. I can speak definitely for the child under seven or eight. Whether the eight-to-ten has some need for such performances I do not know.

Suggests Riviera Studio For Foreign Versions
West Coast Bureau, THE FILM DAILY

Hollywood — That American producers should establish a centrally located studio on the Riviera for the production, has been proposed by Carl E. Milliken, president of Europian stage favorites, who are established drawing cards, filling the principal parts in the foreign versions. Bohem believes arrangements could be made whereby the pictures made in the Riviera studio would meet quota requirements.

European pictures-goers are more critical than American fans, according to Bohem, and will not accept "dubbed" pictures.

Kent Sees Penalty for Exheds Who Violate Contracts

Motion Pictures
— as business getters
By JACK ALICOATE

OUR CANADIAN brothers from across the border are becoming slightly disturbed with the international business situation and its relation to the cinema. So much so that a report has just been issued by Ontario authorities urging the production of Canadian films “to counteract the influence of American movies.” The trade influence of American-made motion pictures has long been a matter of vital interest abroad. It is estimated by the United States Department of Commerce that for every foot of American film shown in foreign countries a dollar’s worth of American goods is sold. In other words films follow the flag and commerce follows the films.

Chiseling Space

NO PUBLICATION worthy of the name could build the least bit of reader confidence, interest, prestige or good will without a definite and stringent set of rules in its editorial rooms for the handling of the free space gaffner and his bogus goods masked as legitimate publicity but in reality chiseled advertising that should be paid for at advertising rates. It would be no less logical for a publication to hire a crew of rack- eaters to go out and steal a car load of paper and a shipment of printers’ ink as for some so-called big concerns to pay high salaries to men whose only duty is to steal space. We are not finding fault with the legitimate publicity man in this or any other business. He is a positive help to his publisher contacts. He who gets our goat is the so-called big expert, in reality a chiseled who figures he can cut the advertising budget in half by stealing an equal amount of space under the guise of publicity.

told attention has been paid to a convincing story, with the result that the general effect is a trifle lower than it should have been. It is the supplying of a little extra like the line in which "The Lost Zeppelin" falls off. The plot is an old-fashioned one, and it is not any too well executed. "The Lost Zeppelin" with a better story would be a very good picture, but the lack of a convincing plot takes away that "very."

A pair of oldtimers, Jim and Joe, met for the first time in a dozen years.

JIM—Well, Joe, old scout, how are things going?

Vaudeville theaters are becoming so scarce out in the wide open spaces that when an actor runs across one of them he writes to his friends about it. And when a legitimate playhouse is discovered, it's worth a wire.

Irv Price, "Sun Dial" contrib, wallis:

Movie audiences can't keep mum:
If they aren't talking, they're chewing gum.
If they aren't chewing, they're coughing.
Shuffling, snoozing, shaking, mesmoing:
Oh, tell me where a man can go.
Who really wants to hear the show?
You've got us, Irv. But you might try hiding in the amplifier horn.

NEW RCA SALES PLAN IS AIMED AT SMALL HOUSES

rented for houses to 300 seats will be the same for theaters having a capacity up to 1,000. Exhibitors will have the right to cancel, at their option, the obligation to receive and pay for service after the first two years.

The Ross statement in part, says:

"Prior to this time, RCA Phonophone sound reproducing equipment for theaters above 300 seating capacity and up to 1,000 seats had been nearly double the cost of the model known as Type G, which was designed for theaters having the smaller seating capacity.

"The three types of equipment to be distributed are identical in accordance with the provisions of the company's policy of having been given three classifications—Type B for theaters above 2,000, Type C for theaters between 1,000 and 2,000 capacity, and Type D for theaters under 1,000 capacity. In the small scale theaters the exhibitor may choose between battery or current operated equipment.

"In the three classes of equipment henceforth to be distributed by RCA Phonophone, Inc., exclusive, of the new portables, there has been an attempt to see that we cover any type of theater and any seating capacity. Because of existing conditions, due to the fact that the majority of the first and second-run theaters in the country have been built with the intention to be occupied for permanent use, we must concentrate our activities upon the distribution of the Small Theater equipment. The current models of that type have been contracted for and are now being manufactured. The company will continue to sell its portable reproduce.'

HELLO SISTER

A Sono Art-World Wide Picture

On the Coffee Line

Rosenberg gave a brief outline of the proposed plan of refinancing Fox Film and Fox Theaters. This calls for the issuance of $85,000,000 in new securities. One lot is to consist of $40,000,000 in 10-year 7 per cent debentures, $9,000,000 to have attached to them warrants to purchase 25 shares of Fox Film "A" stock at $20 a share for the first three years, at $18.50 for the next three years, and at $15 a share for the last four years.

The corporation will agree to set aside 20 per cent of its net earnings, after dividends, on each share of these debentures, and all sums paid into the corporation upon the exercise of warrants attached to these debentures are to be redeemable at $10 for the first three years, at $12 for the next three years, and at $15 for the last four years.

In addition to these debentures there is to be issued a sum of $20,000,000, redeemable, convertible into Class "A" common at $20 a share, the first four years, a share thereon, and redeemable at $100. The bankers are to underwrite the $65,000,000 debentures and $20,000,000 redeemable "A" common stock, their services being paid for by an additional sum of $20,000 shares of the same securities. The underwriting syndicate is to retain 10 per cent of the shares of the same securities. All of the securities are to be offered a large number of different underwriters, and the proceeds from sales of the securities in this manner the underwriting syndicate is not to participate in these sales.

Out of the approximately $60,000,000 net proceeds from the sale of the securities, Fox Film will lend to Fox Theaters an additional $15,000,000, in addition to the $18,000,000 that is now owed by Fox Theaters to Fox Film. In consideration of this Fox Film will issue a 20 year 7 per cent debenture, at 101, convertible into Fox Theaters' "A" common stock at $11 a share for the first year and at $13 a share thereafter.

Stockholders of Fox Theaters are to be enabled to purchase this issue of debentures from Fox Film at par at any time. One year, and warrants for one year, privilege will be issued to Fox Theaters stockholders.

At least 51 per cent of the Class "B" common stock of Fox Film, all of the "A" stock, and in the stock Fox Theaters is to be held in a voting trust for a period of at least ten years following its issue, and at the end of that period the voting trust is to terminate, but in any event the voting trust is to terminate within 10 years, a tax the most.

Untermeyer stated that, while a majority of the Fox directors had studiously avoided approval of the proposed plan, it had not yet been possible to obtain adoption at a formal meeting of the directors of the two corporations. This is to be done tomorrow in presenting the resumption of the hearing before J.C.C. Committee.

In opposing the new arrangement, Bogue declared that his clients were being "let out in the cold," that the clients to whom they had sold securities for Fox in the past were to be provided with no new guarantees. He stated that if the Halcyon, Stuart and ERPI interests submit a different arrangement for this new company, he they would sell for the present under their present agreement with Fox. Bogue also declared that Fox had broken the agreement. Untermeyer retorted that the other side who had broken the contract. Racketeers Get Nearly Half of Theme Song Profits
FORM 10-CENT EASTERN FILM HOUSE CHAIN

Compulsory Arbitration Continuing in Canada

The Mirror
—a column of comment

SIDEWALK RACKETEERS, who disregard the music copyright laws by selling popular song sheets for a nickel are being exterminated by the Music Publishers' Protective Ass'n. The days of this racket are numbered.

With the protective organization training its big guns on the situation and aided by Assistant U. S. Attorney Nathan Burkan, this illegal practice is scheduled for a quick and happy ending—from the standpoint of the industry. Motion picture producers are fortune in having their music copyright interests under such nation-wide and alert protection as is afforded by John Gregg Paine and his association.

THROUGH THE medium of an observer operator, the Earl Carroll theater, one of Manhattan's busiest, is putting its brand of sound reproducing under close and constant scrutiny. This man, stationed in the audience, and via remote control doctors the sound. As a unit of audience he is in a far better position to gauge the volume than an operator yards away in a projection booth. Naturally a man who examines you personally can produce a more accurate diagnosis than one who works by correspondence. General adoption of sound doctors would no doubt bring about a lot of public improvements in sound.

N. Y. Suits vs. Music Pirates To Be Used as Legal Precedent

$2,500,000 is Estimated As RKO's Net for 1929

West Coast Bureau, THE FILM DAILY

Los Angeles—Latest estimate of the 1929 earnings of RKO places the net at $2,500,000 or about $1 a share on the 1,833,746 shares of common. Net profit for the first nine months was $1,637,900, of which $1,007,331 was earned in the third quarter. $800,000 net profits for January are figured.

From 25 to 50 per cent of the theme song profits that should rightfully go to picture companies through their music publishing subsidiaries are being stolen by the racketeers behind the street peddlers who are selling bootlegged sheets of popular songs at a nickel a sheet, according to John Gregg Paine, chairman of the Music Publishers' Protective Ass'n, which (Continued on Page 12)

This would be the record quarter to date. In the corresponding three months of 1928 the net equalled $3,400,000.

Critic Deplores Borrowing From the Legitimate Theater

So long as novelists, playwrights and musical-comedy librettists keep on producing their wares, the movies need never suffer any dearth of material. It has already become one of the unhappy symptoms of the industry that it can manage to subsist so readily on the creative talents of others instead of being compelled, as the publisher or stage producer is compelled, to cultivate its own field. And so long as the public complacently swallows these second-hand offerings, it is doubtful if the movie people will ever trouble themselves to create from their own resources the material which properly belongs to the camera. Those of us who look patiently and longingly to the time when something distinct and indigenous will emerge from the mechanics of sound and visual reproduction cannot escape a feeling of exasperation at this wholesale reliance of the movies on the stage, particularly since the prospects point to an increase, rather than a lessening of this dependence.

Television Won't Empty Theaters, Declares DeMille

I DON'T think it possible that television will keep people from the theater, any more than radio. The desire to leave home one or two evenings a week to seek entertainment is too strong. Television will be a splendid newsreel asset. I can visualize the inauguration of a President which we would see and hear in our neighborhood theater the moment the new Executive takes the oath of office.

"This is the same picture that I saw about four years ago," said the patron.

"Well, in a way," Norman temporized.

"Oh, I know it's the same picture," the patron insisted, "but at that time I suppose it had just been produced and wasn't old enough yet to talk."

AMERICA’S foremost baritone, Star of the Metropolitan Opera in the Greatest of all Musical Romances entirely in TECHNICOLOR
NOTHING thus far of the talking screen approaches the thrill of this new personality. From the Diamond Horseshoe of the Metropolitan Opera House he comes to your screen. When the mighty melodies of "The Rogue Song" resound in your theatre you will be unfolding for your audience the newest magnificent advance of the talking films, you will be first to present its newest celebrity—

IT is fitting that the producer of this industry's landmarks, the "Big Parades", "Broadway Melodies", "Hollywood Revues", should once again pioneer into new fields. "The Rogue Song" will be imitated, as each of the new strides of M-G-M are imitated, but this glorious new phase of the Talkies begun by M-G-M will long await a production to equal its first brilliant operetta. The Opera world offers no other personality to compare with Lawrence Tibbett. The production resources of this industry can never again achieve the beauty, the thrill, the romantic surge of this mighty entertainment, destined to be heard 'round the world!
Not since Barnum brought Jenny Lind to America has there been such a feat of showmanship!

ENTIRELY in TECHNICOLOR
“Son of the Gods”
First National
Warner, New York

AMERICAN—Despite lavish production and fine characterization, “Son of the Gods,” which had its premiere at the Warner Theater last night, proves a disappointingly insensitive piece of entertainment. The story is not new but it is not bad. What fails to rise above programmatic categories is the photography. The photography is beautiful, exact, technically perfect, which is better than it should be. The sets and backgrounds are far more impressive than the film itself.

DAILY MIRROR—An unusual drama, packed with interest, played with skill, produced with taste. First-rate entertainment. The picture is produced most lavishly, with hand-picked casts and interesting characters. A Technicolor sequence of San Francisco’s old Chinatown in redwine.

DAILY NEWS—* * * based on Rex Beach’s novel, which reads more like a hard-boiled novel than a film. It is not bad, but it is lackluster, interest, because the theme is so vital. But the dialogue is rather stiff and there are lapses in action, when the scene shifts from one locale to another, where convenient. The combined work of Barthelmess and Cunstance Bennett, Morgan is at its best, and to anyone who has never heard of the name, the sun is shining.

EVENING WORLD—It has in it some exceptionally well-written scenes, but also has its share of dull and trite parts. The balance, however, is decided on the side of the praiseworthy scenes, so that the standard is far above the average. Some of the scenes move slowly, as if Director Frank Lloyd had reached a trifle too far for effect. The pacing of the story is as good as possible, with the result that the picture took a long time to get going.

HERALD-TRIBUNE—* * * there are moments of good drama and the Mr. Barthelmess and in particular, his leading woman, Miss Cunstance Bennett, are admirable, but it must be confessed that, on the whole, the picture is just a fair magazine story translated into screen terms. * * *

SUN—The racial theme is always interesting and “Son of the Gods” has very effective moments, but it winds up as something of a disappointment because of a rather ambitious setting. A good deal of the dialogue is bad, but much of it is excellent. * * *

TELEGRAM—There are moments of brilliance, when the new Barthelmess picture offers a moving moving picture, and at those times the screen is the greatest thing in the world. There are also a few ill-fated shots, but they are excusable. The film is also the greatest thing in the world. Nevertheless, it is not the greatest thing in the world. It is a fine film and a fine American film. Certainly, it is a very good one.

TIMES—After a tone too hopeful beginning, Richard Barthelmess’s latest talking film plopped its way through hand-rolled sections until the final happy ending. When considered as seriously as it is possible, the film is a profoundly human and intelligent picture, and it is at its best when it succeeds in being honest, straightforward, and realistic. The characters are well-drawn, the situations are well-handled, and the story is a fine one. It is a good film and a fine American film. Certainly, it is a very good one.

WORLD—Mr. Barthelmess is an acorn globe. He has shown a great deal of promise and is clearly a man of exceptional talent. The photography tends to be routine and static, and, in the end, it is a story of the struggle of a child to overcome the handicaps of childhood. It is a bad tale from the beginning, but the story is told with a keenness and understanding.

Racketeers Get Nearly Half of Film Theme Song Profits

This is only the second time in history that a criminal provision of the copyright statute has been invoked, Paine said. The first occasion was in connection with the illegal duping of films. Insanely as the present situation is without precedent, a little time is required to make investigations and establish a course of procedure, but as soon as the proper machinery has been set to work the proceedings will be so vigorous that the song pirates will be wiped out in about six months,
Paine declared.
U. S. District Attorney Charles H.
Tuttle and Asst. District Attorney
Henry Gerson have been giving every co-operation to the campaign and even have gone out of their way to assist Paine in this work.
Tuttle has branded the pirating of copyright music as "a meaner practice than bootlegging."

Fred Wehrenberg Favors Voluntary Arbitration
St. Louis—Some form of voluntary arbitration that would be equitable to all elements in the business will have to be worked out to take the place of the group action which has been declared illegal by Judge
Thacher, it is stated by Fred Wehrenberg, president of the M.
T.O. of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. Wehrenberg says the old plan of handling disputes did not always work out to the best interest of an exhibitor with a real grievance.

Commission.

As usual, the resolutions of the conference have been segregated into one series covering violations of the first group are such practices as inducing breach of contract, disparagement of competitors or their prod-reduction in quality of goods or ser-second group covers competitive bid-

FOX STOCKHOLDERS TO PASS ON PLANS

Virginia Censors Will Pass on Sound Pictures

Legislature Passes Bill to Give Board More Authority

Richmond — A bill relating to the State Division of Motion Picture Censorship has been passed by the legislature here which enables the censors to examine all sound productions. Heretofore the division censored only silent prints and those containing dialogue were allowed to pass unchecked. Another section in the bill provides that the division shall continue under the department of law of which Col. John R. Saunders, attorney general of the State, is chief executive. Three examiners are attached to the division and in the event two censors a print, and the verdict is a deadlock, the superintendant of public instruction shall view the picture and cast the deciding vote.

To Fix Standards

Another attempt to reach an agreement on a standard wide film with be made by the committee on standards of the S. M. P. E. which will hold a meeting in New York next week on a day yet to be selected.

WM. FOX HAS LAST SAY ON REFINANCING PLANS

Although Judge Frank J. Coleman, at yesterday's hearing on the Fox receivership, stated that any number of new financial plans could be submitted to the stockholders for consideration, William Fox has the right to reject any and all of them. If the plan approved by Fox does not satisfy the other parties interested, a receivership is inevitable, the Judge said.

PRICE DISCRIMINATING IN SEAT INDUSTRY HIT

Washington Bureau of THE FILM DAILY
Washington — Discrimination in prices charged to different purchasers, including theaters, "where the effect of such discrimination may be to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly," was condemned as unfair. A practice adopted by the public seating industry at a trade practice conference held last Dec. 19 and formally announced yesterday.

F. N., Warners Selling Own Vitaphone Records

Under a plan just efected, both Warner Bros. and First National are selling records used in connection with their Vitaphone pictures. Previously purchased of records were made through Vitaphone, which con tinued the physical distribution of the records.

Establishment of sound motion picture schools for instruction purposes in the major cities of the country is planned by RCA Institutes, Inc., subsidiary of RCA. In addition to one in New York, 325 Broadway, branches have been opened in Philadelphia, Boston, Newark, and Baltimore. Other cities in which schools will soon be opened include: Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, Dallas, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and Pittsburgh.

receivership hearing is continued owing to new proposals

As a result of several new objections to the proposed Fox refinancing plan, Judge Frank Col. Coleman yesterday adjourned the receivership hearing to permit submitting to stockholders the plan back by Bannamakers-Blair, Lehman & Co., and Dillon, Read & Co., as well as a new plan to be drawn up by the Halsey-Stein Committee and any additional plans that other interested parties may desire to place before the stockholders at the same time.

A meeting of stockholders is to be held as soon as possible, allowing for the 10 days' notice required under the by-laws, and the avoidance of a receivership depends upon some financing plan being accepted at this meeting. Judge Coleman declared that, while he wished to do everything in such a way as to be fair to all sides, he would not give up the right of the court to control the case.

M.P.A.A. Case Against Racketeers Postponed

The first of a series of cases planned by the Music Publishers Protective Ass'n against racketeers backing street peddlers yesterday was postponed in court here until Monday.

"Green Goddess"

Predominated by the sinister and suave George Arliss, "The Green Goddess" made its premiere at the Winter Garden last night, imprinting on the screen a picture which is always distinctive and clever. This Vitaphone production is one of high caliber and consistent charm. Principally, it depends on his polished dialogue and on some thrilling occasions, on its physical action. A sterling brand of acting from the supporting cast is an outstanding characteristic. It's typically a George Arliss picture—one that will no doubt appeal tremendously to class audiences.

Along The Rialto

The Great Altruism has descended upon Hollywood, so we hear, causing some of the popular red-headed luminaries to convert herself into a blonde because she was very fond of another red head in the same company and didn't want to hurt her feelings.

If the idea catches on, you may expect to be seeing:

Antonio Moreno shaving his mustache in favor of the similar lip adornment effected by Warner Baxter.

Ned Sparks growing whiskers in order to be more easily distinguished from Lee Moran.

Basil Rathbone turning down Philo Vance detective roles because he thinks William Powell should have them.

Amy Clyde adopting blackface so the film fans won't confuse him with Chester Conklin.

Nook Beery having his chest tattooed and always keeping it exposed to avoid being mistaken for Montana Long.

Larry Darnour making his comedies less funny because he is running too closely neck and neck with Jack Benny.

Publis and Warner settling half of their theaters to indies in order to make R-K-O and Fox feel good.

It must be spring up in Holyoke, Mass, or at least springy enough to make Jack Fuld indulge in the following acrostic, which he sends us from there:

For St. Valentine's Day
In this novel way
Let me broadcast
My word of greeting
Don't waste time worrying
About the future of the industry—just help the little fellows along, and You'll see business pick up!

"I see that George M. Cohan got cold feet about going through with his talking picture plans."

"Yes, he waved the flag."

"You mean the wrong flag."

The Billboard is voicing the general opinion of critics and exhibitors when it says of Educational’s comedies: "They’re all good.”

Some Practical Wide Film Aspects, Recommendations

The following article is from the Journal of the American Society of Motion Picture Engineers and has been prepared by A. S. Howell and J. A. Dubray.

Modern motion pictures, and especially those employing the wide screen techniques, are brought to us through the efforts of many, and any program the industry has made to take advantage of these techniques is an outstanding project, which must be carefully examined for a complete departure from the standards and establishment of picture images of more appropriate size and proportions.

Some motion pictures are a true representation of modern technique. Motion pictures are designed to represent proportionately and approximate horizons in the width of the screen, more accurately than in the case of the standard size motion picture. This would be done in order to provide a complete departure from the standards and establishment of picture images of less approximate size and proportions.

The method of doing this is to be determined by what proportion of the screen will be dedicated to the representation of proportionately and approximate horizons in the width of the screen. This would be done in order to provide a complete departure from the standards and establishment of picture images of less approximate size and proportions.

One of the most important reasons which make us declare the square form of the screen of the picture, is that the horizontal and vertical movements of the eye, is an effect extensively opposite to that of the picture movement, and is much more disturbing than the

LESSE ELABORATE PROGRAM OFFERED ON ROXY STAGE

A less elaborate program than the usual fare is offered on the Roxy stage for the current week. There is a spirited dance interpretation of Lizza's "Rhapsody," done by Von Grona and his troupe of dancers, augmented by the Roxy Ballet Corps. This number opens effectively with the Von Grona group dancing in black silhouettes against a red-lighted backdrop, and gradually works into a full ensemble under dull light. Robust orchestral accompaniment helps greatly to put the number across. "The Two Grenadiers," a military number sung by Harold Van Duzee, Jose Santiago, Mischa Volijain and the Roxy Chorus, employs a Napoleonic ensemble in a background representing a bleak battlefield. In "La Grande Jardin," the English-French group and Russell E. Markert's Roxettes are costumed and grouped to form a big flower basket, from which they emerge for some pleasing footwork. Patricia Bowman and Leonide Massine, dressed as gardeners, do a speciality, while Beatrice Belkin sings the theme song.

PARAMOUNT STAGE SHOW IS PACKED WITH COMEDY

Comedy again comprises the main portion of the stage production at the Paramount for the current week. Renie Riano and Du Callion are the chief funmakers, and the audience gobbles up their antics like duck soup. The show is a Frank Cambria unit, "Aladdin's Revels," with a treasure-laden pirate's chest background in which is encompassed the lively musical aggregation piloted by Ray Teal. A group of Gamberelli girls, fetching, costumed, also help matters along. Miss Riano offers her individual routine of song and dance travesties, and she has a better line of goods here at popular prices than she ordinarily sold to the vaudeville comedy customers. Du Callion, an English comedian of diversified gifts, delivers a rapid-fire monologue while balancing himself up and down an unsupported ladder. He also plays a string instrument while seated on his perch. Jesse Crawford's organ rendition of the George Gershwin "Rhapsody in Blue" is the musical treat of the bill. The Four Cheer Leaders put over a novelty number very nicely.

At the Fox receptionist hearing, one of the most vociferous lawyers opposing the new financing plan was asked how many shares of stock he represented.

"At this moment I represent 5,500 shares," he replied, "but by tomorrow I will be speaking for double that amount, and I expect the number to increase a lot more over the next days."

PRODUCTION IN THE EAST
WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S WHAT IN GREATER NEW YORK STUDIOS

EASTERN STUDIOS GOING IN FOR COLOR PRODUCT

The growing popularity of color pictures is reflected in the output of the Eastern studios as well as those on the West Coast.

Paramount is planning to make "Heads Up," an elaborate musical, entirely in Technicolor, at their Long Island studios, with other color films in prospect.

Warner Bros. will also produce the introduction of color photography at their Vitaphone studio in Flatbush, in the near future.

The independent producers are, likewise, keeping in step with their output of short product, some of which has already been made in color. Among those making color shorts is the Photocolor Corporation, now using the 16mm studio, pending completion of their own building.

Louis Brock will start producing a weekly series of cartoons, "Shad," at the same studio, to be filmed entirely in color, by the Brewster process.

The Colorcraft Corp. is building a studio and laboratory in Long Island City, where it is expected to produce both features and short product. A staff of directors and cameramen is now being engaged with active production scheduled to begin around April 15.

Adapting "Heads Up"

Jack MacGowan, co-author of the stage musical, "Heads Up," will adopt the screen version for Paramount with collaborators Jack Kirkland. The picture will be filmed entirely in Technicolor, at the Long Island studios, where production is scheduled to start in about two months.

Photocolor Retrieves Lenses

Photocolor Corp. is rejoicing over the recovery of three optical units, one of the few pieces of cargo rescued from the S. S. Muenchen, which caught fire and sank in New York harbor. The lenses were a consignment from the Zeiss Optical Co. of Germany, and Photocolor had been waiting over nine months for them.

Revier Completes Six

Harry Revier has just completed six novelty shorts at the Metropolitan studios, Fort Lee, N. J. He expects to start another series in about 10 days.

Fox Signs Songwriters

Con Conrad, Jack Meckill and Cliff Friend, songwriters, have just been engaged by Pat Flaherty of the Red Star Music Co., to write exclusively for Fox productions.

NEW ORDER IN MAKEUP STRESSES CHARACTER

"My idea of a perfect screen make-up is the appearance of no make-up," says Tom Cameron, chief make-up man at the Paramount Long Island studio.

"Naturalness of facial expression is the key to the age of talking pictures as it never was in the days of silent pictures. They used to make dolls of the player. Figuratively, two rubber stamps were used, one for dark skin and one for women; faces received a flattening varnish that eliminated all fluency of the features. A large, mobile mouth was advocated, and not to be tolerated, but must be cowed into a cupid's bow. Perfection of features was the aim."

"This plastic artificiality can be psychologically traced to the lavish output of paintings necessitated by the demands of the ortho-chromatic realist school. The degree of naturalness in black-and-white color photography is evidenced by the scale of reds, blues, and yellows was drawn up. By the time the make-up man got through with an actor's face, it resembled an exotic mask. There was always the temptation to add another dab of paint."

"With the use of the new panchromatic film in modern motion picture photography, we are able to dispense with the painter's color values are interpreted in the black and white film, so there is no longer jet black on the screen. It is darker than golden hair, and lighter than chestnut. There is that finer distinction."

"Some directors advocate no make-up. A person with an even coat of natural pohograph will look more pleasing. For example, if a person's nose is too flat, it is sharpened up. If the face is of a freshly shaved one, and exaggerates minor blemishes, we can have softness or hardness, therefore, we apply a thin coat of tan cream. We also accentuate or subdue certain features, but we never exaggerate or distort for the sake of achieving regularity. Many times the essence of a person's character lies in the turn of a small nose, and to straighten the nose would be to eliminate an intrinsic expression. The day of perfectly carved features without character is over. Beauty is not irregular features, if accompanied by personality must be maintained at all costs."

Delmar Completes Another

Harry Delmar has completed another of the Melody shorts, which he is making here for Pathé, St. Wills, Harry McNaughton, Thelma White, Bob Carney and the vaudeville team of Golds and Skouras, an even coloring, therefore, we apply a thin coat of tan cream. “Lummos”

(All-Talker)

United Artists. Time, 1 hr., 26 mins. ARTISTIC AND DRAB DRAMA DEALING WITH INARTICULATE SERVANT GIRL'S LIFE, GENERALLY TRAGIC AND HEAVY.

Drama based on a Fanny Hurst best-seller. Herbert Brenon turns in a sympathetic dialogue which fails to carry out this picture which he has made painstakingly. Miss Westover, playing the name part, is always convincing as the ungraciously servant girl who goes through life aiding other people but never really attaining happiness. Bertha, the girl in the story, is seduced by a young poet and later gives birth to a child. Owing to her poverty she permits him to adopt her by a wealthy family. As he grows to young manhood and becomes a famous pianist, she watches him from a distance but never reveals her uncanny spirit. Her love story is incorporated in the tale.

Foz

Time, 1 hr., 30 mins. THOROUGHLY ENTERTAINING, MUSICAL SHOW ON THE TEAM OF DANSEUSES WITH CAST OF NAMES THAT ARE BOX-OFFICE.

More natural perspective, some illusion, scenes, particularly the effect of the出场 angles and less shifting of scenes—these are some of the main advantages of this musical production. Miss Hurst, the famous manager of the Folies-Bergere for the first time in a full-length feature film. The 42-in. width may be found to be a little too much for the eye to grasp without discomforting effect, but the advantage of a reasonably wider screen is established beyond question. From a pure entertainment standpoint, "Happy Days" is satisfying. It consists of numerous revue numbers and a mammoth minute performance, with a light but agreeable romantic plot running through the whole affair.

George Arliss in “The Green Goddess”

(All-Talker)

Warner Bros. Time, 1 hr., 20 mins. HIGH CALIBRE PRODUCTION, WHICH DID HIGH WORK OF A R I S S AND SUPPORTING CAST. MELO-DRAMA OF INDIA LOOKS PROMISING FOR CLASS AUDIENCES.

Drama based on plot. The story, made silently some years ago with another actor, has been valuable vehicle for its star, who plays the diabolical and saucy rajah. Miss Joyce, H. B. Warner and Ralph Forbes, give performances which are all skilful. Subtle and clever dialogue, rather than physical action, is the key to this entertainment. The story is that of two Englishmen and a woman who fall into the hands of a villainous rajah, plans to turn the man, least to over to his priests as a sacrifice. The woman's husband, a semi-heats, gives a wireless message that the latest British military post is killed at the job. The planes arrive in time to save his wife and the other man, who look forward to their common imprisonment. "Disraeli," has directed intelligently.

Cast: George Arliss, Alice Joyce, H. B. Warner, Ralph Forbes, David Taree, Reginald Sheffield, Nigel de Bruihl, Betty Boyd and Intelligent. Director, Alfred E. Green; Author, William Langsner; Adapt., William Langsner; Photographers, Julian Leow, John Godfrey; Editor, James Grubin; Monitor, Man; Not listed; Camearaman, J. Y. O. Taylor. Direction, snappy. Photography, Eddy. Pelegrine.

Jean Hersholt in “The Climax”

(All-Talker)

Universal. Time, 1 hr., 3 mins. GOOD PROGRAMMER, SIMPSON, WHICH PROVIDES A FRESH AND BEAUTIFUL IN TREATMENT, WITH A FINE CAST TO AID IT.

Drama of absorbing interest based on Morton Prince novel. The story has been handled by Renald Hoffman with a keen sense of drama and sensitivity, which does much to give strength to this production. The result is a picture that is witful and tender in mood and beautiful in conception. A first-rate cast helps to make it so. The action takes place in Italy. A young girl places herself in the hands of a famous maestro of staging to be trained for the operatic stage. To perfect her voice she submits to a threat operation. The producer is a rival for her hand. Fearning an operatic career will deprive him of her, she sprays her throat with a drug that ruins her voice. He is about to go to the alter with her she miraculously recovers her voice and returns to the love of her first choice, Jean Hersholt. He marries Christopher Crawford the girl. Both give top-notch performances.

Cast: Jean Hersholt, Kathryn Crawford, LeRoy Mason, John Reinhardt, Henry Armett, Ralph Morgan, Charles Napier, Katharine Alexander, Howard Forest, Clarence Thompson, Lesley Mason; Editor, Bernard Burton; Camearaman, Jerome H. O'Dea; Monitor, Man; Not listed; Direction, fine. Photography, Eddy. Pelegrine.

Lon Chaney in “The Phantom of the Opera”

with Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry

(All-Talker)

Universal. Time, 1 hr., 10 mins. STILL SWELL, HAIR-RAISING ENTERTAINMENT.

SOME OF THE OLD OPERA HOUSE MYSTERY WITH DIALOGUE SEQUENCES ADDED.

Mystery romance. Addition of a number of dialogue sequences has retarded the action of this picture. Chaney never speaks, sub-titles serving for dialogue whenever necessary. Miss Philbin and Kerry are used in the re-made scenes. Only a few new sets were apparently built and a brief color sequence has been added. According to 1930 entertainment standards the film is still a top-notch. The years have not stripped it of its mystery and thrills. Chaney steals the show throughout. The lovers, in the dialogue scenes, look rather weak compared with his silent version.

The story (you may recall) deals with a maiac who haunts the Paris opera house. He haunts it every night. He falls in love with a young singer, abducts her and is finally mobbed to death.

Cast: Paul Morgan, Antoinette Jackel, Lot Blake, Harry Halm, Sesto Santali, Dina Grati, Dalila, Rusty Rogers; Editor, Not listed; Directors, Benjamin Stoloff, Harry Cohn, Lionel Monckton; Photographer, Van Trees; Director, satisfactory. Photography, generally good. Eddy.
Harry Richman in “Puttin’ On The Ritz” (All-Talker)

United Artists Time, 1 hr., 40 mins.

CORKING GOOD PICTURE. RICHMAN GREAT. SNAPPY AND TUNEFUL. SHOULD MAKE MONEY ANYWHERE.

Harry Richman, with James Gleason, Joan Bennett, Eileen Pringle and Lilyan Tashman, puts over one of the best films of this season. Richman in his first singing and talking picture establishes himself as a picture star. The story is of a song plugger who “puts on the ritz” when he is a nobody, then finds that he is not so smart, becomes a successful actor, deserts his old trouper, “puts on the ritz” again only to be brought to his senses in the nick of time by the girl, Joan Bennett, who is beauty personified. Much of the lyrics are printed together with several snappy numbers plus some elaborate sets by William C. Menzies plus a splendid color job. The direction is first class and lines of dialogue by Edward H. Sloman establishes this one as a winner.

Cost: Harry Richman, Joan Bennett, James Gleason, Eileen Pringle and Lilyan Tashman. Producer, John W. Considine, Jr.; Director, William Dieterle; Assistant Director, John W. Considine, Jr.; Adapter, Not listed; Dialogue, William Dieterle; Editor, Ray June; Monitor Man, Not listed.

Direction, fine. Photography, good. Eddy

Art Mix in “Sagebrush Politics” (Part-Talker)

Hollywood Producers Time, 50 mins.

GOOD ACTION WESTERN THAT WILL BRING AN ENCORE FROM MORE FOR THE KIDS. THE PUNCH FINISH IS SURE-FIRE.

Western. With many of the old- fashioned staging followed closely, Art Mix and his pal get mixed up in politics in this one by running into the heroine, who is the daughter of the sheriff. Despite the official capacity of the father, the Wolf manages to steal his son away into the hills just because he wants to be the next sheriff. The hero appears on the scene at the appropriate time and lends his wand to the heroine. The daughter helps the captured brother, with Lillian Bond at the reward for his efforts. The action is nicely balanced and will provide with a realistic lot of action between the bandits and law-abiding citizens. Hero and villain come in for a fast little bit to clinch the climax. Synchronization fair with dialogue mainly concentrated in the sheriff’s office. The action is fast moving and the scenes interlaced throughout helps the film lift the picture from what might have been a drab affair. Kids will love it for it is suitable. Should be billed on a double feature program.

Cost: Art Mix, Wally Merrill, Lillian Bond, Bill Ryerson, Bud Goddard, Joe Campbell, Peko Holmes, Tom Forman, George Green. Producer, Paul Guilford. Author, Not listed; Editor, Not listed; Adapter, Not listed; Thought, Not listed. Direction, fair. Photography, fair. Ornstein

Winnie Lightner in “She Couldn’t Say No!” (All-Talker)

WARNER BROS. GOODE ENTERTAINMENT PROVIDED BY COMEDY WITH NIGHT CLUB ATMO-SPHERE, THANKS TO WINNIE LIGHTNER WHO’S THE WHOLE SHOW.

This one is all Winnie Lightner. With her in the cast “She Couldn’t Say No!” rates well as popular entertainment. Winnie sings and dances, plays two roles and acts as if she were a man. She is a perfect comedian and will make a tremendous hit. The story is entertaining and will appeal to a large audience.

Cast: Winnie Lightner, Chester Morris, Sally Elles, Johnny Arthur, Lilly Marshall, Louise Beavers. Director, Lloyd Bacon; Author, Benjamin H. Kestenbaum; Production, Warner; Editor, Not listed; Cameramen, Ray June; Monitor Man, Not listed. Direction, good. Photography, good. Pelgrine

Nancy Carroll in “Dangerous Paradise” with Richard Arlen, Warner Oland (All-Talker)

PARAMOUNT TIME, 1 hr. FAIR PROGRAM PICTURE. FANTASTIC DRAMA OF AN AMERICAN SHOWGIRL STRANDED IN THE SUDS.

Nancy Carroll didn’t get a very good break in the way of a story for her starring vehicle. She portrays an American beauty stranded somewhere in South Africa where East of Suey, where she is fought over by a couple of oafish villains and eventually is saved by a nice lad (Richard Arlen) who has been doing a hermit act on an island because of a previous love disappointment. It’s a funful story though, but rather hard to swallow. But with its melodrama, suppressed love theme, several murders and a sprinkling of comedy touches, the production ought to get by all right. While the picture is directed at Nancy Carroll and Richard Arlen, the theme is that of the support, especially Gustav von Seyffertitz, Warner Oland, Francis McDonald and Dorothyo Wolbert. The picture is well with many humorous moments and some good dialogue.

Cost: Nancy Carroll, Richard Arlen, Warren Oland, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Francis McDonald, Dorothyo Wolbert, George M. Davis, William Farnum, Charles B. Fitzsimons; Author, Not listed; Editor, Not listed; Adapter, Not listed; Thought, Not listed. Direction, fair. Photography, fair. Ornstein

OUR SHORT SUBJECTS

SOUND

“Copy” Time, 19 mins. Good Number

A newspaper sketch that has much to recommend it. It takes the atmosphere of the newspaper office with invariable accuracy. There is consistent action and more than a little excitement. The chief character is the city editor whose exposure of conditions aboard the steamer of an excursion company costs him his job. He is vindicated when once he who continues the story with a spellbinding story among the lost. Roacoe Karns plays the city editor commendably.

“Vanilla” Vitaphone Time, 10 mins. Fair Playlet

Though not credited, the idea for this playlet comes from a short story by De Maupassant. It concerns a man who borrows a song and a necklace from a girl friend in order to make a showing against a rich woman who is trying to vamp her husband. The background is lost in trying to obtain $25,000 to repay its cost, the wife is caught in a compromising situation by her husband. The plot is grand and makes the audience believe that the trinket was only pasted on the film. The film is fine and makes the audience believe that the trinket was only pasted on the film.

Sid Saylor in “Traffic Troubles” Universal Time, 20 mins. Average Comedy

Sid Saylor puts all he’s got into a number of gags that make this a fair-good entertainment. Here we see him as a musical mother’s-boy whose playing gets him into trouble with his neighbor. When he and his sweetheart are caught speeding, they offer the excuse they are on the way to a sick grandmother. Finding the arresting officer is from Missouri, they lead him to an apartment piddling around, and while the cops back is turned Sid dons female night clothes and slips the place. You can imagine what fun results.

“Traffic Troubles” Universal Time, 14 mins. Average Comedy

Charles Ruggles featured in a funny romance prompted by two couples who are apartment neighbors. Everybody gets fighting drunk, whereupon they bat each other around and play havoc with the furniture. Sure-fire comedy in any crowd.

THE Setting Son” RKO Time, 19 mins. Plenty Funny

Taking the theme of “where there’s a will there’s a way” to extremes, “The Setting Son” has produced another load of humorous entertainment.

With an old duffer apparently being about to die, his butler notifies all the relations. They fly through the scene and start right in scrambling over the expected will, winding up by everybody grabbing something for himself and even taking away the bed from under the sick man. Cocks hold.

Good comedy with wide appeal. This time Our Gang goes on a camping trip. The children happen to pick a spot close to the hideout of a pair of criminals. Afraid that the proximity of the youngsters might endanger their freedom the men decide to frighten them away. One of them disguises himself as a gorilla but makes the mistake of walking in bear trap. It is a situation that gives the little actors plenty of opportunity to show their stuff. Extremely well done.

Oswald in “Broadway Folly” Universal Time, 7 mins. Good Animated Fun

This time Oswald faces some fancy stepping in a cabaret. In steps the villainous bear, who gives him a rumble of trouble. The little girl, very much like the daughter, in “Ten Nights in a Barroom,” goes looking for dad in the hope of reclaiming him from demon run. Oswald again shows himself as an accomplished musician in this one.

“The Voice of Hollywood” Tiffany Time, 14 mins. Tid-Bits from Stars

“The Sleeping Cutie” RKO Time, 18 mins. Comedy Riot

A Larry Dixon fan fest of the first order. Albert Salmi and Al Cooke featured. A society lad takes a shine to the girl, who belongs to a family of acrobats, and invites her to his home to meet the parents. Her whole family follows, in mischief. The stunt is based on their acrobatic repertoire before the astonished drawing room crowd. Packer.

National Theater Co. Markets Arc Lamp for Wide Screens
Seattle—To meet the demands for more light in connection with the use of larger screens and the proportionate apertures, the J. E. McAuley Mfg. Co., one of the units of General Theater Equipment Co., is marketing through National Theater Supply Co., a new model Peerless high intensity reflector type lamp.

The new lamp, it is said, is produced under patents controlled by the General Electric Co. and pertains to chemically treated carbons, which are a requisite for the production of light of high intensity. In addition to giving a steel blue white light, the lamp is designed to use a positive carbon treated with chemicals and 20 inches in length.

Besides being operated automatically, the carbons are fed at the required rate by an automatic arc control with separate adjustable regulations of the negative as well as positive carbons. The automatic arc control is mounted at the side of the lamphouse and is supported by a separate casting where it is not subjected to variations in temperature.

AND THAT'S THAT

By PHIL M. DALY

As we watched the mob watching Harry Richman trying to squeeze through to his nifty Rollis-Whatchacall after the soup-and-fish premiere of "Puttin' on the Ritz" at the Orpheum, we decided like the after-dinner speakers, of a story. Only this one has never been told before. There is an automobile company with a press agent who is as clever and resourceful as the film exploiters responsible for those spotlighted arrowhead moaners on premiere nights.

This p. a. who apparently had survived a few film openings himself, fixed it up for his company to donate a slick new bus for the use of a much liked male flicker star in attending the premiere of one of his pictures.

After the show an eager and irresistible army of worshipers closed in on the picture hero and all but carried him to the shiny gas buggy that awaited without. Before entering the car, the luminary paused and made a little speech of thanks, winding up with, "...I'll always remember this happy event, and any time you come to Hollywood be sure to look me up and anything that I have is yours. Cheers and bravos broke forth. "He sez that anything he has is ours," somebody shouted. "Let's go!" The souvenir collectors took the cue at once.

A husky lad yanked off one of the spare tires. Somebody else followed suit until all the tires were gone. Then the stronger boys let loose and in less than a minute the car was minus fenders, running boards, bumpers, rumble seat, repair chest, hood cover and even part of its top.

Next day the star personally called on the auto firm to square up the damage resulting from his popularity. The p. a. laughed it off.

"You don't owe us anything," said the smart lad. "I knew just what would happen, and every one of the parts that were carted away is labeled to the effect that, for so much, the holder can get the remaining parts to make a complete car!"

The Mirror
—a column of comment

ONLY ONE THEATER on that ex-cow path known as Broadway is housing a legit show. Which is simply another way of writing that 20-odd thousands are going to legitimate pictures and that the legitimate stage, which had begun to seriously lose its grip on the Main Stem proper five years or so back, has now been shoved back into the side-street area. The once-obscure picture house, which struggled along under the label of nickelodeon and shooting gallery, now is the cathedral of the world's greatest playstreet.

PLUGGING ITS portable reproducer, RCA Photophone is about to "embark with concerted effort" in the educational and industrial field. This objective is bound to increasingly become the destination of every sound equipment distributor. With the cream of the theatrical houses gobbled up by the initial sound-installation offensives, this market now looms as a veritable land of promise—practically untouched by new-era motion picture production. It's going to be interesting to watch the sprint.

THE INDUSTRY is extending every effort to exterminate fake film schools and other fraudulent schemes, says Gov. Miliken. Alertness on the part of the Hays forces and other mediums has substantially decreased petty racketeering. The industry is determined to keep its face washed.

Short Shots from New York Studios

BY HARRY N. BLAIR

ARTHUR COZINE of the Paramount Long Island studios, is in training to get back the figure which graced the screen when he was Vitagraph's leading juvenile.

Rudy Vallee sent a telegraphic invitation to all employees of the Paramount studios to attend his Valentine party, given Friday afternoon, at the Brooklyn Paramount theater.

The ultimate in extremes was won via the last week at the Paramount Long Island studios where a speak-easy scene was on the set adjoining that showing the interior of a girl's finishing school. Both are part of the action in "Young Man of Manhattan," which Monta Bell is directing.

Shilton, Wis.—Remodeling operations are under way at the Princess here. Ray Pfieffer, manager, announced that work will be completed by March 1, when the house will open with sound.

Cleveland—Gordon C. Rowley, district manager for General Talking Pictures has resigned and will spend three months at Daytona, Fla.

Owosso, Mich.—The Lincoln has been sold to J. M. Tarbush by H. H. Chase.

San Francisco—Joe Bauer is again associated with the Wigram, now known as the Broadway, city managing the theater when it was housed in a tent after the earthquake in 1906.

Findlay, O.—Theaters were opened here last Sunday for the first time in many years when John Harris led the way by opening the Harris.

Appleton, Wis.—The Majestic permanently closed its doors, Carl Beglinger, manager of the house for the past 15 years, announces.

San Antonio—Two manager changes in the Publix ranks have been announced. R. R. Allison, former manager of the Aztec here now is manager of the Alamo while Floyd Smith, who managed the Melba, Dalas, has assumed charge of the Aztec.

Racine, Wis.—Recent reports that the Capitol and Uptown here were purchased by L. K. Brin have been denied. E. L. Wiesman, connected with the Celebrated Film Exchange, Milwaukee, is the new owner of both houses.

WINCHESTER, MASS.—A warrant has been drawn up for the local annual meeting on March 3, which, if passed, would authorize the licensing of a picture theater here. Eight years ago a similar proposal was defeated after a hot contest and several unsuccessful efforts have been made since to renew the discussion.

Wakefield, Mass.—A referendum will be held here March 10 to decide whether to permit Sunday showing at local theaters.

New York

Sam Goldstein has taken over the Westwood, Westwood, N. J.

BUFFALO—Columbia branch here has moved to the Film Building at 505 Pearl St., where it now occupies the first floor and basement.

Foreign

Paris—Gaumont recently gave a demonstration of their sound-on-film and disc reproducing equipment here. Its interchangeability, it was claimed, was demonstrated through projection of sound pictures recorded by different processes. Included were Movietone, Vitaphone, RCA Photophone, Tobis-Klangfilm, and Gaumont.

Joinville, France—Pierre Colombier is working on a musical comedy, "Radieux-Concert" for Pathé-Nathan. Following him, Maurice Touneur and then Jacques de Baronne will occupy the Joinville studios.

Paris—Marco de Gastyn and Maurice Touneur have started work on two talking features at the Joinville studios. RCA recording will be used.

United States

San Francisco—Judge Edward I. Butler has issued a temporary order restraining Victor Becker, city building inspector, and Carl Sigard from razing the California M. P. Company Studio. Backer and Sigard were summoned to appear before Judge Butler to answer charges brought by Beatrice Michelena and George Middelley.

"Lummox" United Artists

EXaminer—There is little that is commonplace about "Lummox," and not much of it is real, but it is so deftly directed by Herbert Brenon that once you are conscious of it, there is a reality about the whole production that one seldom finds in a movie. One of the most unusual picture entertainments, well played, well directed and truly well worth seeing.

Express—* * * the tale is consistent and moving as a probable slice of life. A fine sincerity on the part of director and players is evident throughout, leaving its impress on the entire production.

Herald—A moving quality of pathos runs through "Lummox" and will make this film a success, especially with feminine audiences. It is true that Herbert Brenon has not caught the simple power of Fanny Hurst's novel, but he has imbued the picture at the United Artists with the emotional appeal that is characteristic of his direction.

Record—An ambitious thing has been attempted by Herbert Brenon in making a screen play of the novel, "Lummox." That the film is not wholly successful, makes his attempt at a hardy character study none the less a hopeful sign that the studios are trying to grow up. * * * not a film that will make history, but it is an interesting attempt at a difficult screen subject.

Times—There is no promise of customary entertainment in "Lummox." There is not assurance even of an adequately produced technically, but there is a heart, at least, to the unfolding of the story that bears searching out, and that will perhaps appeal to many who see the tragic impression of the pitiful experiences of a woman who travels a hard road of sorrow, rather haltingly, and there is little or no dramatic action.

Calls for Fair Play to Keep Industry From Ruin

The entire structure of this industry is threatened unless reasoning, honesty, common sense and business decency combine themselves and rule; all of these virtues are called, setting themselves in exhibitor, distributor and salesman. A wholesale disregard of Amusement and not buying exhibitors, a return to trickery and false promises by salesmen, a violation of protection stipulations and other obligations by exchange managers and the industry will be entangled once again in the mire and murk which it has pretty well escaped. A contract is a contract! It is a word of honor—in written! Producers, who since this contract was made and accepted by them, having had better offers from competitive exhibitors, may seize upon the Thacher decree as a loophole to violate their written word of honor and obtain the higher prices exhibitors, having decided they paid too much and could now buy elsewhere for less, may think they are gaining an advantage to breach their contracts with one company to favor another; salesmen, who are too busy doing business, may feel they now will not be overloading exhibitors with pictures when they "can so easily evade meeting playdate requirements"—all of the old unfair, unscrupulous, unsavory business trickeries, which have been a blot on this industry in years past loom up again.

Ben Shlyen in "Movie Age"

Good Films Are Basis of Industry's Prosperity

The fortunes of the whole trade depend upon the quality of the pictures. All the press luncheons in the world, all the quotas and the contingents, all the kicks at the Exposition will mean nothing without pictures. However, all the shows and publicizing of our productions, all the kowtowing to the lay press for favorable mention—all is as nought compared with quality pictures.

By PHIL M. DALY

EDDIE QUILLAN, not to be outdone by those crossword puzzle and anagram boys, has started a little game of his own called "Juggled Slogans." He sends us a batch, from which we quote a few:

"Children Cry for It!"—Borden's Milk
"Good to the Last Drop!"—Irvin Parachute
"No Meat Can Touch You!"—Harding Cinnamon
"One to Retire!"—Big Ben Alarm Clock

After that last one, we didn't have the heart to read any further. If those Hollywooders use alarm clocks to put themselves to sleep, what size cannons do they explode to notify themselves that morning was come?

A Little from "Lots"

Hollywood

Known chiefly as a director of comedy productions, Leo Mc- Carey will turn his attention to tension drama. He will direct "Road House" for Fox. He recently completed "Let's Go Native," a musical extravaganza for Paramount. The comedies, "The Sophomore" and "Red Hot Rythms," have attracted much attention. So pleased were Paramount executives with "Let's Go Native," that they made him an offer to journey to New York to direct a musical. He preferred to prove his ability as a director of drama.

Tracing "leaks" in the voice recording system is one of the pleasant diversions brought to the movies by the coming of talking pictures. Another nagging noise picked up by the microphones on "Raffles" puzzled the technicians. Ronald Colman defended the door of his portable dressing room.

-AND THAT'S THAT
By PHIL M. DALY

Any film player will tell you that the best scenes in his pictures are the ones that get the cheers. And you will believe him even when you hear about Harry Richman's favorite scenes, which, Harry says, were cut from "Pattin' on the Ritz."

It seems that Harry and the new-met girl friend, Joan Bennett, had reached the goo-goo-eyes stage. Not having any faith in amusement resort circulars, they made personal trip to the Niagara Falls to see if the place would be all right for a honeymoon but being winter, they decided to stay only a week and a half. While sitting on the shore, Canadian side, they spied John Barrymore coming down the rapids in his canoe. Suddenly noticing the falls ahead, John ordered Dolores alt to man the reverse wheels. But she pressed the wrong button and at that moment a strong wind came along, lifted the boat right off the water, and landed it kerplunk beside Harry and Joan, the impact causing these two to bounce up and into the rippling brook. But they were lucky enough to land in a barrel used by daredevils in going over the falls, so they made bottom as smoothly as rolling off the Chrysler Hill. As they hit the lower level, Harry and Joan heard high swears in the distance. At first it sounded like Annie Lightner warbling her bathtub number, but with the aid of binoculars Harry found that it was Al Jolson, sitting astride "The Maid of the Mist," a thing with auburn hair and yodeling "Sonny Boy." Harry took off his wide trousers and by holding them aloft in the direct path of Al's voice, the barrel was waited to the leeward shore. There Harry and Joan found Joseph M. Schenck sitting under a parasimon tree beating the Publicity unit's off of Adolph Zukor at pinhole. Going over behind Mr. Schenck's left shoulder, Harry exclaimed, "Hello, uncle, here we are. We just finished our big scene. Oh, uncle, what a big bunch of hearts you have!" At that moment Mr. Zukor trumped Mr. Schenck's Ace. Mr. Schenck turned to Harry and said, "Oh, yeah, Mr. Gleason! So you're here, are you? And you just finished your big scene, did you? Well, get yourself right away from here again. And the big scene is out!"

Hudson Bill Would Class Films as Public Utility
Washington Bureau of THE FILM DAILY

Washington—Under his anticipated bill, just introduced in Congress and calling for the creation of a Federal motion picture commission, Representative Hudson, of Michigan, asserts that the film industry is a public utility and therefore subject to the same kind of regulation.

Hudson's proposed commission, to be composed of five men and four women, would be empowered to prohibit practices and monopoly, provide for the just settlement of trade complaints, supervise the production of silent and talking pictures and provide for the proper distribution and exhibition, with special reference to the prevention of block booking.

The legislation is regarded by film men as censorship pure and simple, since the commission would license pictures for exhibition and would withhold licenses from pictures carrying scenes of crime, sex appeal, murder, mayhem, bloodshed or most anything else.

Valeska Surat took the witness stand before Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman yesterday in connection with her suit charging plagiarism in the Cecil De Mille production, "King of Kings." The only defendants remaining are Will H. Hays and his organization, represented at the trial by Arthur Weil.

New Fox Financing Plan To Be Submitted by Bankers Today

issued and the remaining funds necessary to meet Fox obligations would be obtained from the sale of a new common stock to the banking group. It is understood that the Halsey, Stuart proposal may bring a counter plan from the Bancamerica-Blair group, inasmuch as Fox has expressed himself as unwilling to enter into any agreement with the Halsey, Stuart interests. This will result in the refinancing proposition being placed on a competitive basis, with the final plans being put up to the stockholders at the meeting called for March 5.

It also was learned yesterday that a group of Class A stockholders had formed a compromise committee which is in favor of the Fox plan backed by Bancamerica-Blair, Lehman and Dillon, Read. This committee consists of Morton Stern, of J. S. Bache & Co., James M. Beck, former solicitor general; Louis Horowitz, chairman of the Kinder Morgan oil company; Arthur Eisele, former banker; Herbert Fleischacker, San Francisco banker; J. L. and Dryden Kuser, stockholders; Frank M. Dick, of E. F. Hutton & Co.; E. A. Pierce, of F. W. Morgan & Co.

Chief difference in the new $40,000,000 plan and the one already discussed in court is that the latter requires the issuance of $65,000,000 in new securities, in addition to selling 1,000,000 shares of new common stock provided for under rights attached to the $40,000,000 debentures. Conversion of the $25,000,000 preferred stock also would require 1,250,000 additional shares of common. Then there is the block of 200,000 shares to be issued to the underwriting syndicate.

This, with the present stock, would result in the company having approximately 3,450,000 shares of common stock outstanding. On the basis of earnings as currently reported, estimated at $16,875,000 for the entire fiscal year, the balance for the common, after subtracting the 20% as the required sinking fund and $1,400,000 interest for debentures, would be around $4 a share, according to the Wall Street statisticians.

AND THAT’S THAT

by PHIL M. DALY

WHILE digging up data on the original Floradora Sextette, which figures in his forthcoming production of “The Gay Nineties,” Harry Beaumont came across some enlightening facts about the moral requirements and restrictions imposed upon the famous troupe of 30 years ago.

“Get a load of this, girls,” said Harry, calling to Marion Davies, Patricia Caron, Ilka Chase, Vivienne Oakman, Lillian Bushman and Ethel Sykes, who are to make up the 1930 counterpart of the celebrated six.

“In signing the original Floradora bouquet, the Shuberts stipulated in their contracts that the girls must not encourage, contract for or engage in any marriage during their engagements, that they must not accept attentions from stagedoor Johnnies, nor attend any wild parties lasting till early in the morning; and that, should any of the girls show the least sign of dissipation, her contract would be null and void.”

“So you see, girls,” said Harry in concluding his bedtime story, “the moral is that it pays to be good.”

Los Angeles—"The greatest handicap of the camera," said William Cameron Menzies in a talk to students of the Otis Art Institute, "is that it does not photograph as the mind sees. Hence, if a picturesque European street is to be reproduced, it is better to substitute a cut for the impression of that street as the mind sees it, slightly over-romanticized, simplified and over-textured."

Growing Pains

—the past year of progress

By JACK ALICOKE

IT MIGHT SEEM like an old bromide but if you'll tarry but a minute and look at the accomplishments of the last twelve months you will be led to the inevitable conclusion that 1930 was by far the most eventful year in the history of the motion picture industry. If you don't think this little old biz had a few worries last year get out the old red pencil and check off the following aches and pains:

—SOUND and the transition of sound and dialogue pictures from the novelty stage to that of intrinsic worth as entertainment.

—THE DE-FILM, which is decided step forward. Coming along quickly but held back because every company has a different idea as to size of film and system to be used.

—COLOR has added immeasurably to production but it has been hampered by coming along too fast. It is here to stay and from now on should be considerably improved.

—TELEVISION. Rather a dark horse but being watched most carefully by the big boys of each company. If it should sneak in unexpectedly it might upset some apple carts.

—MULTI-LINGUAL films. Here is the answer to the foreign situation and is now on the road to intelligible solution at Coast studios.

—DOUBLE PROCESS sound film such as used at the Astor for "The Rogue Song." Picture on one pit of film and sound on another. May be the answer to better reproduction.

—ACOUSTICS are now the most important single element in the theater. Great strides have been made in the past few months. Some revo-utionary innovations coming along,

—ADD to this the Thacher decree, the breakdown of arbitration, the new censorship problems and the foreign quota situation, and you'll have at least a Zeppelin view of what the motion picture business has had to think about in the way of major problems in one short year.

The Fastest Growing Newsreel in This Big and Beautiful World!

No. 680 Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation

UNIVERSAL'S TALKING NEWSREEL, IN WHICH THE VOICE of Graham McNamee rings 'round the world, is like a snowball rolling down hill.

NOT ONLY IS IT GAINING IN MOMENTUM BUT IT IS GROWING larger and fatter and happier with every issue.

CONTRACTS ARE POURING IN AT SUCH A RATE THAT our contract department is slightly goggle-eyed.

LIKE EVERYTHING NEW AND CLEVER, IT STARTED SOMEWHAT slowly. Strangely enough, it was the smaller theatres which first discovered its audience possibilities.

AND THEN THE BUYERS FOR BIGGER HOUSES FELT THAT electric thrill which accompanies every success in this funny business of ours —and they bought. At first they just nibbled at it.

THEN SUDDENLY THE WHOLE BUSINESS MAP BROKE out in a rash of contracts. Every Universal office began to shoot contracts in hand over fist until it looked as though we might run out of dotted lines.

THE DIGNIFIED AND STATELY NEWSPAPER CRITICS who seldom deign to notice anything shorter than a super-feature, began to do a little deigning.

WITH UPLIFTED EYEBROWS THE Highbrows of the press said, "what is this thing that has come upon us? Who got up this new idea? My word, it's actually entertaining."

MR. AND MRS. JOHN W. PUBLIC HAD BEEN CLAPPING their hands even before this. And when Mr. and Mrs. Public actually smack their hands together to applaud any movie, you've got something.

EVERYBODY LIKES IT! NOBODY CRITICIZES IT!

MAYBE IT'S AS GOOD AS EVERYBODY THINKS IT IS.

POSSIBLY YOU OUGHT TO HAVE IT FOR YOUR THEATRE if your competitor hasn't beaten you to it, the dirty villain!
All New York Applauds

"A best seller among movies. Has a breadth and life that no stage could attain. It takes lease upon the Criterion for a protracted residence."
—New York Evening World

"Glamorous and melodious, beautiful and stirring. The Technicolor work rivals anything of its kind."

NEW SHOW WORLD
ON a distant view, the coming art of talking pictures is one of the important events in the general history of aesthetics. A rather unusual mental adjustment is necessary before such things—the American civilization as a whole, socially, culturally, from the life in its small pioneer towns to its constantly evolving code of laws, has suffered much from the peculiarly incurable stupidity of wrong standards of criticism. For, marvelous as the whole spectacle certainly is, even when it is unjustly measured beside the more static condition of ancient countries, yet it is but the stone age, as it were, of a new and unheard of civilization yet to be. The cinema industry is only the stone age of a new art, which will assuredly grow into one of the divine consolations of human life one day.

Sound Affects Screen
Players Variously, Star Says

DOES the voice affect screen personalities? To that I must give the conservative answer, Yes and no! There are some motion picture personalities that have splendidly withstood the ravages of audibility. Others have gained strength because of it, and still others have suffered by having themselves heard. The talking screen, though no longer novel, must still be handled discreetly. Certain actors in certain roles will achieve greater success and its attendant popularity by gauging their voices in accordance with characterization. But there are certain stories and characterizations which should remain untouched by the almost cruel realism of the reproduced voice.

AND THAT'S THAT

IN his weekly compilation of "I Never Knew Till Now" facts, Walter (Daily Mirror) Winchell informs his readers that "the so-called grandeur film is a standard size film shown through a special lens."

And among the things We never knew till now are:

That the Roxy plays Mutual burlesque and silent film.

That the reason Sam Goldwyn goes to Europe so often is because he likes the boat ride.

That no member of the M.P. Club ever fails to see that his guest register in the book provided for that purpose.

That Warner Bros. leased the Winter Garden only because they could not get Madison Square Garden.

That producers always get back the production cost on pictures given $2 Broadway runs, so that all subsequent receipts from these films are gravy.

That Harry Warner and Al Lichtman went to Cuba for their winter vacation because they like to hold Spanish conversation.

That Alexander Gray went talker because, after three seasons on tour in "Desert Song," he figured the pictures as his only avenue back to Broadway.

That the milkmen are responsible for the success of midnight performances in New York.

And that theater managers always feel sorry when crowds have to stand in line for a long time to see their shows.

"I hear that Hal Roach, after being out riding his polo ponies all afternoon, doesn't care much about sitting down to a bridge game in the evening."

"If he doesn't like bridge, why doesn't he try casino?"

In your interest I ask that you care fully and lengthily consider the claim that you give your earnest consideration.

I am desirous to return to you in answer to this stream of propaganda by which it is being sought to change the minds of the subscribers to the purchase of the Loew stock and to be an object of the government for the purchase of the Loew stock and I hereby offer to take the purchase of the Loew assets.

The new 260,000 additional shares of Loew stock, which gives the Theater Corporation over 600,000 of the 1,541,990 Loew stock outstanding, I was not only unwilling but I am convinced that the government would not object to an event such as this. I offer to take the purchase of the Loew assets.

Musicians and Stagehands
Out in Gary, Ind., Strike

Gary, Ind.—Local union musicians walked out at the Gary here yesterday when stagehands at that house refused to accept salary reductions and non-union stagehands were employed. MEASURING BY MAGIC

There are measurements in Bell & Howell cinematography so infinitesimal that no micrometer or other mechanical measuring device can readily define them. These measurements are made by optical projection, which, through great magnification, reproduces on a screen, in proportions visible to the eye, the spaces to be measured.

It may be asked by many: What is the need for this precision? But the distributing exchange, the exhibitor and the man in the projection booth immediately comprehend. For the precision of the Bell & Howell Film Perforator, or Splicer, or Printer through which the film passes on its way to the theater comes home at last to the projection booth—perfect screening.

While these machines have played a hero’s part in the standardization of the film industry, it is their day-by-day service in behalf of the best final projection which bespeaks their accuracy and their dependability.

Movies • by Harry Evans

The Answer to Poor Talkies

This Department recently received a bitter complaint from a man who said he had gone to see "Bulldog Drummond" on our recommendation and had walked out of the theatre because he could not understand more than half of the dialogue. He added that he had also registered his grievance with the manager of the theatre in the hope that the house would stop showing these "terrible talkies" and return to silent films.

The gentleman in question lives in a small town and, checking back, we find that most of the complaints we have heard against the talkies have come from people in small communities. This point is important, because the future of the talkies depends upon the success with which they can be shown in rural theatres, and if the excellent sound recording that features "Bulldog Drummond" becomes a jumble of unintelligible noises when shown in a small town theatre, the talkies will never be successful.

To investigate this situation, we visited several movie houses on a recent trip to Florida, and in a town of less than fifteen thousand inhabitants we found the answer. There are two theatres in this town. The pictures on display during our visit had recently been shown in New York, and the critics had been unanimous in declaring the recording good in both films. In the first theatre the dialogue and sound effects were reproduced as clearly and effectively as we have heard in any New York house, but in the second theatre the reproducing was not at all satisfactory. The machines used in the two houses were similar types (sound-on-disc, in which phonographic records are used) but they differed greatly in one respect: namely, the manufacturer. The first house was equipped with standard Western Electric sound apparatus ... the second with one of those cheap, unproven makes of reproducing outfits that have been appearing on the market by the dozens recently. In a desire to save a few hundred dollars, theatre owners in small towns (and some of the larger ones) are installing these cheap make-shift machines, and consequently losing thousands of dollars in patronage, as well as giving the talkies a bad name.

The remedy is simple. The theatre owners should do more intensive thinking and manufacturers of standard talkie equipment should do more intensive selling.

Five Musicals on the Way from United Artists

“Be Yourself” Heads List of Song and Dance Productions

As a follow up to the Harry Richman vehicle, “Puttin’ on the Ritz,” United Artists has five more musical productions on the way. The first of these is “Be Yourself,” starring Fanny Brice, with Harry Green and Robert Armstrong in the supporting cast. Thornton Freeland directed the piece, which is an original by Joseph Jackson and has songs by William Rose, Paul Tobias, and Bernard MacDonald. Jesse Greer and Ralph Rainier. This production, already completed and ready for national release, will have its New York showing at the Rialto, following the running of “Street of Chance.”

Other United Artists musicals to follow are:

Sees Agreement

“All we can say at present is that our sub-committee of the standards committee is working hard and prospects of agreement with com-mittee members on dimensional standards of wide film are extremely encouraging,” said President J. I. Crabtree of the S. M. P. E. in a wire to THE FILM DAILY from Rochester, Minn. The sub-committee met on the subject the previous day.

NEWSPAPER OPINIONS

"Anna Christie" M-G-M

Criterions—Los Angeles

EXAMINER—The entire erudite for the success of "Anna Christie" by no means falls into the basis of one of its great players. Very few actresses have ever had a finer supporting cast. "Anna Christie" is more restrained in mood than was O'Neill's play, still it is heavy in its realism. One respects the direction and the acting.

RECORD—There was no need to worry. Garbo portrays "Anna Christie" with a masterful act. There is little that distinguishes her on the talking screen. A notable good point helps the picture make one of the fine productions of the season Clarence Brown's direction is a somber show, but one of the finest made for the screen. Garbo is one of the few actresses who adds distinctly but her artistry stature by her first talking picture it is hard to go, by any means.

TIMES—"Anna Christie," an exceptional picture. It is made exceptional by exceedingly fine direction. It is rendered doubly significant by the presence of a luminous and costly cast. Its effectiveness is heightened by the presence of Garbo herself. It is a film, a place among the most artistic so far made in the sound medium. It has been done without much discrimination, taste and a remarkable primal vigor that has been photographed in splendid style.

"Clancy in Wall Street" Fox

Boulevard, Los Angeles

EXAMINER—Mr. Exley's popular farce was distorted mirrork with toward Garbo's remarks made by the character of the picture as interpreted by Charles Murray and Lucien Littlefield.

RECORD—"Clancy in Wall Street" has been delinquent. This was the first picture purposely and very well directed by the late Ted Wilde, "Clancy in Wall Street" stirs memories of many similar plots of quarrelsome partners who are separated and reunited by bonds that prosperity or adversity cannot sever.

TIMES—"Clancy in Wall Street" is a very amusing and cleverly written farce that will be enjoyed by many people.

HERALD—"Clancy in Wall Street" is a very funny in a number of places. The picture is only spoiled by the present by the inclusion of a few quite stale gags. As a whole "Clancy in Wall Street" is a piece of entertainment, yet when all is over the audience will have enjoyed its time.

RECORD—Charley Murray, he of the funny face and rich voice, is in this play. His voice could be better, but his comedy lines and facial contortions make up for that. "Clancy in Wall Street" has been well directed and is a first class comedy.

TIMES—True collocation of characters carries the interest of the film through to the end with Charles Murray and Lucien Littlefield, as the Irishman and Scotchman respectively. Both men are happily cast and provide humor with a dash of pathos to suit the taste of anyone.

Making Way for New Warner House Milwaukee, Wis.—Dismantling of the old house completed. The new Swimming Pool will be ready for the new Warner $1,000,000. The house was Milwaukee's leading downtown theater.

"Green Goddess" Warner

Winter Garden, New York

AMERICAN—The talking picture adaptation of "The Green Goddess" will be more, more, more, more, tenderly, more, tensely gripping than its predecessor, more breathtaking, more mesmerizing, sweeter, sweeter, sweeter, sweeter, sweeter, sweeter. SELSON—"Green Goddess," enterprising melodrama, not nearly as good as "Disraeli," but is being quite favorably received.

DAILY NEWS—"Green Goddess" has action, drama, perfect portraits as good as new, because it has an everlasting audience allure—but, most enlarged version of the beautiful story. WASHINGTON—It can be safely said that the Archer drama plays a great show and that the Archer performances are very good. The Archer love story, consisting of the plot, is handled very carefully to the formation of the stage play.

NEW YORK TELEGRAPH—"Green Goddess" bears closest resemblance, naturally, to the original William S. Hart version, of which the dialogue has been preserved virtually intact. But the Archer's craggy villainous characterization is so improved that it is excitingly new. For one thing there is much talk of the film. Archer is a star in a way, thus combining the Archer's virtuosity with the Archer's familiarity, the Archer's character is new and exciting.

SUN—"Green Goddess" is excellent and enlarged edition of the play—and far superior as an entertainment to its silent picture counterpart. It is, though, Mr. Archer's personality, technical and general pungency that makes "The Green Goddess" one of the best efforts of the entrancing assembles.

TELEGRAM—"Green Goddess" is largely a photograph of a story that seems to be as well known by the audience as it is by the audience. When it does combine the cinema and the stage play it is very clever indeed and results in "The Green Goddess" emerging from the talking picture with scarcely a flaw in it.

TIMES—"Green Goddess" does not go in any way measure up to "Disraeli," but it is a superior piece of escapist playing. As it is with speech and other sounds, it is possible whether this current edition of Mr. Archer's craggy melodrama can vie with the archer.

WORLD—Another of those easy and lettered affairs that is as long as the Vitaphone version of the old stage play, "The Green Goddess." So far as eye can see or ear detect, no finer, more sumptuous and sinister treatment could by any stretch of the imagination be bestowed upon the part.

Take Over Norwood (Minn.) House Norwood, Minn.—Herbert and Victor Lindert and Roy Clay have taken possession of the Crystal, where they will show pictures twice weekly.

Talkers for Conde, D. Conde, S. D.—Conde Amusement Co. has been formed here to lease the local theater, which is being wired for talking pictures.

AND THAT'S THAT
By Phil M. Daly

HY DAAB and Sam Warshawsky, in an off moment, were trying to figure out that Pathe Christmas clock, which is charted so you can tell the time in any part of the world if you know the combination.

"Just think," said Hy, who always received A-plus in mathematics when he went to school, "here we are right in the middle of our hard-working day, while out in Galoopland the natives are still asleep."

"Is that a fact?" exclaimed Sam, who never cared much for geography.

"Sure. They sleep while we work." "The lazy bums!"

A picture player, who never has been known to shortchange in his opinion of himself and his popularity, crashed a performance of "The Vagabond King" at the Criterion a few days ago. Going up to an acquisition, he either Tammany Young or his double, the actor declared:

"What's the use of being a celebraty? They wouldn't even let me in here until I told them who I was?"

"Oh, yeah?" said the friend, nonchallantly lighting a Murad. "And who did you tell them you were?"

Since John G. Paine and his Society of Composers organization routed the racketeers who have been pirating copyright music and peddling it on the streets, the hawkers have taken to selling nickel sheets of humorous material known as "Scotch jokes." Must be the kind of jokes that are "continued in the next edition."

Erin La Bissoniere, who speaks five languages and appears as a maid in Fox's "Double Cross Roads," never allows herself to worry over the fact that she cannot serve coffee in more than one language at a time.

RED RYLE, make-up chief at the Fox studios on Tenth Ave., sprung a surprise on his associates when he returned from a trip down South with a brand new blushing bride. The little lady’s name is Lucille Keifer and she hails from Georgia, where they grow the peaches.

Ed. Cordner, location manager at the Paramount Long Island studios, leaves today for an indefinite visit to the West Coast.

The weather man gave the “Dangerous Nan McGrew” unit a good break when he staged a real old-fashioned snowstorm last Saturday. As soon as the snow had settled, Mal St. Clair moved his company out on the Paramount lot where, with the aid of the scenic department, a section of the Canadian woods soon arose, boiling off the snow for Helen Kane and Stuart Erwin to walk about in.

M. S. Benthom, through whose offices many players have been started on a successful screen career, will leave for the Coast next week to close up several deals now impending there.

Herbert Copelan, manager of the Brooklyn Strand theater, last week paid a visit to his old friends at the Warner Vitaphone studio, where he was an assistant director before deciding to enter the theater end of the business.

When, after an absence of over one year, Eddie Buzzell had an opportunity to call Murray Roth at the Warner Vitaphone studio, he was surprised to have the studio operator recognize his voice. Hidden away in the telephone room on the lower floor of the studio, Marita Sweeney, who has been at the job for five years, although denied a sight of the players, has come to recognize them by the sound of their voices.

The performance of Charles Ruggles as “you’ve guessed it” a slightly tipsy reporter, in “Road House Nights,” won a place among the best of the month in the listing given in the current issue of Photoplay. This Hobart Henley production of the Long Island studios, will be shown at the Paramount next week.

MacKenzie Ward, English stage actor, has been given a contract by M-G-M, through Mike Conley, of the M. S. Bentham offices. Ward completes the cast of production engaged for “The High Road,” which will shortly go into production at the West Coast studios.

G. EDWIN STEWART, chief recording engineer at the Paramount Long Island studios, has worked out a visual control system using colored tags on a blackboard, by means of which he can tell at a glance just which stages the sound men are operating on.

“A Russian Rhapsody” is the name of a Vitaphone Variety just completed at the Warner studios in Flatbush, under the direction of Ed. Buzzell and Stig F. Anderson, later with the Philadelphia Opera Co., and “La Paloma,” of radio fame, are featured.

The production of “Young Man of Manhattan” is going ahead at top speed under the direction of Monte Bell. The other day, with over 100 extras employed, Bell managed to shoot both the Princeton stadium and the World Series scenes, using the same crowd in each and, before Knocking off at six o’clock, also finished up that part of the action which takes place in the apartment of Shorty, played by Charles Ruggles.

Helen Broderick and Lester Crawford are the featured players in a Vitaphone Variety comedy sketch, “Nile Green,” which has just been completed. Miss Broderick, for many years a vaudeville headliner, is now appearing in “50 Million Frenchmen,” the stage musical.

Tommy Reilly, who reentered the Dempsey-Tunney championship class, has been signed by Paramount to act in the picture, “Man of Manhattan.”

Ray Foster and Ed DuPar, cameramen at the Eastern Vitaphone studio, had a clam eating contest last Tuesday, at the sea food dinner given studio employees by Eddie Buzzell, Ann Codee and Frank Orth. Ray Foster won the contest but was unable to report for work the next day.

Eddie Buzzell, upon completing the short comedy which he made independently at the Ideal studios, left for an extended vacation trip to Hayana and points south, accompanied by his wife, Oma Munson.

Frank Zucker and Charles Harper, cameramen, were assisted by Johnny Clemens and Ben Witzler in filming “Barnum Was Wrong,” the Vitaphone production. George Oskunam, formerly of the RCA Gramercy studios, was monitor man on the same picture.

First National Time, 1 hr., 6 mins. CLEVER COMEDY THAT PROVIDES MANY LAUGHS AND SHOULD PROVE GOOD POPULAR ENTERTAINMENT.

Charles L. Tanenbaum, Feb. 23, 1930

Come to this season of two ago has been made into a cokking good film comedy. Laughter has been piled on laugh, and there is no need to add that the film is a triumph. Both Cochran and Langdon sets itself from the very opening scene. It is hard to put your finger on any dull spot in the production. The picture has the advantage of a cast that is good all-around. Louise Fazenda, Loretta Young and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., particularly good work. A debater, eager to break into print, engages a young woman to commit her. Under the will of an aunt, beneficiaries will benefit only on condition that no scandal is permitted to enter the family. Naturally the young woman’s activities horrify her relatives. But the girl and boy fall in love and everything ends all right. The theme is a bold one, and the film often contains peril close to the vulgar, but it manages to recover itself just in time. This is the late Ted Wilde’s last production.

Alongside Young are Fairbanks, Jr., Louise Fazenda, Eddie Nugent, Irene Ware, Theodora Pollard, Otis Harlan, Ethel Waker. Director, Ted Wilde; Author, Sam Janney; Associate, Gene Town.

Direction, good. Photography, excellent. "Pegebine"

“Chasing Rainbows” (All-Talker)

M-G-M Time, 1 hr., 36 mins. AMUSING BACKSTAGE FARCE PECULIAR IN THEME BUT WITH ENOUGH FUN TO GIVE IT BOX-OFFICE RATING. MARIE DRESSLER A WOW.

Another backstage film. This one follows the pattern of the two predecessors pretty faithfully. This time we have the star of a musical show falling in love with one show dame after another, finally marrying one of them only to find that she is in love with another member of the company and has become his wife solely for mercenary reasons. Then comes the realization that his faithful little stage partner is Dame Fortune in disguise. How it ends is obvious. In spite of this hoary plot, however, the picture rates well as amusing farce, and we have to thank Marie Dressler chiefly. The main honors of the film are hers. She proves a scream in the role of an old trooper with a voice that is dealt unkindly. Bessie Love deserves mention for her playing of the self-conceit part.

Direction, good. Photography, excellent. "Pegebine"

“Loosening” (All-Talker)

Lone Star Time, 1 hr., 30 mins. POPULAR CHARLIE CHAPLIN PICTURE BASED ON THE COMIC STRIP.

This is a Charlie Chaplin picture, though the Chaplin dash is missing. The story is simple, the cast is good and the film is a success. The film is told through the eyes of a little girl, and this makes the story quite palatable. It is a film that will be enjoyed by all and is sure to be a hit.

Cast: Charlie Chaplin, Mary Livingstone, Roscoe Arbuckle, Kelly G. Curtis, Edna May Oliver, Myrna Loy, Beryl Mercer, Charles Winninger.

Direction, good. Photography, excellent. "Pegebine"

Some Practical Wide Film Aspects and Recommendations

If we consider a lens of 30 mm. focal length, located at infinity as the standard, the angle of a lens is the most used in actual practice for film size, and we find that:

- A 62.5 mm. (25") lens will embrace the same object space width for the image size of 48 mm. in the above standard dimension.
- A 77.2 mm. (3") lens will embrace the same object space width for the image size of 48 mm. with greater depth dimensions.

If we now take as a point of departure a 35 mm. lens as the shortest focal length lens used in actual studio practice, we find that in order to cover the same object space we shall use, for the "Economic" dimension, a lens of at least 79.9 mm. in approximate focal length, one of approximately 35 mm. focal length, and one of approximately 77.2 mm. focal length.

This brings to our attention the fact that the distance from object to camera, and in order to photograph the same object space at different focal lengths, will require the use of lenses of longer focal lengths than those in use today with the 35 mm. standard film.

The reason of the question is important in regard to the depth perspective of the sets photographed. There is no question in regard to the advantages of the various focal lengths of the short focal length, such as 35 mm., introduces an element of depth perspective into the picture, due to the perspective depth rendition of the average audience's eye. Furthermore, the use of, say, a 47 mm. lens, instead of a 35 mm., will reduce the depth perspective of the picture.

It is well known that studio picture requires all scenes pertaining to one single sequence of a talking picture be photographed with the same brand of camera, equipped with lenses of different focal lengths. The arrangement may be as follows: long shots and close-ups with a single setting of the camera, the camera depending on the size of the film, and its focal length, for all the picture records on a single sound record. The cameras equipped with the shorter focal length lenses which are used for the close-up shots, would be concerned with the width of the object than the length. The camera equipped with the lenses of longer focal length would be used for the long shots and scenes more concerned with the height than with the width.

The reason for this is quite obvious. We shall use the.cameras of our choice for the long shots, and for reasons previously exposed, lenses of a focal length greater than those in use for the 35 mm. standard will prove more adaptable in the photographing on larger area films, since they produce an image which is a better and a better relation between the size of the figures and the audience. On the other hand, it must be borne in mind that the height of the proposed wide films is either the same as that of the standard 35 mm. film or made proportionately to the increase of their width. In the former case, the width of the film strip, where only the height of the subject is to be concerned, proportionally to the increase of the width, and where the height is to be determined only by a sense of pictorial composition, lenses of the same, or nearly the same, focal length as those in use with 35 mm. film. In the latter case, we cannot ignore the practical range of local lengths used with the standard 35 mm. film varies from 25 mm. to 150 mm. In the same way the same image width in the long shot and the close-up., the picture recorded in the close-ups, lenses of the following angular focal length would be used for the larger area images:

- 47 mm. to 190 mm. for the "Economical"
- 55 mm. to 190 mm. for the "Screener"

NEW KILGEN ORGAN BEING BUILT FOR ROACH STUDIO

St. Louis—A new pipe organ of special design is being built here by the George Kilgen & Son, Inc., for the Hal Roach studios in Los Angeles. Many new tonal qualities developed by the builders and not heretofore heard in pipe organs will be embodied in the new instrument, it is claimed. Before being shipped to the studio the organ will be completely assembled in the Kilgen plant, tested and disassembled again for shipping. When the organ is installed at the studio it will be enclosed behind an ornate grille. Another organ of similar type is also under construction here for the Los Angeles Broadcasting Company.

Klein to Handle New Low Priced Disc Reproducer

Cleveland—A new low-priced disc reproducer, with pick-ups, amplifier and speakers, suitable for houses seating up to 750, and costing $675 less installation costs, is announced by A. E. Klein. Klein claims that problem of many suburban and small town exhibitors will now be solved.

Talking Shop on Wide Film

Convincing evidence is being noticed day by day that wide film developments are gradually coming into their own. Through connections, either intimate with General Theater Equipment, the Fox organization is again in an enviable position with its Grandeur process. Conclusive evidence as to its drawing power is demonstrated in the second-week engagement being accorded "Happy Days," now current at the Roxy.

Watch The S.M.P.E.

What the Society of Motion Picture Engineers is capable of doing need not be dwelled upon right now, but its intensive interests in aiding the industry to battle any so-called menace of "new developments" will all be ascertained at the next meeting of that organization in Washington on May 5-8. And among the chief topics up for discussion at that meeting will be the standardization of a wide film process.

As It Now Stands

It is known that Grandeur uses a 70 mm film, the Spoor-Berggren a 65 mm film and the present pictures are projected on the standard 35 mm. Striking a happy medium between the lot, of course taking in the expense of apparatus both as to projection machine and theater equipment, is now the task of a special committee appointed by the S.M.P.E.

More Experience Needed

Up to the present, it is hard to be completely convinced that Grandeur really does give a stereoscopic effect. It has been said that third dimension in motion pictures is as elusive as perpetual motion, but in this instance we at least have a grand start. There is no doubt that its perfection will enlarge the scope of picture entertainment, but will its cost lie within the reach of the small showman?

Three Machines at The Roxy

In order to safeguard the proper projection of Grandeur films at the Roxy, three such cameras are now installed in its booth. While each machine is reported to have cost between seven and eight thousand dollars, there was no noticeable re-construction as far as the booth was concerned. One thing is sure, picture and negative costs will increase and the exhibitor getting a reel of Grandeur by express might have to mortgage his house for the charges. Each reel, it is claimed weighs about 30 pounds.

NEW MORTON ORGAN IS INSTALLED AT "U" STUDIO

West Coast Bureau, THE FILM DAILY

Los Angeles—A Robert Morton three-manual organ built in accordance with suggestions by David Broekman, Universal musical director, has been installed at the Universal studio here for recording purposes. The organ console is connected with pipes by an electric cable with a range of 200 feet, thus the console can be moved to any position on big sound stages. In addition to being operated by electric magnets and pneumatic action, the organ has 15 sets or ranks of pipes ranging from two inches in length, with a diameter of an eighth of an inch to 16 feet with a 16 inch diameter.

While there is not much that can be called original in it, the film ought to prove fairly exciting for the younger customers. This is one of the Pioneer Kid series featuring Bobbie Nelson.

BUDDY ROGERS PEPS UP
PARAMOUNT STAGE SHOW

Anybody wanting a full explanation for the great popularity of Charles “Buddy” Rogers and the reason for his sub-title of “America’s Boy Friend” can find it this week at the Paramount. Almost every predominant show in Paramount’s current series of features has his name on it, and Paul Ash is the signal for an occasion, and when Buddy himself comes on the stage the house just about goes wild. Instead of entering through R. or L., Buddy springs a neat surprise by coming up on Jesse Crawford’s gag—entering the costume, too, as it rises from the pit. During every minute that he is on the stage, Buddy radiates personality—enthusiasm, action, joy of living and youthfulness unspoiled by quick fame. He re-enacts the scene from “Close Harmony,” displaying his versatility with various musical instruments, also sings and talks a bit. And, everything he does is so engaging that the audience is in the palm of his hand all the time. There are several other especially enjoyable items on this Jack Partington presentation, labeled “Hollywood on Broadway.” In addition to the kicky musical numbers by Paul Ash, a snappy line of patter is offered by a variety of dancing girls and a snappy set of musicians, and Paul’s “at-home” parade of a set of colored girls. There is a delightfully amusing sketch in front of a pair of miles, Larry and Thompson, colored boys display some fast and fancy footwork, and the Fred Evans Ensemble provide a nice eyeball.

STAGE SHOW AT CAPITOL

“Krazyland,” the stage revue current at the Capitol, has been given a setting that is entirely in keeping with its title. Houses are pictured at fantastic angles, and the color effects are such as a maniac might have executed. Moving against this background are a group of comics that have generally in a manner consistent with the spirit in which the whole show is reviewed. Most nonsensical of all is Herman Timberg, whose clowning provokes a gale of laughter. His chief feeder is Sammy Timberg, who is billed master of ceremonies. Barbara Blair proves another splendid foil for his comic efforts. This girl manages to be funny without carrying on in an unbecoming fashion. Leon Chazel and Oliver Harris round out the program.

SOUND AIDS SHORTS' ENTERTAINMENT VALUE
75 P. C. of Newsreel House Patrons Attend Weekly

Short Subjects

—are big little features

By Jack Alcoate

Whatever else may have happened through the coming of sound, there is one fact which stands out like the clock on the Paramount tower. The short subject has not only regained its place in the picture star, but has added no little importance to its social status in a dominant role in the wheel of the modern showman's program, by his house label of small but powerful [* * *]

I may be rather conventional to suggest that variety is the spice of life but vaudeville has been proving it since Hector was a kitten. Like other comparatively small things the short subject is easy to neglect. The making of proper shorts by the modern showman is as important as his feature play-date. Variety on your program means added safety where diversified tastes are to be considered. Short subjects offer this variety.

Some of the short subjects we have seen recently were big enough to save an otherwise mediocre bill and send the customers out talking about them. Others were bad. So bad in fact that they had no more business in a first run house than a selling platter in a steak house. Some short subjects are most important buds in the production bouquet here also, as we see it, lies the greatest room for production improvement. Here is a field as broad as the universe and as fertile as a celery bed. Some years ago we remember talk- ing to Dr. Reisenfeld on the future of shorts and he gave us enough original and practical ideas in an hour to keep an ordinary production outfit busy for a year. Still day by day we see mostly the obvious.

The Short Subject has now outgrown its talking rompers. It is a fixture and here to stay. If it is held on its feet is to keep a position of dominance in the scheme of things it must grow up like its big feature brother. Shorts are most important, fresh minds and ideas will make them so as time goes on.

Later she became famous in Mack Sennett's Keystone comedies with Charles Chaplin, and subsequently appeared as a comedy star in serious roles.

EVERETT MARSHALL, who has clicked like a million dollars with Metropolitan Opera audiences for some time, looks like an RKO find, says Bill Le Baron, now New York. Marshall is an excellent screen type as well as a baritone of high caliber, according to the Le Baron view. . . Charles Ray's in town, having closed a vaudeville tour. Now he expects to star in a new show which will benefit by his singing. Charlie's looking mighty fine, sez we.

Frank Wistack publicity light of the Hays organization, is conducting an intensive search for similies, which have to be good or else. . . . Al Wilkie, who escorts newspaper people around Paramount's Long Island workshop, where he occupies the head man's publicity chair, claims the Astoria-to-Manhattan commutation record.

Richard Barthelmess is back in town after a jaunt to Hartford, Conn. where he took part in the Psi Upsilon reunion and initiation exercises at Trinity College, his alma mater. . . . The arrival of John Bernard McAlloon at the home of John McAlloon, Pathe's assistant general manager, is the reason for that beaming smile on his genial countenance. . . . Things now are swell out in Garden City, sez John.

Joe Goldberg, big sales chief of the Columbia go-getters, is expected to hit the big city around the middle of this week. Joe sure covered some ground on this last trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer have announced the engagement of their daughter Edith to William Goetz, production executive for Corinne Griffith pictures. The date of the wedding has not been definitely determined. William, you know, is a brother to Harry M. Goetz, assistant treasurer of Paramount, and Ben Goetz, head of Consolidated Laboratories.

Paul Burger, Al Lichtman's assistant, expects to leave for the South this week on a business and pleasure trip. . . . The tip off on a New York theater showing Chinese pictures has brought to our attention the addition of another house to this category. . . . An indie exhib asks us if we can refer him to someone who has talking Roumanian pictures. Well, that's an idea for some lively producer.

"White Cargo," W. P. Film Co. Ltd. production had its premiere at the Geo. M. Cohan, N. Y. last Friday night. Capt. Harold Auten is the N. Y. representative for the company here.

AND THAT'S THAT

WHEN Richard Dix goes on a trip he generally travels incognito, using his real name, Ernest Brimmer. One day, in a Chicago hotel lobby, he bumped into a studio technician from Hollywood.

"I'm a man, fell in, died in the technical boy exclaimed spontaneously."

"Sh-h-h! Not so loud," replied Richard. "I'm here incognito as Ernest Brimmer and I don't want to be discovered. But what are you doing in this town, Bob, you old rascal?"

"Just on a little visit," said the lad. "And, by the way, better not call Bob because I'm incognito, too."

"You don't say! What name are you using?"

"Richard Dix!"

A "plant" in the Paramount audience, after watching Charles "Buddy" Rogers play a bunch of musical instruments, called to Paul Ash:

"Say, Paul, could you bring Buddy Rogers out front for a minute?"

"What for?" Paul wanted to know.

"Well, he's so handy with all those contraptions up there on the stage, maybe he can help me to start my fluffer."

"If it's true, as Ethel Barrymore declares, that the picture houses draw the public from the audience that the legitimate theater does not want, all we have to say is that the old drummer certainly has got an awful lot of unwanted children!"

SALESMAN—Really that bad? EXHIBITOR—Why, it's so bad that I fell dead in our balcony a week ago and wasn't discovered till yesterday.

Some Practical Wide Film Aspects and Recommendations

This is the third installment of "Some Practical Aspects of and Recommendations on Wide Film Stand- dards," written by S. J. A. Dubway for the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

The advantages derived from the use of a wide screen are truly enormous. Among the different questions pertaining to the home, sequence and projection, we may, however, remark that the smaller the range of focal lengths the less noticeable will be the differences in depth of focus, a characteristic of photographic objectives too well known to warrant discussion in this paper. We may also mention that in the case of a large group of focal lengths enjoyed jointly by the screen itself, the screen image will have a uniform depth, both horizontally and vertically, throughout the picture. This uniformity in the size of the screen image is of extreme practicality when comparing the various picture sizes in the picture, the more complex are the problems involved in the design of the appropriate optical system for the projection apparatus.

It is quite obvious that a greater film image area demands a greater condenser magnification. Although we believe that the "eco- nomical" dimension would permit the use of existing condensers, we want to point out that image sizes greater than this, and especially those as great or greater than the "extreme" dimension, would demand not only a complete redesign of the condenser system, but would even require a greater area of the screen face of the projection control unit in order to have the condenser system sufficient to transmit the light. This alteration would necessarily require the reconstruction of all carbon lamps and light-houses of the projection apparatus in use today.

We have briefly outlined considerations seem to confirm the inadvisability of taking into consideration extremely large screen sizes, as well as extremely large screen image areas, and seem to suggest a reduction in the accepted image magnification in preference to its increase for the film image of an area between the "Economic" or the "Spectacular."

The next installment of this article will appear in a subsequent issue of THE FILM DAILY.

75 Per Cent of Newsread Patrons Attend Weekly
Newsread has chosen the "newsreel" house as the place of entertainment because of the novelty and news value of its fare.

The success of the Embassy, according to Editor Harvey, has not been built along the lines of other exhibitors who have claimed to established exclusive newsread houses but dropped this identity in surrounding programs of cartoons, comedies etc. The Embassy's programs consist entirely of newsread. Moving pictures from the Fox Movietone, Hearst Metrotone News, etc., are shown from time to time on local entertainment.

When asked what the greatest problem of the Embassy was, Harvey replied that the crowds for the 584 seat house is larger than the house that is in charge of the house as hostess.

FOX IS DICKERING FOR NEWSREEL THEATERS

B. S. Moss Re-enters Field by Re-acquiring Colony

About 75 per cent of the customers who pay their way into the Embassy, pioneer exclusive newsreel houses, are regulars. An enlightening piece of information, this, in connection with the newest major experiment in the exhibition area. Supplement this by the statement that 50 per cent of these patrons are not dyed-in-the wool theatergoers and you have something on which to exercise your gray matter. Then you just naturally draw the conclusion that a newsreel theater, when spotted in the right place, has a niche all of its own. And that the class of trade it attracts is the old box office pal-type—not the kind that drops in annually, perhaps.

Joe Seider's exhibit forces are marshalling over in Jersey to lick a bill which would prohibit a theater from selling tickets when SRO conditions prevail. Passage of this measure would certainly mean a lot of additional woes for the theater operator and you can be sure that Jersey unit is going to train its big Berthas on the proposed legislation. It's plenty easier to induce a customer to wait for a seat after he's paid his dough at the box-office than before—when he's being trampled in a lobby crowd.

Sid Grauman is mulling over proposals to return to exhibition. Let's hope he kays one of them. The industry needs master showmen of the Grauman calibre. Again, here's hoping.

ARBITRATION FAVORED BY MAJORITY ON WEST COAST

Il’t est Coast Bureau, THE FILM DAILY
San Francisco—Based upon a survey to determine local reaction of exhibitors and distributors to Federal Judge Thacher’s decision ruling compulsory group arbitration illegal, indications point to the majority favoring the old method of settlement, according to "Film Trade Talks." The scientific records have been packed carefully and one of the most interesting jobs of packing has been that of the movie film. These have been through more hazards than any film ever before transported. They were brought down here through the tropics, kept a year in varying temperatures ranging far below zero, and have now got to go back through dampness and the tropic heat before they are developed.

To protect them against this, men worked for days soldering them into boxes, each of which contained 5,400 feet. There were more than fifty of these, more than 100,000 feet, and about 60,000 feet went back last year. These films contain a complete record of the expedition, and for that reason have been carefully wrapped and guarded. Not only were they taped in separate tins, which were taped, but these tins, each containing 200 feet, were put into special zinc boxes, which were soldered and then placed in wooden boxes lined with insulating material.

Most of the other records were packed almost as carefully, although packed almost as carefully, although packed

BRAIDLEY KING, author-scenarist, who fashioned the screen plays for "Son of the Sheik" and "Dawn River" and "Drag," is now writing the screen version and dialogue for "Road House," which will be directed by Leo Carrery, for Fox.

George O'Brien now has many new boosters in the state of Washington. While on a recent "location" trip to Mineral Wash, a lumber town, George organized a baseball team among members of his unit and his quartet faced a Mineral five. The game was a benefit affair for the school children of the town and brought spectators who knew the game and long distances to see the match. George also made a personal appearance in Tacoma, which attracted much favorable attention.

All-Talker "Rotten Trash"
To Russian Film Director

I CONSIDER the so-called ‘all talkie,’ the film with conversation from beginning to end, nothing but rotten trash. The sound part of the American and German films is a luxury, an element that has just happened to be added to them, but which has nothing to do with the films themselves.

Calls Films Prime Force
In Social Life of the World

The cinema is in the forefront of social life at the present day. It is the magical instrument of the future, and its last word will perhaps never be said, because it has infinite possibilities of development. This formidable weapon of conquest, science and knowledge is one that can either kill or cure; it may help form the chain of to-morrow or it may have its part in producing moral and physical wrecks who will be a burden to themselves and to society.

Sees Path Cleared for New Method of Settling Disputes

With the elimination of the arbitration clause from all contracts by all distributors as a result of Judge Thacher’s decree outlawing this practice, the path is cleared for a more generally satisfactory method of adjusting or settling contractual differences. Other industries have found arbitration a boon in the settlement of differences between buyer and seller. Surely there is a workable and satisfactory plan that can be applied to this industry. And, in our opinion, it is highly important to the welfare of this business that such plan be not too long in being discovered.

Dramatists' Guild Warns Members on Film Rights

Short Stops
—along cinema highway

By JACK ALICOATE

THE NOVELTY of the talkers is now history. From here on Hollywood will have to give the paying guests the real thing. Several bad production habits have already cropped up. To our way of thinking the worst is bad faking or doubling of voices. We have heard several complaints along this line lately. In these progressive days with the folks in Dodge City as wise as those along Michigan Boulevard, trying to fool the good old public is hazardous business.

AS A MATTER of mathematical precision as well as an added exhibit to our facts and figures collection it is interesting to note that the exports of motion picture films in 1929 set a new record. During the past year 282,215,480 feet of celluloid amusement was shipped across the seas. This exceeds the previous record of 1919 by about 9,000,000 feet and is a rather engaging answer to the suggestion that the talkers have ruined our foreign film trade.

THE OTHER DAY we accidentally ran into what we consider the worst form of salesmanship. We were having a friendly chat with a small town exhibitor when a film salesman, representing one of the first line companies, called. Hoping to get a line on modern film salesmanship methods we suggested to the exhibitor that he let the salesman go to work on him. The result was that the salesman spent twenty-five out of the next thirty minutes knocking his competitors and five minutes selling his own product. Knocking the other fellows product when he is not there to defend himself is not only bad salesmanship and unethical in this day and age but more often than not creating a decided distaste in the mind of the buyer for the salesman and what he represents.

Puttin' on the Ritz FIRST ACTOR—I haven't seen Joe Glare in anything since his contract with Altamount expired. What's he doing?

Lew Foster, of Darmour, upon returning to Hollywood from Agua Caliente, where he went to get some ideas for a race track picture, see he reported that he saw more than 50 directors and scenarists down there on the same mission.

Now, Lew, you certainly don't expect to get away with that. Don't you think we just as well should try to tell your friends that you went to a cottage to get the maids' for cottage pudding. So, come again.

Cameron Lenz and Celia Lloyd, of Camarise, hit Times Square yesterday in their tin lizzie for a little visit. Preliminary to embarking on a cross-country tour, during which time we expect to hear from them oft. Before pulling freight, Cam made a thorough inspection of the Roxy while Celia stood in front of the Earl Carroll and listened to the Harry Richman records. Half an hour later Cameron emerged from the theater all spruced up and smoking a cigar. "I see you found out that they have a laundry and clothes pressing department in the Roxy," said Celia. "Yes, and that isn't all I found out," replied Cam. "What else?" Celia asked. "Well, I didn't exactly see it done, but I have a hunch that the Roxy doesn't press only the uniforms every day, but also irons out all the ushers and doormen to keep them looking straight the way they do."

BROADWAY'S GREATEST $2.00 SHOW
Some Practical Wide Film Aspects and Recommendations

This is the fourth installment of "Some Practical Aspects of and Recommendations on Wide Film Standards," prepared by A. S. Howell and J. A. Dubray for the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

If this course should be decided upon, we would certainly obtain better projection in regard to photographic rendition and screen film projection, as well as improve in the problems pertaining to the development of projection standards. We wish, however, to state that we do not consider these advantages of sufficient magnitude to make the great expenditure of time and capital which would be necessary to bring about the changes necessitated by the adoption as a standard of too great a film image area.

In further consideration of the optical system of the projector, we may mention that the standard film is a specifically Formex type, and that the standard film is a projection that is losing the limit of its aberrationless covering. The standard of larger image areas would probably mean a complete departure from the standard projector as it is today, and would demand the development by opticians of projection lenses of the anamorphic type.

This apparent inevitable development in the direction of the 35.5 mm film will be greater than the standard 35 mm. It is here that the point of technical consideration, in view of the greatness of the present movement in favor of wider film, appears.

Mechanical Operations Involved in the Adoption of New Standards

In the third and last part of this paper we shall consider in more detail the dimensions and space required for the projector and other elements. We shall, in so doing, invert the order of presentation of the three sizes in the following order, first, the standard of 35.5 mm., second, the "Spectacular," and third, the "Economic."

The proposed height of the picture is 27.59 mm. for the projector aperture. The height of the camera aperture is 45.11 mm. The pitch of six perforations less a dividing spacing of 0.09 mm. is the width. The proposed width of the picture is 46.31 mm. for the camera aperture and 45.31 mm. for the standard width. The space available for the sound record is 5.08 mm. double the space available in today's 35 mm. standard film for the same purpose. The over-all width of the film is 61.31 mm.

If we consider a speed of 24 pictures per second, the speed of sound recorded per second would be 684 mm. as compared with 45 pictures per second for the standard film, or an increase of 1.5 times. It is apparent the consequence of this is that the frequency which it is possible to record on the sound track is the running speed, and therefore, to the length of the sound record which is the same as the sound track. It appears logical to suggest that the high frequency which it would be possible to record with sound record is not a sound reproduction.

The possibility of varying the width of the sound record is, if found developments in this field should require, apparent, as the record placed is outside of the sound track. With the "Economic" dimensions here proposed, the width of the picture area of the 18 x 21 cm. camera aperture is 33.55 mm. At the 35.5 x 35.5 mm film the camera aperture and 31.31 mm. for the normal. The ratio of the camera area aperture to the sum of the pitch of five standard perforations less a dividing space between picture frames 0.09 mm. with the width of the picture area is 38 mm. for the camera aperture and 35.55 mm. for the projector aperture. The pitch space and the pitch of the sound record is 3.25 mm. or a little over 25 per cent more than that of the sound record as specified in the standard film, standard over-all width of the film is 52 mm. If the width recorded will be equal to the perforations, and if we consider that all pictures printed on the standard, the length of sound record printed per second would be 370 mm. for the standard film of 35.5 mm. width, or an increase of 1.25 times.

Again, the possibility of varying the width of the sound track is great. The new developments in apparent, "Economic," and "Spectacular," and especially the first, would make such a development, considered with the necessity of bringing about entirely new developments in the different apparatuses in use in motion picture production, film processing, and exhibition.

The development of apparatus would involve complete redesigning of perforators, cameras, and all other projector machines, optical equipment, and all other minor laboratory apparatus, as well as require a reconstruction of projector units. The whole concept of wide development, which would be desired and put into execution before a considerable length of time.

The proposed dimensions fundamentally, would also present a little difficult in solving the problems pertaining to the production and the economy of maintaining the films in a perfect condition. The normal usage of film speeds is 20 ft. per minute, or 15.7 ft. per second. The "Economic" dimensions perfectly meet the sound recording and reproducing requirements of a normal development, with due consideration to future possible developments. The possible width of the film may be reduced to 41.16 mm., should the decision be taken to eliminate the sound record space in the taking of the picture records.

The height of the sound record is, as in all other two proposed dimensions, outside of the perforations, and offers the same advantages in regard to expansion or contraction of the record width, as well as to the possibility of its severance from the picture record.

The length of the sound record is, according to this proposed dimension, and always subject to the frequency greater in width than the standard film in use to date. The over-all length of the sound record is 5.08 mm. or double the space available for the sound record in the standard film. The over-all width of the film is 46 mm., and the width of the silent film may be reduced to 41.16 mm., should the decision be taken to eliminate the sound record space in the taking of the picture records.

The position of the sound record is, in all the other two proposed dimensions, outside of the perforations, and offers the same advantages in regard to expansion or contraction of the record width, as well as to the possibility of its severance from the picture record.

The length of the standard film is 35 mm. film, for the standard film and 35.5 mm., for the projector aperture. The pitch of six perforations less a dividing spacing of 0.09 mm. is the width. The sound record is 5.08 mm. double the space available, for the sound record in the standard film. The over-all width of the film is 46 mm., and the width of the sound record is 5.08 mm. or double the space available for the sound record in the standard film. The over-all width of the film is 46 mm., and the width of the sound record is 5.08 mm.

If the proposed dimensions should be adopted, the limits of perfection are nearly reached at the present system of sound recording on film. Then it is safe to say that in order to record sound at the high frequency, it would be necessary to change the sound track by 0.15 mm. The pitch of the sound track was chosen for the "Economic" dimension.

The next installment of this article will appear in a subsequent issue of THE FILM DAILY.

MacDonald recently returned from Hollywood where he became very popular with the film colony.

Following the completion of “Young Man of Manhattan,” at the Paramount Long Island studios, Charles Ruggles will hop, skip and jump into “Queen High,” playing the same role he created in the stage version, a few years back.

It’s comparatively easy to get plenty of flesh and blood actors in New York, but Louis Brock found it impossible to find a human skeleton here for use in his comedy, “Barroom Was Wrong,” so “Mr. Bones” had to be imported from Baltimore, especially for the occasion.

George Ortlieb, who has made a study of trick photography, is now in charge of the special effects department at the Paramount Long Island studios.

The Colorcraft Corporation’s studio and laboratory in Long Island City is rapidly nearing completion, with the building promised for occupancy by May 1.

Jack Donahue’s recent presence at the Paramount Long Island studio is explained by the report that Paramount will make “Sons O’ Guns,” in which he is appearing, here, with Donahue in the leading roles.

Helen Morgan, of “Applause” and “Roadhouse Nights,” is said to be all pins and needles for Frisco’s Vitaphone imitation of her famous piano act which she has, as yet, been unable to catch, due to the pressure of stage work. La Morgan just celebrated her 200th performance in the title role of “Sweet Adeline.”

“Once a Gypsy Told Me You Were Mine,” by Irving Kahal and Sammy Fain, will be featured by Paramount as the theme song of “Dangerous Nan McGrew,” now nearing completion under the direction of Mel St. Clair.

Additional activity for Technicolor is predicted in the near future following the release of “Song of the West” and “Under a Texas Moon,” which, it is predicted, are likely to set a vogue of Westerns in natural color.

MANITOBA TO LABEL FILMS

In the case of "special" pictures, the lower price of admission for children is eliminated, but the new ruling does not prevent a juvenile, either alone or with elders, from attending the show on a ticket at the adult price. Announcement regarding the film classification is compulsory.

Ticket Makers Condemn Unfair Trade Practices

from collecting a franchise tax of $7,316.58 levied against Educational Films, based on the corporation’s income from film exhibited to theatrical audiences. The order also restrains the collection of the tax pending the hearing.

Hamilton Ward, attorney general of the state of New York, is ordered to appear with the tax commission at the hearing, which is to be held before a statutory court consisting of Judge Harrie B. Chase and District judge William Bondy and John M. Woolsey. All classes of corporations whose income is derived in whole or in part from copyrights, patents, U. S. Bonds or other federal instrumentalties, or municipal bonds, all of which are exempt from the tax, will be affected by the outcome of the case.

The suit, though involving only Educational, is being brought in behalf of a group of the big producers and distributors. While the elimination of the exempt copyright income would result in most of the picture companies having no net income for purposes of state taxation, nevertheless they would not escape entirely because they would still be taxable, though to a considerably lesser amount, upon their capital stock.

Benjamin P. DeWitt and Siegfried Harth are associated with Roger Hinds in representing the film interests in the case.

Incidentally, Leo Reisman did not appear as scheduled at Proctor's 86th St. last night, due to illness, and the Roxy Gang was rushed to the theater to pinch hit.

Louella O. Parsons, m. p. editor of Universal Service, arrived in the big burg yesterday from the coast on her first visit since she became the bride of Dr. Harry Martin. Black McVeigh would have the world know that, with the opening of "Song of the West," there are now three all-Technicolor features running at $2 on Broadway, with more to come.

Films in Lighted Theater Shown on British Screen

London—A screen which permits pictures to be shown in lighted auditoriums was recently demonstrated by Daylight Talks Ltd., the official supplier of the Home Office. The image is projected from behind the screen, which, according to the developers, would make picture-going safer since it would obviate darkened theaters.

New Screen Equipment for Colony, Norfolk, Va.

London—Report of the Cinematography Exhibitors Association on sound equipment reveals that the cheaper type of apparatus is causing exhibitors throughout the country much anxiety in view of the fact that they can not be certain of obtaining the proper maintenance service.

Some Practical Wide Film Aspects and Recommendations

This is the last installment of "Some Practical Aspects of and Recommendations on Wide Film Standards," prepared by A. S. Howell and J. A. Dubray for the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

As this point of the survey we find it necessary to bring up the points of financial to the time required to complete the adaptation question which has formed the subject matter of this paper. We are convinced that the "Extreme Full Screen" and "Roll & Slow Cine" which commercial considerations are quite evident, with little or no sacrifice of the technical and scientific society, we, nevertheless, feel that this is sufficiently important to bring out the fact that the side of the question which is of most consequence is that the financial side of the question is not.

We do not think that we would be very far from the truth if we were to mention the fact that the partial reconstruction of machinery of the "Extreme Full Screen" would represent an approximate investment of $500,000 to $600,000, or the value of the apparatus in use, while the "Spectacular" or "Roll & Slow Cine" would call for an investment of at least $1,000,000. On the other hand, we think that this latter investment would be distributed in a much shorter time.

The "Extreme" dimension, due to the engineering developments which would be required to bring about a system of projection whereby we could conserve the present investment which we conservatively estimate would approximately $750,000, or the present investment. These figures, which, we hasten to say, are only approximations, are dictated by our own experience in cinematographic and that based on the Williams of the engineers of the screen.

It is our custom to say that the solution of these problems may be in the development of optical reproduction projects whereby we may make possible the distribution of films to smaller theaters. As an example we may presume that the "Spectacular" projection should be chosen as standard, the negative would be expanded, and the negative prints would be required to include four perforations only in its height.

For example, a reduction in the present charge call for a 25 per cent reduction of the sound record, which seems at first thought to be a very possible thing.

Conclusion

In consideration of all the factors of an entirely new production of a picture, according to a change in film dimensional standard which the plan of the present study, we think that the dimensional standards approved by the industry to be a necessity for the future, the development of the change of projection apparatus, and the dissemination of the film in an entirely new industry.

We propose that a special standing committee, which would include representatives of all the branches of the motion picture industry, as well as members of all recognized educational associations, would be formed, and that the committee be given power and authority to discuss, consider, and make recommendations as to the creation and adoption of a new standard.

Further, the Bell & Howell Co. are prepared to present to such a committee, and in a comparatively short period a finished film approximately any standard they may be pleased upon so that to a visual projection to, and further consideration with exhibitors and technicians only be possible.

The picture which would be pertinent to this committee to devise by means of which the financial institutions of the investigation could be equitably distributed within the motion picture industry as a whole. We feel sure that such a committee would be the most logical and necessary measure to the industry, which may include an exhibit that the visual projection of the motion picture industry throughout the world.

Activities of Equipment Companies Are Centered On New Developments Facing Industry

Since the advent of sound many branches of the industry have become in the turmoil of a new development, which has improved one of its biggest stumbling blocks. Sound was the starter and as a result, almost simultaneously as a position to immediate advantage to the companies in the industry, we hear of the equipment companies with other forces to prevent any repetition of this menace.

On Wide Screens

While the Grandeur process is not the only development which enabled an exhibitor to feature pictures on a wide screen, it depended upon the manufacturers of such product to be a position to immediate advantage to the companies in the industry, and very rapidly it filled that order can be cleaned out of the field of narrow sound screens, now embellished with fire-proof guarantees, on the market.

Theater Accessories

Under this heading can be classified the necessary elements of projection and any other piece of equipment in the theater. Look over the recent improvements made in regard to theater seats, drapes, lighting equipment, and numerous others and it may surprise you to learn how rapidly each in its own sphere has been improved upon. Not because of any exhibitor's need, but fit in with the modern trend of the business, to satisfy that demand of the public which are now shopping for the best.

Improved Acoustics

In various sections of the country the regulations demanded rigid inspection of theaters of different acoustics materials used. Regulations were aimed at curb possible fire hazards and as a result materials of fireproof were quickly condemned. At this time exhibitors were slightly hand capped, but manufacturers of acoustic cloth soon brought out new materials which not only were approved by fire commissioners, but also aided the showing of hard-to-hear sound pictures. Many theaters not only have separate seats set aside for the devices. The attachment in man cases consists of a set of earphone which are plugged into a small box fitted to these special seats.

After a short stay around the auto town she will head back to the Fox Coast studio. In addition to making several records for Victor while in New York, John McCormack will be heard on the Victor-Radio Hour March 13.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S WHAT IN GREATER NEW YORK STUDIOS

VITAPHONE STUDIO AT PEAK WITH TWO STAGES

With both stages now in operation, the Eastern Vitaphone studio is now engaged in the greatest amount of production there in recent months.

The increased space also allows Murray Roth, director-in-chief, an opportunity to turn out Vitaphone varieties on a much more elaborate scale, such as the recently completed "Footnotes," a singing and dancing variety, employing two large sets and a chorus of 20 girls, in addition to the principals.

Other short subjects turned out during the past ten days are: "At Your Service," featuring Jessie Royandel and William Halligan, directed by Arthur Hurley; "Nile Green," one reel comedy with Helen Broid-riche, directed by Murray Kelly; "A Florida Affair," a one reel sketch treated by Edmund Joseph and "The Head Man," featuring Hugh O'Connell and Kitty Kelly, under the direction of Arthur Hurley.

Frederick Spencer, formerly stage manager for Fay Fairter, is now con-

DICK WILLIS, make-up chief of Paramount Warner Bros., reports the interesting fact that most opera stars demand much heavier make-up than the average performer.
They also share the belief that an excess of shading around the eyes brings out more character, despite all arguments to the contrary.

Robert Rowse of Paramount has just completed the screen adaptation of "Too Much Luck," based on the novel by Bob Hope, starring George Raft and Marlene Dietrich.

That Roberta Rodin, featured in Paramount's "Dangerous Nan
McGrew," possesses literary ability.
In addition to her other talents is proven by her original composition,"a photograph presented to Fredie Grof, studio hairdresser. It reads: "Here's to Fred, who gets ahead, Battling with the waves."
No one may guess, the cleverness,
With which that storm
He braves!"

Random impressions at the Warner
Vitaphone studio include Murray
Ray chewing on the inevitable black cigar (unlighted); Harold Lloyd biting his lips; Arthur Hurley in deep concentration; Edmund
Joseph and his open-work shoes; Ed Dollair creating merriment with his "touch stick"; Ray Foster explaining the black art to an admiring audience; Jay Rescher and his unvarying lunch of crackers and milk; Eddie Horton, nursing his sixth attempt at a mustard.

Max Hayes, agent, staged an impromptu birthday party in the Paramount studio lunchroom recently at which a birthday cake, with lighted candles was served. Among the guests were Larry Kent and Arthur Coine.

Dick Bolton, assistant director at the Warner Vitaphone studios, played the role of a man in Stanley Rauh's
"Head Man," which Arthur
Hurley just completed there. Bolton enjoyed the experience but has done great yen to play animal roles from now on.

Larry Williams, one of Para-mount's ace cameramen, agrees most of his spare time experimenting on improved camera equipment. He has practically completed a new invention which, he believes, will change all existing methods of pres-cut day photography.

POLICE reserves had to be called out to restore order when over two thousand people responded to a call for four hundred extras to be used at the Paramount Long Island studio recently. Once inside, the three crew used in the Dempsey-Tunney fight scene in "Young Man of Manhattan" and the other 50 chosen for "Dangerous Nan McGrew" proved very easy to handle with the result that both big scenes were made simultaneously in record time.

Mark Sandrich, who came here one year ago for a month's vacation in the big town, has found himself so much in demand as a director that he hasn't had time to see the sights yet. In twelve months, Sandrich has directed five two-reel comedies and one feature production, for RKO release.

Maria Gamberelli, better known as "Gambly," is looking for sixteen girls who can dance. The only other re-quidements are that they must be pretty, slender and tall. Girls who qualify, will be interviewed by Gambly at the Criterion theater, any time next week, beginning Monday between the hours of 10 A.M. and 12 noon.

Hobart Henley has just returned from a vacation trip to Cleveland, Ohio. This ace director, who turned out "The Lady Lies" and "Ran-no-House Nights," both of which hit the ball, is understood to have another winner in "The Big Pond," soon to be released.

"Getting A Ticket," the Eddie Cantor short, directed by Mort Blumen-stock, at the Paramount Astoria studios, is holding its own with "Street of Chance," at the Rialto theater, where it is now in its fifth week.

William Steiner of Paramount's
Long Island studio, is receiving congratulations on his excellent camera work in "Roadhouse Nights," which just completed a highly successful engagement at the Paramount, New York.

When an 18-year old miss in a small town near Chicago put her name on an egg that was shipped out by her father's farm, she little guessed that an opportunity in films would result. But it so happened that the egg was served to Frank Heath, casting director at the Paramount Long Island studios, who has sent the girl a registration card to be returned with her photo. If she looks like a good prospect, Paramount will bring her on for a screen test.

HIGH TENSIONED AND colorfully A ESCAPED MILITARY PRISONER. THRILLS PRINCIPAL CHARACTERISTIC OF THIS HERBERT BRENON PIC.

Based on a novel which excited much comment. Its story is an unpretentious and not unfamiliar one. A Russian soldier prisoner escapes from a German prison, is captured, and ordered shot as a German deserter. He proves he is a Russian but a brief respite, is again sentenced to death. Fateful errors to save him are made by German officers whose sudden interest in him is hardly accounted for. At the film is executed. An unimportant love theme runs along with the story which resembles a preachment against the injustices of war. Chester Morris is starred as the prisoner. Among the other players Jean Hersholt is one of the most believable.

ENJOYABLE UNDERWORLD MELODRAMA WITH WILLIAM BOYD HEADING A NOTABLE CAST. ENTERTAINMENT FOR ANY AGE.

While pictures portraying battles of cops and racketeers have been done frequently, this one with Boyd heading a stellar cast gets attention as the star and manages to wind up with considerable to spare. In addition to Boyd, acting honors are equally shared between Ernest Torrence and Dorothy Sebastian. Here’s one where director and author cooperated and turned out a corking good yarn which proves to be enjoyable entertainment for most any type audience. Ralf Harolde, as the suave gangster, gives a creditable performance. The story revolves around Boyd’s attempt to secure a conviction against the gangster with the result that his sole witness, a cop, is his fiancee’s brother. During the trial the witness is shot by the gangster’s henchman. Boyd wins the action. It’s there.

Although the credits merely say “based on a play by Sidney Howard, this is a purged adaptation of the stage hit, “They Never What They Wanted,” which won the Pulitzer Prize some six years back. It affords a suitable vehicle for the talker debut of Vilma Banky, who is still under handicaps for speaking roles, because the action is dominated by a male role, done on the stage by Richard Bennett and duplicated here with a punch by Edward G. Robinson. Story is about an Italian rancher who obtains a wife by correspondence, sending her a photo of one of his good-looking anch aides, who has quite a yen for the ladies. The picture is completely romantic and comic, possessed of great happiness and plenty of amusing Hokum have been added. Cast: Vilma Banky, Edward G. POOR COMEDY. DULL AT TIMES AND INEXPERTLY PRODUCED, WITH NAT CARR PROVIDING ITS ONE BRIGHT SPOT.

This comedy has Nat Carr and little else. That the film has been built around him is readily obvious. The only reason for its being is the presence of this stellar comedian in the cast. Even with him to lend a saving hand this production never rises above mediocrity. Weighing it down is a weak story combined with a considerable amount of stilted dialogue, direction that reveals no imagination, photography of generally poor quality and some acting that is thoroughly bad. Excepting Carr the only other member of the cast rising above the level of the Marbe, who plays a night club enterpriser in the vivacious French manner. There’s nothing to do with the trials and tribulations of the artist in making the transition from silent to talking films.

 Drama. This one was produced in London and starts off in a drapy manner. The story of the picture. Foregoing, of course, is the footage before anything happens. As a stage play, “White Cargo,” fared well, but the film version leaves considerable to be desired. At times the action of the story is handicapped by the slow manner of the players, some of whom are not fitted for their parts. Leslie Faber, portraying Weston, and the doctor, are the only highlights. Their acting is sufficient to carry the rest of the cast. Tondeloyo fails to live up to the fire and sex accorded her part. Here is an opportunity to bring into play many fine exterior Directors, which would have enhanced the beauty of the picture, but those shown are easily recognized as studio stuff. The story, laid in Africa, is the struggle of the young superintendent to keep from going native. A few of the scenes in this one won’t go well for children.

PROGRAM PICTURE DRESSED UP IN BROWN, JOE E. BROWN, WHO STEALS HONORS. PICTORIALLY BEAUTIFUL WESTERN OPERETTA CONVENTIONALLY DONE.

Familiar type of operetta story. The color photography is one of the few things for which this film can be praised. Up to date, the covered wagon train and Western scenery shown early in the picture providing excellent material. One or two of the song numbers are melodious and are acceptably sung. Joe E. Brown, as a mule skinner, runs away with whatever glory the production offers. For the most part it moves along well-worn story paths without exciting much interest. The story concerns an army officer, who is deserted owing to a scandal in which he was involved. Meeting up with his old enemy he has a row with him and the heart is killed. The officer is jailed and then escapes disguised as a parson. Incidentally he falls in love with colonel’s daughter, is estranged and finally reunited.

THOROUGHLY ENJOYABLE MUSICAL. NICE CAST, DIRECTED WITH A GOOD EYE, AND ABUNDANT IN COMEDY.

Cast and director share the good will with about 90 per cent of the credit for putting this neat little musical farce across the pan. For framework, there is the incident of an interfering lad (Joseph Wagstaff) and his wisecracking self-appointed agent (Frank Richardson) going to Hollywood to crash the talkies. By possessing somebody else they get lots of attention and also run into some embarrassment before everything comes out all right.

Wagstaff and Lola Lane make a likeable love team. Richardson delivers a laugh a minute. Peter Calletti also gives the comedy a good boost, while Charles Judels is a scream in the part of a temperamental French singer, with Lila Chase getting in a few licks as his wife. There are several outstanding ensemble scenes and the music, though lacking in hit song, is pleasant.

An undistinguished production with the oddity of its characters, the handicap of a banal and in-

Then suddenly it springs to life for a brief moment. Commonplace in its treatment and burdened with a certain amount of bad acting, the film never manages to rise above the level of moderate entertainment at best. The playing is wooden. The plot has to do with a young woman who marries a light-house keeper, gets tired of her loneliness and flees with a former swain only to be captured by her lover. Dame Edith Returns to Capitol Program
In addition to its glad hand given Dade Schoeller on his return to a city spot where he has won a flock of fans, special applause is garnered by two unusually enjoyable acts in the current Capitol stage bill, "Colo. Rhythm," produced by Arthur Knorr. One of the numbers is the Small Brothers, three youths with a line of special harlequin and novelty in their footprint that puts them in a class by themselves. The other is June Carr, a neat little comedienne, who does not get all the opportunities that her amusing talents deserve. The Cheater Hale Girls go over exceptionally well in a fancifully devised dance in which the girls, divided into several groups, wear contrasting costumes of changing color. Some effective effects are obtained through the medium of color changes as the ensemble performs its routine. A comedy team is currently taking the place of Art Frank, who was billed but did not appear, cleaned up their share of laughs with some humor that has a lack of polish but makes up in gaiety.

STONE RUSSIAN REVUE

Says Nikita Balieff's "Chauve-Souris" in tabloid form holds the Paramount stage this week, marking the first production at the Strand under an unusual price schedule. In the legitimate theater "Chauve-Souris" proved unusual entertainment and distinctly something out of the ordinary, a dignitary.being two extraordinary beauty and compelling charm. Set on the Paramount stage it still retains all these qualities, but seems slight and lacking in the movement that picture audiences demand in their stage shows. It certainly is something out of the cutting. On the Paramount stage it is like a small boy, lost in the confines of a huge cathedral. However, people who seek class entertainment will find that even in its present form it is worth seeing. At any rate it is something different—that is, for picture houses. Balieff has created some stage pictures stunningly effective and tremendously beautiful. There stands a particular scene with a group of men singing the Volga boatman's song against a sombre sky. The revue closes with the dance of the wooden soldiers—a number that has particularly been identified with Balieff's name. For once you have the pleasure of seeing human beings behaving as if they really were created of wood.

PENALTY OF COST

COLOR is the order of the day. Sono-chrome brings it without the penalty of added cost. Sixteen delicate tints and a warm neutral tone are available at the same price as ordinary black-and-white. This, plus the fact that it gives really faithful sound-on-film, accounts for the success of this series of Eastman tinted positive films.

AGENTS EMPLOYED by the Copyright Protection Bureau are digging up information on exhibitors who persist in that never-quit-dead practice of bicycling and other illegal stunts as well. And consequently, as you've probably read, about 100 suits charging infringement are pending in courts throughout the country. Level exhibitor organization heads are appealing to their members and those beyond their fold to play the game according to contractual Hoyle. The sensible and fair-minded ones will. The others are likely to get financially hurt when the law courts clamp down on them.

OUT OF 2,534 subjects viewed by the New York State Censorship Commission during the year ended June 30, 1929, only 8 were finally rejected as unsuitable for exhibition, quotes the annual report just issued.

Not so bad a record for the industry when you consider the variety of sources from which its product comes and also the additional new perplexities confronting it because of censorship of dialogue.

PICTURE HOUSES continue to multiply and the total is now pinned on the 22,624 mark. An interesting fact, this, in face of the ever-recurring allegations that the exhibition end of the industry is going to the bow-wows. Well, 22,624 theaters, like fifty million Frenchmen, can't be wrong. There must still be gold in them there exhibiting hills.

Greater Number of Houses Are Being Placed in Good Sound Class

Urges Industry Organize
To Fight Its Oppressors

EVERYONE will agree that our trade is being battered and pulled about in a dozen different directions. We are not being guided! We have no policy! We are a disorganized band! We have no protector against organized oppression! We have no champion of our freedom and rights! And all because so many of us are grab-all, selfish, short-sighted humbugs—thinking only of today and allowing our immediate greed to distort our long vision. Get-rich-quick methods continue to block the paths of progress, common sense, organization, and lessen our power of resistance to attack. We are all at the mercy of any man, any firm, any official and any body who can put a pistol to our heads! We are a disorganized rabble without a leader.

I believe it is only a matter of a short time when complete libraries will be available for use in practically every branch of education and that all of our leading schools and universities will be equipped with talking pictures.

JOHN EBERSON, leader among theater architects, also takes his place as a leader among automobile owners when his new specially Eberson-designed Duesenberg rides the ways and purrs out into open stream Fifth Ave. The car has the grace of a swan, the dignity of a carriage, the comfort of a home, the power of a battlehip, plus the speed of an airplane. When we were told that it could develop a speed of 80 miles an hour in second within a city block, could do 116 an hour in comfort, we had to be shown. So we were, and how! Next time John Eberson intends to make a flying trip to Chicago all he needs is this car and a passenger to keep his radio programs diversified. Oh, yes, it's the radio, too.

SOUND REPRODUCTION IS CONSTANTLY IMPROVING

the country. Last year, Wilcox says, an average of about 75 per cent of the houses that he visited were entitled to the classification of "goodin sound reproduction, while this year the average is running 84 per cent.

On the theory that the best way to eliminate trouble is to forestall it, more than 93 per cent of the calls made by the ERPI service organization are purely preventative, Wilcox states. In January this staff made nearly 11,000 calls, of which less than 7 per cent were because of trouble.
More than 105,000 performances were heard over the Western Electric equipment in the United States during January.

Reverts to Silent Policy

Cleveland—After having a sound policy for several weeks, the Family able.

Says U. S. Producers May

Make Films in England

London—Several U. S. producers have discussed the advisability of coming over here to make pictures, says Jeffrey Bernerd, of W. and F.
Films, on his return from a visit to the States. Among the factors influencing the idea is the superiority of so many English actors in the matter of good speech. One American producer, according to Bernerd, is likely to establish himself here this year.

tion of Charles Chaplin's "City Lights," are to be all-talkers, this term is being dropped by
U. A. in future announcements.

Unless a picture is labeled a non-dialogue production, it is to be assumed that the film is an
all-talker.

cent gold debentures planned for Fox
Film were enclosed with the letters.
Right to subscribe will be held open for 10 days.

At the same time Fox made another plea to stockholders urging them that their votes will be needed at the Wednesday meeting to prevent a receivership.

Successful arrangement of the syndicate is expected to strengthen support for the Fox-Lehman plan, announced as the last court hearing the question was raised as to whether the proposed financing would be fully underwritten.

Halsey, Stuart & Co., who has opposed the Fox-Lehman plan, is sending a letter to Fox stockholders, denying all charges made by William Fox against the Stuart-Ottersen group, and stating that a more advantageous refinancing plan, regardless of who sponsors it, will be offerred at the stockholders' meeting on Wednesday.

The independent stockholders' committee, headed by Morton F. Stern, of J. S. Bache & Co., also has written stockholders to send in their proxies to this committee to be voted for the "best plan." This group considers the Lehman plan to be the best so far submitted.

...HE MOTTO of the Advertising
Hubs of the World is “Truth in Advertising.” It might well be hung in the hall of some of our adversers and publicity folk all over these United States. We have altways believed in the right of desire, and the need for integity. Now, in the motion picture business,ourselves and or over-enthusiastic advertisers and our picture men at a knockout will not make him like it if it’s a bust, but it will make him old a grudge against the junk advertiser for having been taken in.

Thoughts
ND HERE are a few thoughts at random. That we don’t blame distributors for worrying because they have but 22 runs of prints now against 1 before sound. That the sophisticated type of drawing room satire that pleases Broadway seldom goes in the smaller towns. That the use of wide-film is almost here. That year after year has passed centered in little old New York. That bootleg, homemade and any sound equipment is the chief use of the industry.

Fritz Williams, Shepherd of The Lambs, announces that the annual public gala will be held this year on Sunday night, April 27, at the Metropolitan Opera House. The Colie for the gala will be appointed at a meeting scheduled this week. The entertainment committee already has every stage and picture star in N. Y. lined up...Berner Claire, F. N. prima donna in “Song of the Flame,” will probably attend the premiere of that picture when it opens in New York.

* * *

Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler, Mr. and Mrs. another way of putting it, are expected to arrive here this week. Both will remain in our midst for the premiere of Al’s latest, “Mammy” for Warners...George Arliss in “Disraeli” now is rounding out its sixth month at the Central here, while the same fellow in “The Green Goddess” is proving equally as popular as the Winter Garden. Mr. and just a few caught daunted at the Algonquin last Saturday were Lucille Webster Gleason and Radie Harris, Dudley Murphy, Marc Connelly, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Doran and Walter Eberhardt.

* * *

William Wellman, Paramount director, has arrived here for a brief stay. Evidently take in 3 or 400 shows and trek back to the Coast, eh what?...Abe Waxman, head of publicity and advertising for Warner Bros., is scheduled to show off for the Coast Saturday. A. P. will get a close-up of the new product lined up for the new season...Betty Blythe is expected in N. Y. to appear in a play, “House Afire.”...Fred Niblo will guide Will Haines through his next for M-G-M labeled “Easy Going.”

* * *

James Beene, formerly of the “Herald-World,” has sold his first story to Satellite, which will appear as “Aquatic Guard.” some time this June...P. A. Parsons will also have a yarn of his published by the Philly National weekly shortly...

Willie Wang, who does a lot of clipping in the M-G-M library department, is not a Chinaman as one may suspect from his cognomen.

* * *

“Mike” Simmons grappled with the mighty pen yesterday, when he assumed his new duties as headman of the Sono Art-World Wide publicity and advertising. And he didn’t send this out...Jack Holt returned to the Paramount lot for a role in “The Border Legion.”

AND THAT’S THAT

By Phil M. Daly

After much constructive work, our private investigation department has tracked down Larry Darmour’s formula for making those topnotch Mickey (Himself) McGuire and H. C. Witwer comedies.

According to the voluminous report, Larry always has held fast to the opinion that talkers must move just like the silent did. He considers dialogue secondary to action. Stories would appeal to young and old, highbrows and vice versa. Music and stage acts may be used, but only when they do not interfere with the story proper. In short, Larry’s theory is that films are primarily pictures and must appeal to the eye more than to the ear.

So, if you have followed the lesson, you know how to make those good Larry Darmour comedies.

* * *

The special exploitation boys are breaking out with all sorts of cleverness these days. Joe Weil, of Universal, is sending around an “Article of Agreement,” done in fitting legal form, wherein George Sidney, Charlie Murray, Vera Gordon and Kate Price, the “Colens and Kellys” quartette, solemnly swear and declare that they will provide exhibits with side-splitting entertainment until the box offices bust with profits.

Very clever, Joe. And don’t forget that the exhibits will hold you to the contract.

* * *

Then comes William R. Ferguson, of M-G-M, with a window and counter card display, in colors, showing Blanche Sweet supposedly displaying a certain brand of silk but actually drawing attention to the pulchritudinous contents of the stockings instead. Either way, it’s an eye-catcher.

his 50,101 shares of Film "B" stock and 100,000 shares of Theaters "B" stock which are now held by the Bankers Trust Co, under the voting trust agreement, which in effect made him spokesman for the Stuart-Otterson group from the material considerations involved under the 15-year contract. Said by all clients in connection with future Fox financing and the supplying of sound equipment to the studio, in addition over the voting trust agreement of Dec. 3 and in favor of the proposal of Mr. Levy to withdraw without that agreement being binding on the court.

Mr. Wright said his clients were not willing to see the stock held by Bankers Trust turned over to Fox, because the Stuart-Otterson group desired to vote these shares in favor of a different plan, presumably the one drawn up by Halsey, Stuart, although Wright said he was not interested to divulge the names of the exact parties behind this opposition.

Counsel for the Bankers Trust asked that the court appoint another referee to project the bank whichever way the decision was to go and Judge Levy said he would be done.

There is some likelihood that stockholders favoring the decision will go to court last minute before tomorrow's meeting. The Leone group has already said that it intends to put up for Fox in the last few days the sum of $15,000,000, of which $4,000,000 is to be used to purchase the outstanding stock, with the sum of $5,000,000 in cash. The plan, according to the Leone group, will be voted on.

The Leone group has also asked for approval of the arbitration agreement that will make up the $37,077,504.00 that will be paid for the stock.

With the new Halsey, Stuart & Co. Fox-refinancing plan, details of which were made known yesterday for the first time, proposing to bring more new money into the Fox corporations at less cost than the Banc-america plan, today's meeting of stockholders is expected to be a counter offer from the Banc-america group, and probably result in a showdown on the cheapest refinancing arrangement. It is expected that the matter will resolve itself into a competitive battle between the two banking factions, as pointed out several weeks ago in THE FILM DAILY, with the bankers approved

Experiment Proves Hard Lights O.K. for Talkies

For the first time since the advent of talking pictures, incidents of sound were discarded in favor of the more brilliant hard lights, which sound experts everywhere have claimed could not be used, because of carbon noises. The use of the powerful sunlights, spots and broadsides were so managed that the slightest trace of buzzing was picked up by the microphone. This experiment took place at the RCA-Victor studio, during the filming of "Kiss Me!" a Chester Aircraft production, featuring Olive Sheen, Forrest Stanley, Donald Meek, Alice Hegeman, Joan Bourdelle and others.

"GENERAL CRACK" will be seen next week at the Beacon. He was doing jury duty, is the way they labeled it, but anyway, Jack Level, head man of the Pathe Sun, the rooster's house organ, is back on the job. She came in as meek as a lamb, sat still for a while, but when she got steamed up, were we sold? "Ask Hortense Schorr, she who thinks 'Columbia the Gem of the Ocean' was her company's cheering song. Who's the fellow known to most of us, does his broadcasting every Saturday, and another guy gets credit?"

FRANZ LISZT'S 'Les Preludes' will be the orchestral feature of the regular Sunday broadcast by Major Edward Bowes and his Capitol Theater Family. "Sally" sallates into the Strand this week. —AND THAT'S THAT

SAMUEL UNTERMeyer, generalissimo of the Fox legal forces, had one hectic time Monday morning in the State Supreme Court building trying to find a judge who could sit for the injunction hearing in connection with William Fox's Class "B" stock. It was necessary that the judge should not be a holder of American Telephone or Fox or Bankers Trust stock. So Untermeyer went from courtroom to courtroom, upairs and down, until he got his man in the person of Judge Aaron Levy. He has not weighted in yet to see how much pounds he lost.

Speaking of that injunction hearing, it was like a goose that might be called a "Steeplechase stock, who's got the stock?" The Bankers Trust had it. Fox wanted to get possession. And Stuart-Otterson were determined to prevent the removal. So Judy Levy had one of those Solomon cases on his hands—except that in this instance an offer to cut the "babe" in two parts and give each "mother" one-half might not have had the same reaction.

An Observation — on national advertising

By JACK ALICIOATE

ADVERTISING by the major companies of this colorful and intriguing industry in magazines of national circulation may be the old flag as far as selling stock is concerned but, when measured in dollars and cents, comes far from filling the seats of any theater at a given time and date. We have noted several exhibitors from many parts of the country during the past few days what they thought of this expenditure on the part of the big companies and all are firmly of the opinion that this money might far more advantageously be spent in local tie-up, newspaper,ams running day and date with their play dates. It is stretching the imagination close to the breaking point to vision a happy family sitting around the fireside, after reading a full page magazine advertisement selling the virtues of "Show of Shows" at about grand a page, rushing for their collective hat and coat in haste to take the last show at the local movie house that is on that day owing "Madame X."

Not Giving Up

Although the vote of Fox stockholders yesterday was given against the refinancing plan of the Bancamerica group, counsel for the Stuart-Otterson interests and the Trusteeship of Dec. 3 intimated that they would not give up, and that they had other cards up their sleeve to play against the consummation of the Bancamerica plan as it now stands.

Bancamerica Refinancing Plan is Approved by 15 to 1 Vote

William Fox yesterday scored a double victory when stockholders of his two corporations, after a long and stormy meeting, voted about 15 to 1 in favor of the refinancing plan sponsored by the Bancamerica group with the approval of Mr. Fox. It was a moral victory and a big personal tribute for Mr. Fox, in addition to the fact that, whereas the Stuart-Otterson group have other cards up their sleeve that they can play, it means Mr. Fox will remain in control of his companies.

Just as the meeting was being called to order, word came that Judge Aaron J. Fox had vacated the temporary order in connection with the Fox "H" stock, thereby making it possible for the stockholders to vote at the meeting. As a result of this, the Fox directors held a hurried conference and emerged with a modification in the Bancamerica plan whereby the proposed issue of refinancing stock was eliminated, thus requiring only the board of directors to pass the plan, and obviating the necessity of a stockholders' vote. The stockholders were asked to vote as originally planned, however, in order to record their attitude for the guidance of Judge Aaron J. Fox, when he holds the next meeting.

THEY are a thousand things

There are several more thousand

But the writer laying out script

Stockholders Stand By Wm. Fox in Refinancing Plan

caring to decide between a receivership or refinancing plan. An appeal from Judge Levy's decision was made by the S. Fox directors a day or two before the hearing on this appeal is expected to be held. It is understood that a Receivership Board of examiners will be appointed by the court to sit in for Judge Levy in judging the facts in the case and he will have the final word on the subject. Mr. Fox, as predicted, put it in his vote on the "Mr. S. Fox held by the Bankers Trust Co. as collateral for the mortgage of Dec. 3 (which now includes the $7,500,000 loan on the securities of the TVC and the $5,000,000 loan on other collateral), but Mr. Fox has withdrawn, protesting that he was not representing any voting interest in behalf of the trusteeship and for the shareholders against any receiver appointed. The actual counting of the ballots and proxies is not expected to be completed until late Wednesday night.

Untermeyer stated last night that out of a total of 602,087 votes at the last annual meeting, 582,000 voted in favor of the mortgage, while more than 13,000 of the Fox Theaters "A" stock also voted for the stock not held by Fox or held by the Bankers Trust, big majority also was present and in favor.

Numerous heated clashes took place between the attorneys for the Fox and Mervyn Halsey, Sr., the latter appearing as counsel for the Fox interests and advising the stockholders to vote against the refinancing plan. Halsey's attorney, Stuart-Telephone, was the one who submitted the refinancing plan and now is opposing the refinancing plan presented by the Bankers Trust Co.

The secret of the refinancing plan lies in the fact that the Fox is the only company in the entertainment field that has been able to finance its operating expenses by the issuance of debentures and that the receipts on these debentures are not only sufficient to meet the interest and本金 payments but also to meet the "pro forma" requirements of the refinancing plan.

The modifications in the Bankamericana plan are outlined in the following letter from Mr. Fox to the Bankamericana group:

"In consideration of the stockholders of Fox Films Corporation now being held, there is submitted to the Board of Directors of the Plan of Financing embodied in your minutes of March 17, 1930, and the holders of a majority of shares of Class A Common Stock in the number of not less than two-thirds of the shares of Class A Common Stock, it is respectfully requested that you be authorized to enter into an agreement with the holders of the shares of Class A Common Stock of said Corporation to the effect that the holders of a majority of shares of Class A Common Stock shall be entitled to participate in the plan of reorganization whole shareholders having given their consent thereto. This proposal is in the interest of the Corporation and is in the best interest of the shareholders. It will be noted that the Board of Directors of Fox Films Corporation has approved the plan and the same is now in the hands of the Bankers Trust Co., New York, as trustees for the shareholders and the plan will be submitted for the approval of the stockholders at the annual meeting of the shareholders of Fox Films Corporation to be held at 3 o'clock on Monday, March 21, 1930.

The Board of Directors of Fox Films Corporation, in consideration of the plan of reorganization whole shareholders having given their consent thereto, now make a request of the Bankers Trust Co., New York, as trustees for the shareholders of Fox Films Corporation, to take the necessary steps to submit the plan of reorganization whole shareholders having given their consent thereto, to the approval of the stockholders of Fox Films Corporation at the annual meeting of the stockholders to be held at 3 o'clock on Monday, March 21, 1930.

The following memorandum, directed to be annexed to the minutes of the meeting of the board of directors, dated at 10:30 a.m. yesterday, gives the reasons for rejecting the plan of Halsey-Stuart plan:

The plan of Halsey-Stuart is rejected as it is in the best interest of the Fox Films Corporation, the shareholders, the management and the public at large.

IMPORTATION OF CHINESE FILMS SHOWS INCREASE
Exhibitors outside of New York can secure these film through Lee on a percentage arrangement.

Before Chinese pictures can be screened, they must be passed by the National Board of Review, American subtitles supplement those in Chinese and are run that way in theaters here. In Los Angeles a Chinese vaudeville house is converted into a picture house each time a picture is brought out. An agent of Chatham in Chicago tents a theater in the heart of the city's Chinatown every time a picture is available.

Duty tax for such pictures is charged at the rate of one cent per foot, and each picture is about ten reels in length, Lee states. "We must guarantee our Shanghai company $250 on each picture imported and only get 25 cent per foot over that figure."

In New York these pictures are shown only at the Chatham, a 600-seat house in Chatham Sq., on Sunday and Monday. Admission price scale 25 cents for minors and 50 cents for adults at all times. Lee, who operates the house, says that nearly 1,500 people attend during the two days. Pictures are advertised in a local Chinese newspaper and posters and photos recently with this print are used to decorate the front of the house. During the week, the house is farmed out to a local exhibitor who runs American

A Digest of Current Opinion

J. L. Warner Sees Director

Of Silent Era Holding His Own

The revolution that shook the industry with the introduction of Vitaphone found directors equal to the new tasks imposed on them. Today, more than two years since the making of "The Jazz Singer," the old, silent film directors are still in command of the situation. Of course a number of capable stage directors have since entered the field, but they are quite in the minority.

J. L. Warner, Vice President in Charge of Production, Warner Bros.

Thinks American Films Are Technically Supreme

The movies are a mechanical medium. However question-able much of Hollywood's output is from a strictly artistic point of view, the absolute supremacy of Hollywood's mechanical contrivances is not to be denied. It was Europe's lack of production facilities that made so many of the silent films from across the waters something of a trial.

James Goe in "The World, New York"

Talkers Are Held Ideal For Operatic Productions

The movies are very much by such productions as "The Love Parade" and "The Vagabond King" that the talking screen is an ideal medium for the production of operatic comedy. There is no reason that grand opera with its tragic masque—but with an English libretto, an American setting and jazz score—should not succeed as well. I believe that Hollywood will produce the composer who will write the great American jazz opera for the reason that it has become the home and working place for a majority of the nation's most famous composers.

HAROLD: No, I just remember that my wife wrote me from the country yesterday to send her some ribbon by special delivery.

Hazel Hairston used to be a go-to writer down on the "Hollywood Chronicle." Then she got to go to go into pictures. Haven heard that Hollywood wants the place for film aspirants, she hit out for New York. In due course she found herself among the extras for "Dangerous Night." Then she moved to Paramount's L. I. studio. It cured her film ambition, but she wrote this article about her experiences in the "New York Telegraph," in which she was pretty nice to Mfg. St. Clai Eddie Baldwin, Sol Tepper, and other members of the studio gang.

Now she plans to stick to the type writer side of the picture industry.

"I see where John Ekber has radio on that classy new car of his, Aramis Cameron Lenox while stopped over in Miami to change tires and find out what happened to Schiff. "That puts my car in the same class as his, because I have a radio too. Every night I make my wife promise to use the radio and as Celia says, Celia, I think I'm getting nervous. "Puttin' on the Rita"
United Artists
Earl Carroll, New York

AMERICAN—The photography is excellent, the music and scoring is excellent and there is a marked improvement in the gags. Everything considered, Harry Richman has been bold enough to hold a box-office "Puttin' on the Rita."

DAILY MIRROR—Excellent acting, fine direction and dialogue will sell this old up as a rather conventional story. A technical "Alice in Wonderland."

DAILY NEWS—All-around swell job.—Single of the back-stage type 40, Broadway.
"Boy, O boy," will this one initiatively responsible and rightfully so."

EVENING JOURNAL—An entering piece built on the by now very familiar theme in which the producers are able to create the deluge of similar plots it would be too cumbersome to mention. An interesting story ingeniously and effectively told over his songs well, a hit.

EVENING WORLD—You might wonder why you are reading this review at all. We'll probably agree that it has an enormous box office appeal.

GRAPHIC—The production is not only exceptionally good entertainment, but it is of the beat of the "bouler" talkers which we have been used to, for it includes the show vehicles.

HERALD TRIBUNE—tulip-stalk styled and well acted comedy—nonsense that is not particularly helped by a plot which is a mere sequence of nothing to do with it, save in production, yet designed to make us laugh. A rather novel and important, it manages to do its end with skill and spirit."

POST—remarkable to say, "Puttin' on the Rita" is that very rare type of entertainment highly recognized in the particular interest as it goes along, and its resource of display, with its carefully chosen scenes, its lively temper, its song, its dances and settings were unexcelled in the audience's restrained enthusiasm.

The producers have spared no expense in "Puttin' on the Rita" and they are described as the most handsomely mounted of the production, the most typical talkies.

TELEGRAM—a good picture and one that should make it a point to see, because you will enjoy it.

TIMES—With charming music and lyrics by Irving Berlin, the presence of the talented Joan Bennett, and effective singing by Sunland, "Puttin' on the Rita," will deserve the favor with which it is received by a large audience. It is a fine that possesses much such-admirable—good entertainment.

WORLD—"Toward the end of the picture is a particularly bright spot. In a Tech comedy it is the characteristics of "Alice in Wonderland" come through. Though, they are envisioned in the incalculable manner, in the presence of any little creatures, there is a distinguishable breath of the fresh and clean imagination of Lewis Carroll.

Decision on Fox Case Now Up To Judge Frank Coleman

In the case of Fox Theaters, the count was 74. The remaining 28 were represented at the meeting, and the 100 percent of the voting for the Bancairica plan, and 99,338 shares of "A" stock against the 100,000 shares of "B" stock, was slightly under the 15 to 1 mentioned in the Supreme Court new Wednesday night. The final count, according to the latest figures, includes about 50,000 proxies for the Bancairica plan, which appeared questionable. A big batch of proxies were not be voted because they arrived too late.

The inspectors stated that the votes for the 74 and over 74 stockholders was held in favor of Mr. Fox because "examination of the record" was mailed to the list of stockholders as of the date, March 1, 1930, we find that William Fox is the owner." This stock had been voted by two people, one of those being Mr. Fox and the other by John H. Otterson and H. L. Stuart as trustees under the agreement of Dec. 3. The inspectors further stated that the proxies to be executors of Bankers Trust, as attorney for the majority of the "B" shareholders, on the right to and in behalf of the trustee, and the Bancairica, in respect of the "B" shares, but except as mentioned above they had not received any proxies signed by Mr. Fox or any other parties as trustees under the agreement of Dec. 3.

Richard E. Dwight, counsel for the trustees of Dec. 3, entered protest against the decision, as he had no present right to do so, and the trustees (Otterson and Stuart) had the right to do so. He protested that Otterson and Stuart had not voted this of the proxies in behalf of the trustees in order to refuse a grants in excess of the proxies. He also added that Judge Levy merely had ruled on the injunction and did not have jurisdiction over the legal aspects involved to any which was actually qualified to vote the stock of either party.

Martin Conboy, representing an independent block of stockholders of the Fox Theaters, contended that the meeting could be adjourned only by the action of "B" shareholders. He then raised the point about the four directors have been elected under the agreement.

The meeting of Fox Theaters, at 15:15, p.m. was postponed a second time a few minutes. During misunderstanding, part of the Stuart-Otterson group, were under the impression that the decision was in favor of management and that the scene after everything was over, F. O. Conboy, found the management of the directors held a closed meeting, and it and was the understanding. The directors have not to be immediately transmited to Judge Frank J. Coleman, who in turn is expected to call another hearing, either today or the one which can arrange it, on the receivership application, which the Judge said he would dismiss upon proof that a receivership plan has been made. Fox directors were approved by the stockholders.

Halsey, Stuart’s Statement

Although the Stuart-Otterson side did not make known any development yesterday that may produce a different course of the Bancairica plan from being put into effect, the directors were able to hold that some difficulties were bound to result. Counsel Conboy had stated that the decision of Fox Theaters plan was made valid, the Supreme Court has been clarified by the action taken at the stockholders’ meeting and notice of the meeting has been mailed. He also stated that the Bancairica plan, which provided for the possibility of a receivership, be made effective as long as the trust agreement between Fox, Stuart and Otterson was in effect.

"The Supreme Court has held that the trust agreement which was made and was valid," said Halsey, Stuart’s counsel. "They are now advising us to not take any action except the plan approved by the trustees and not to take an action that will not be approved the Bancairica plan, but, on the contrary, have approved the plan submitted by Halsey, Conboy and Co.," he added.

The Fox sales organization of 96 salesmen and four field representacompanies have been involved. It is stated that at no time has there these men, who at all times had confi-

Mr. Grainger leaves tomorrow for the

Bancamerica Going Ahead With Fox Refinancing Plan

A compromise between the opposing Fox bankers looms as the next possible step toward straightening out the affairs of the film and theater corporations. The chances of such a development are looked upon as good because of the efforts being made by Judge Frank I. Coleman to bring the rival parties together in order to avert a receivership.

Judge Coleman, who at present is conferring with lawyers from both sides in an endeavor to clarify some of the involved points prior to calling the next court hearing on the receivership application, has pointed out that unless the two factions get together and arbitrate the differences that have elapsed the legal machinery, it will result in either a long series of costly litigations or an even more costly receivership.

The fact that as far as could be learned up to last night, Halley, Stuart & Co. and John E. Otterson have not yet made any definite outward move to block the refinancing plan approved by the stockholders, is regarded as United Artists. Time 1 hr., 7 mins.

GOOD COMEDY WITH FAN-NY BRICE FUN IN FOR ANOTHER FUNFEST. AIMED AT THE APPETITE OF THE CUPCOKET-FAN.

Fanny Brice is a thorough treat for Fanny Brice worshippers. Her hackneyed plot has been made delectable by the clowning star and able assistance of Harry Tannen as her brother and "section" lawyer. Often the picture borders on the melodramatic, but with the inimitable Fanny to bank on, it very

ALL-TALKER

Universal. Time 1 hr., 5 mins.

RIP-ROARING WESTERN WITH ACTION AND THILLS GALORE. GOOD ENTERTAINMENT TO YOUNG AND OLD ALIKE.

Western of first-rate calibre. This one is loaded with action. It's on the same level with the best of its type, and when it's all over you know you've seen plenty of movement in an hour. The picture is nothing so much as a succession of punches delivered in rapid-fire order. Though "The Mounted Stranger" is noteworthy chiefly for its dash and go, it has many other qualities to give it high rating among western films. Of romance it possesses a good quantity, and of beauty of background it has more than a fair measure. In humor, too, it shows itself unspiring, and to the child audience the story is enjoyable. That it is full of excitement, the plot concerns a deadly feud between a band of dishonest cattle rustlers and the people who desire to see them smother their victims. Hoot Gibson turns in a good performance.

"Only the Brave"

GARY COOPER, MARY BRIEN

(ALL-TALKER)

Paramount. Time 1 hr., 7 mins.

FILM PROGRAMMER OF CIVIL WAR DAYS CHARMINGLY PRODUCED, WITH FIRST- RATE ACTING BY GARY COOPER.

A pleasant picture going back to the Civil War period for its material and thereby offering a welcome return to the days when the camera had gone into the making of most of the talking films. Though as a motion picture plot it is not exactly new, it comes at a time when the public has become tired of stage talkers. The story has to do with a Northern officer who falls in love with a Southern girl while doing duty as a spy. To have his plans succeed he must arrange to have himself arrested and put away by Southern troops. He does manage to have himself caught but is rescued as he faces the military board. The production has captured much of the tender charm of the South. Gary Cooper plays the spy with fine skill and resource.

Time 1 hr., 18 mins.

ENTERTAINING FILM NONE TOO ORIGINAL IN STORY BUT CARRYING A LOT OF POPULAR APPEAL.

The chief shortcoming of this production is its story. We are given a tin pan alley songsmith of the love-‘en-and-lyric-em class. To him exist whole communities of women, just one woman after another. He describes himself aptly when he says: "Women are just inspiration for my songs," but like all such guys in the films he ends up marrying the little girl whom he never fully appreciated, who but stuck around hoping and hoping. The picture has been given a smart production and some Technicolor sequences with settings of startling effectiveness, and it gains considerably from the humor that has been injected into it. To add to this some nice dances staged by Sammy Lee. Charles Kelsey is the songsmith's journalist too plod-

FAIR DRAMA OF THE CONGO HANDICAPPED BY UNORIGINAL STORY AND LACK OF THE NECESSARY REALISM.

Drama of the Congo that just manages to make the grade. Again we are reminded that in the African heat men rot and disintegrate and descend to the level of beasts. This is another of those films inspired by "White Cargo." The present exhibition bears a resemblance to the stage sensation of some seasons ago. A young Englishman is sent to relieve the manager of a trading station which forces his wife to go with him. The horror almost maddens her. His refusal to have her return home throws her into the arms of the man who is about to return to civilization. The husband is killed by the infuriated native after he kills one of their number. The rest is easy to surmise. The film fails to produce the feeling of fright and sweating bodies that the plot suggests. It is aware of Hollywood trying hard to be African. The cast is good.

"The Co-Optimists"

ALL-TALKER

New Era. Time 1 hr., 20 mins.

BRITISH SCREEN REVIEW WITH LITTLE SPARKLE AND PROVIDING OUT MILD ENTERTAINMENT.

This is a little transference to the screen of the famous London stage revue. In its filming it is routine to a degree and devoid of much of the sparkle and spontaneity that entertainment of this sort ought to possess. It is slow in getting started and even then it follows a course throughout only occasionally by a bit of salacious humor or a snatch of effective singing. Never does the thing really come alive. The material is for the most part thin, and only now and again does it reveal flashes of what it might have been, though these moments are worth waiting for. The production has been given a stage setting that is ugly and unimagina-

Fox. Time 1 hr., 15 mins.

GOOD GRADE OF ENTERTAINMENT, PRINCIPALLY BECAUSE OF THE PERFORMANCES OF GARY COOPER AND MARY BRIEN. SUPPORTED BY MISS OWEN.

Warnor Baxter does himself proud in a duality role in this picture. He appears first for a stretch as a big finance (the counterpart of Locot-stein, who disappeared from an air plane) who manages to marry a lovely girl. His ugliness causes her to leave him right after the wedding. He then dives into the gold of the gold mines and eventually emerges a year later under another name and with a handsome remodelled physiognomy performed on him by a fabulous plastic surgeon. Thus arises, he proceeds to win his wife all over again, and succeed. It's a swell plot and Kenneth Hawn has done it fine. Director besides the good acting of Baxter and the attractive support given by Mary Brennan, the picture is worth the price of admission. There are some enjoyable bits of incidental acting.

First Portable Sound Camera Working at Paramount Studio

The newly developed "baby blimp," a sound-proof camera enclosing device, small enough to allow easy transportation, is being used in the East for the first time, at the Paramount Long Island studios, on "Dangerous Nan McGrew."

"The first sound-filming booth," said George Fosley, chief cinematographer at the studio, was a large bellows of leather with an enormous plate-glass front. It was difficult to move and the glass front produced reflections which tended to blur the film. Then the "blimp" was invented, but this provided too little protection for the camera and unwanted microphone sounds crept into the film.

"Now the 'baby blimp' has been developed. It differs from the 'blimp' in that the entire camera, lens and all, is enclosed in a box-like affair, only three feet long by one and one-half feet wide and two and one-half feet deep. The box was made of heavy fiber and other insulating material, with edges protected by strips of durahym. The glass covered aperture, against which the lens was set, was seven inches square. A great advantage of this "baby blimp" is that it can be easily transported and, moreover, it reduces the frequent "re-curtains," to make panoramic or "follow shots," versus where the camera follows the actor as he moves about. These 'follow shots,' highly desirable indoors, are absolutely necessary for the exteriors. Improvements were made on this "baby blimp" before filming began on "Dangerous Nan McGrew," and the result is a picture which permits all the action and ease of transition usually expected in a silent picture, with a new perfection in clear recording of sound and dialogue.

AUDIO CINEMA NOW BUSY ON SERIES OF SHORTS

Audio Cinema, Inc., of Long Island City, have announced that their production schedule for this season will include two different series of comedy shorts. The first Bruce Bannermans' production, built around the adventures of 'Old Bill,' introduced during the War in Bainfather's "The Better Ole," has just been completed, with others to follow.

The "Sheriff Crumpet" series from the pen of William Dudley Fel- ley, is now in production. Both of these series will be in two reel length.

A Terry-Toon cartoon series, also produced by Audio Cinema, will number 26 issues during the present season, the first of which, "Caviar," is now being shown at the Gaiety Theater, N. York City. These will be released by Educational.

Rogin to Edit "Queen High"

Barney Rogin has been assigned to cut and edit Paramount's "Queen High," soon to get under way at the Astoria studios. Rogin has just completed the cutting the French version of "The Big Pond."

New Studio Secretary

Al Wilkie, in charge of the Paramount studio publicity, has engaged Hilda Kay as secretary, succeeding the recently resigned Miss Kay was formerly with the Low theaters in Cleveland.
